Pittsfield, Mass., Oct. 14.—Frank L. Pope, aged 55 years, one of the most prominent citizens of Great Barrington and with a large acquaintance among the electricians of the eastern states, was instantly killed by a shock of 3,000 volts in the cellar of his house last evening. He was manager of the Great Barrington Electric Light company, the principal buildings of which are located at Housatonic, five miles north of here. To facilitate the operations of the plant he had placed in his cellar a large and powerful convertor. When the power was turned on last evening he visited the cellar to adjust the bearings. His family, up stairs, heard a heavy fall, and upon investigation found Mr. Pope dead on the floor. Doctors say death was instantaneous. Mr. Pope was a native of Great Barrington, being born in the house in which he met his death. He leaves a widow, two daughters and a son. For some years he was interested with his brother Ralph in the editorial management of the Electrical Magazine, published in New York. Phillips, Crafton, right knee lacerated and may have to be amputated. The car wrecked was No. 56 on the Carnegie branch of the West End electric line. Just before the city limit is reached there is a sharp curve and hill along the track for about a quarter of a mile. When the car reached this point the brake rod broke and the motorman lost control. The car dashed down the hill until it reached McCartney street, where there is a sharp curve. Here it jumped the track and turned completely over, landing in a ravine alongside the road. The car was broken into splinters, and the three persons killed were horribly mangled. Just before the car jumped the track the conductor yelled to the passengers to all fall down to the bottom of the car. Before they obeyed the order Mrs. Foley dropped her young daughter Katie out of the car window and probably saved the child's life.

The crew of the Vele Mercante were conveyed on a gunboat to Santiago de Cuba, where they will be court-martialed. They profess that resistance was impossible. Editor Pearsall, of the Westfield Standard, and A. Willis Lightbourn, also of Westfield, have been indulging in a wordy combat for the past few weeks through the columns of the Standard over the money question. Both had positive opinions, and neither would concede a point that might prove favorable to the argument of his opponent. The adjectives and exclamation points used to emphasize the editorials of the editor and communications of the correspondent were profuse. The editor proposed that Mr. Lightbourn assume the negative in a public debate with a gentleman to be named in the columns of the Leader on the following:

Resolved, That to confine the dollar of ultimate redemption to 25 8-10 grains of gold 9-10 fine (the present gold standard) is an injustice to the productive industries of our country.

Last week "Brother Lightbourn," as the silver inoculating editor tenderly addresses his opponent who has accused him of using bad English and writing ridiculous statements relative to the money question, agrees to accept the above proposition "without equivocation, hesitation, qualification or vaccillation." Editor Pearsall promptly names E. J. Whitehead as the gentleman to meet him in public debate, and announces that the place and date of the talking exhibition will be announced in a brief time.

Floundered in the Sewer Trench.

While George Wilson was driving Hillier & Co.'s horse through Kensington avenue Saturday night, delivering laundry, he was very much surprised and startled to see his horse sinking in the mud. He jumped out of the wagon and by the aid of a light on the wagon saw that the animal had fallen into a sewer trench that had not been properly filled in. With great difficulty he got the horse out and took him to the stables. The horse is injured so that he cannot be used. Mr. Wilson says there were no lights in the street and he was unable to see the poor condition of the street.

Why Mrs. Boice Asks a High Price.

Mrs. Josephine Boice states that the reason she asks $1,000 damages for the use of her property for the Watchung avenue extension is that besides 12½ feet which will be cut off the lot, the house will have to be moved six feet and the expense of readjusting the plumbing, building new foundations, etc., justifies, she believes, in asking $1,000 for the property. Though the map does not show that the house will have to be moved, the owner claims that measurements have been taken and it will be necessary.

FOREIGN LANGUAGES.

TO LEARN THEM NOT A DIFFICULT TASK IF PROPERLY UNDERTAKEN.

Hints to Beginners—A Criticism of the System Which Makes the Grammar the Main Thing—The Better Way Is to Read and Study the Dictionary.

We do not pretend in this short article to enter into a scientific dissertation on the acquisition of languages, but rather to convey a few simple hints to those who are interested in the subject. There can be no doubt as to the benefit that may be derived from the study of a foreign tongue.

The many advantages of learning a language need scarcely be dwelt upon. One of the most prominent is the largely increased power that is gained over one's own speech. The mental exercise involved in searching the memory for appropriate synonymous words and phrases tends to increase the vocabulary and to give a greater ease and facility of expression in the use of the mother tongue. There is, besides, the pleasure that is inseparable from every intellectual pursuit, and also the practical profit of being able to converse with a foreigner whom we may chance to meet either in the way of business or pleasure.

But all this said still leaves us with the question to answer, How may one best learn a foreign language? In attempting an answer to this question we are not advancing anything that is new. But the method we would commend is one that cannot be too much insisted upon, particularly in the interest of a certain class to whom these remarks are more directly applicable. Many young men find themselves arrived at a period of life when they feel it difficult to attempt any subject of study. There are many demands on their time and the effort to attempt any sort of consecutive, concentrated work seems hopeless. They may have endeavored at various periods in their lives to acquire a knowledge of Latin, French, German, Spanish, or other foreign tongue, but, owing to various circumstances, these attempts have had to be given up.

The effort to make a fresh start is put off from day to day, although the desire to do something in this direction may still be as strong as ever. Why is this so? Simply because in many cases the contemplation of the task brings up before the vision so much of the hard, grinding, uninteresting nature of the schoolboy task. To wade through a grammar of perhaps 150 pages, getting off by heart, if that be possible, all the conjugations, inflections, exceptions and idioms, is the ordinarily accepted notion of what is required to be done in the initiatory process of learning some foreign tongue, after which the pleasing prospect is held out that one may then begin to read something.

Such a system—if system it can be called—is an utterly erroneous one. Little wonder that it repels so many from taking up what is really a most interesting study. To any who contemplate doing so the advice may be given to cast aside all preconceived ideas about the old methods and begin at once to read the language they are going to learn. Thoughts about the grammar and the rules should not be allowed to trouble the mind. Except to those who have had some previous grounding in a language the grammar is sure to prove a stumbling block and to beget naught but despair. A good dictionary and a book of simple tales in the language chosen are all that is necessary in the first instance. With these in hand the motto of the beginner should then be to read, read, read. The printed page, at first new and unfamiliar, will gradually unfold itself as word after word is learned, and when a sentence has been translated the reader will go on with a strange feeling of delight to master more of the contents.

There is no better method of retaining a word in the memory than in having to go to the trouble of looking it up in the dictionary. The word will be certain to stick, more especially if it is found recurring once or twice in the same page. As much reading should be done as time will allow. A page of the dictionary may also be frequently gone over. It soon acquires a wonderful interest. In this way the study is made from the first attractive and agreeable. If the book read be by one of the best writers, its inherent qualities will interest, while the increasing power to interpret correctly the writer's meaning will act as a constant stimulus to go on acquiring more words and phrases and their correct use.

The help of a friend imbued with similar desires and aims will be useful. At the very outset attempts should be made to carry on conversation together in the language. The power to do this, at first halting and awkward, will gradually expand. The name of every object which is round about us in our daily life should be learned and referred to in conversation. The phrases employed to denote particular actions and feelings should be looked up as they recur to the mind. Now and again the conversation that may be heard at the table, in the train, anywhere, may be translated mentally. There are many times when one is alone and there is nothing in particular to occupy the thoughts. Such a moment should be seized to recall words we have come across in our reading, and thus make them the more firmly our own. A book of poems will be of much assistance.

Of course, it must not for a moment be assumed that we counsel the entire neglect of the grammar. That would be a profound mistake. The grammar will by and by be taken up with almost as much interest as the tale itself, for, as the beauties and graces of the language reveal themselves, the learner will not rest content till he has made himself master of all its intricacies. But what we want to insist on is that the grammar in the first instance should be given a secondary place.—Chambers' Journal.

Alboni and Royalty.

Among the many anecdotes told of that famous Italian contralto, Mme. Alboni, is one which, reading like fiction, is nevertheless perfectly true. About 25 years ago at a state concert at Buckingham palace Mme. Alboni was commanded to appear. And appear she did, and sang exquisitely. As she turned to go after her last aria she slipped her hand into her pocket and drew forth a pair of scissors, sharp and new. Bending down she quickly snipped the rope which separated the artists from the audience. "I have done it," she whispered triumphantly to a friend, and escaped as gracefully as might be. Mme. Alboni, I need scarcely add, had republican tendencies.—Lady Mary in Woman at Home.

THE TERRIBLE BLACK FLY.

A Pest of the Forests and a Foe to Camping Parties.

The black fly of the American wilderness is smaller than the mosquito, yet when a brace of black flies are about the mosquito isn't "in it."

In its diet the black fly is not fastidious. It lunches where it lands, without formality or by your leave. When it departs, the tortured flesh rises in bumps calculated to destroy the reason of the most level headed phrenologist. The center of the swelling is marked by a minute point, which, if investigated closely, proves to be a chunk of cuticle cut bodily from the victim. The swelling lasts a day, always. Sometimes it stays a week, and with its departure goes the salvation of the victim. The aftermath of the black fly bite is an angry red bump like unto the rash of the measles. Sometimes it is situated in the middle of a camper's nose.

The black fly loafs about all the great forests of northeast America. But it has no home; it is always abroad. Like the vulture, it soars in the crystal atmosphere looking for whom it may devour. But unlike the carrion bird, it unfortunately does not wait for the death of its prey. It prefers it alive. A city man once asked an Adirondack guide what the people in the woods had to keep themselves occupied when there were no city folks about.

"Oh, well," answered the guide, "some of us die sometimes, and we fight each other and some of us gets shot, maybe, and then"—brightening up—"we has the black flies. They keep us busy."

And so they do. They come on snowshoes and go away on skates, and while they sneak about the woods, campers and guides and forest folk spend the days fighting them off, and at night pour them out of their shoes and pockets and give the poor mosquitoes a chance to keep from starving.

There are three ways of obtaining intermittent peace from the assaults of the black fly, one by sitting in the stifling, blinding fumes of punk wood smudge, the second by painting your face with tar oil, the third by keeping away from the woods. The last is really the only successful method, for where there are Adirondacks there are black flies.—New York World.

SUPPE AN EPICURE.

The Composer Found Amusement In Planning Dainty Viands.

It appears that the late Franz von Suppe was, like Rossini, a great epicure. He even wrote a cookbook. Being of Italian descent, he always showed a preference for the cuisine of Italy. He knew all the places in Vienna where good Italian wines were to be had, and it is asserted that the motives for his trips to the Italian cities, as far as Naples, a few years ago, were gastronomic, scenic and artistic in about equal proportions. He had not seen Italy for half a century, and was surprised to find his "Fatinitza" and "Boccaccio" so popular there. These two operettas brought him a handsome fortune, whereas his most famous orchestral piece, the overture to "Poet and Peasant" (which has been arranged for 59 different combinations of instruments), was sold by him for 20 florins (about $8). For his song, "O du Mein Oesterreich," on the other hand, he received 40,000 florins.

He always enjoyed excellent health, and was a great worker till a few years ago, when his eyesight failed and the loss of his only son prostrated him. He knew almost all the great musicians of his time, and in his villa at Gars the rooms are adorned with portraits of Rossini, Meyerbeer, Lortzing, Wagner and others with autograph dedications. His conviviality is illustrated by an incident which he often related. After the first performance of Lortzing's "Waffenschmied" in Vienna, he went with the composer to a tavern to celebrate the event. They "celebrated" 20 continuous hours, till Lortzing suddenly remembered that he must go to conduct the second performance. He was just sober enough to know that he was not sober enough to do it, so Suppe, who could stand more, volunteered to take his place. But the performance came to grief all the same.—New York Post.

A Southerner's Bravery.

"During the civil war there was not a more rabid secessionist or a more popular man in California than Charlie Fairfax, Virginian, and direct descendant of Lord Fairfax," said City Attorney Creswell. "He was a man of such undoubted courage, such scrupulous honesty and such distinguished courtesy that his violent prejudices against the north were forgiven before they were expressed, and his open declarations of disloyalty forgotten as soon as spoken.

"While clerk of the supreme court in Sacramento he engaged in an altercation with a man named Whitcomb Lee. Without warning Lee drew a sword cane and made a lunge at Fairfax. The keen blade penetrated his abdomen a couple of inches before he could seize it. Fairfax held the blade with his left hand while he whipped out his revolver with his right, and with the sword still in the wound he leveled his pistol at Lee's head and said in the coolest tone:

"'Draw that sword and put it up. I would kill you, but no man shall ever say that Charlie Fairfax made a woman a widow and children fatherless.'"—San Francisco Post.

The Little Dressmaker.

Fashionable women are very fond of having a mysterious "little dressmaker" of their own, who produces successful toilets, at what they are pleased to consider a very small cost.

"What a lovely frock! Where did you get it?" This note of admiration often elicits the reply:

"Oh, a little dressmaker I discovered lately made it for me," and the fair possessor feels quite a sense of creation in her treasure trove. A woman, too, while shopping in Paris, often finds more real pleasure in the "petites costumes" which she invents with the aid of a clever although obscure little couturiere whom she has "found," than in her most elaborate and costly confections from the great houses, especially if she is successful in bringing her favorite to the fore and making her famous in the beau monde.

How Floridians Live In Summer.

The question is often asked, "How do people manage to live in Florida during the summer?" That they do live, and live comfortably, is evident. Few Floridians work very hard during the hot summer months, for food costs very little. The lakes and rivers are alive with fish, the ground is full of sweet potatoes, corn that will yield 40 bushels to the acre is ripening in the fields, watermelons can be bought for 5 cents each, tomatoes are given away in many places, fruits are plentiful, Florida beef is cheap and nourishing, and many other things can be had for almost nothing.—Jacksonville (Fla.) Citizen.

DRIVES IN Dress Goods

Our Dress Goods Department has never been stocked with a more complete line of "Up-to-Date" Novelties than at at the present time. Our lines of Serges, Cashmeres, Crepons, Silk Warp Henriettas and Silks, are unapproachable in quality and price, and are the envy of all our "would be competitors.

At 47c—High-class novelties in worsted goods, 38 inches wide, 40 different shade effects; were 63c a yard.
At 45c—Fine Scotch Cashmere plaids, all the newest and latest designs; were 59c a yd.
At 49c—A beautiful line of Crepon cloth, in brown, green, blue and black, were 65c a yard.
At 75c—An all-wool black serge, 52 in. wide, a genuine beauty; must be seen to be judged rightly; were 92c a yard.
At 45c—An all-wool black serge, 45 in. wide; very reasonable at 55c a yd.
At 39c—All-wool serges in blue and black, the regular 50c quality; further comment unnecessary.
At 50c—A very pretty line of all-wool figured dress goods, with changeable effects; were 59c a yard.
At 15c—38-inch worsted dress goods in all leading shades; can you match this elsewhere?
Talk about silks, why we are right in it, as far as prices and style goes.
At 75c—Fancy plaid silks, suitable for waists or fronts; the very latest combinations; were 90c.
At 3 c—An immense line of plain silks an entire new importation; would be considered cheap at 50c a yd.

Millinery Goods.

Our opening in this department has greatly exceeded our fondest hopes. We wish to convey to our patrons in general the assurance that anything needed by them in this line, such as Sailors, Alpines, Tam O'Shanties, Toques, ribbons, and in fact, everything and anything pertaining to this line, will be sold at prices which cannot be approached by any other millinery house in this city.

CHAPTER I.

Dallett was at the tiller, but his post was an easy one, as the M. S. with her main sheet eased off, was barely making steerage way. The cabin hatch had been pushed back and the awning cast its shadow over the cockpit, where a merry party was comfortably disposed while listening to one of Burnbee's remarkable yarns.

"Do you believe it?" Miss Marcey asked me in a whisper.

"Why, as to that," I replied, "I have heard a good part of it before. It is an article of faith with all the people of the coast within fifteen miles of Cairnstorme island."

"Be quiet," admonished the chaperone. "What are you people whispering about?"

"Did the bell really ring, Mr. Dallett?" questioned Bessie Germond.

"Yes," said Burnbee, "ask Dallett. He comes from that part of the country, too."

Thus appealed to, Dallett patted the tiller for a moment and hesitated. At length he said: "Yes, it is true; at least about the bell. I have heard the Cairnstorme bell a dozen times, but as for the rest of it, what became of the woman and all that, it is only popular report. I do not pretend to say whether it is so or not."

"O, see here," objected Fred Freyer, "you are getting this story mixed. Let Burnbee tell it his own way. I want to hear what became of the woman." Miss Marcey looked at me and laughed. Burnbee went on.

"When Cairnstorme brought his wife down there she was the talk of every one for awhile. I have heard my uncle Ochiltree say that she was the handsomest woman that ever left the Old Dominion, and he knew most of those that remained, in his day. Cairnstorme met her first in Baltimore, I think, and took her away from the most fashionable set there to bury her on that forsaken island. What? O, I don't mean it was barren or anything of that kind, or that there were not all the comforts that wealth can buy. Cairnstorme was an odd fellow, but he was supposed to be immensely wealthy, and his big house was as finely adorned, outside and in, as any mansion in the south. He had servants without end and gardens and conservatories and all that sort of thing. The old place was filled with books and pictures and guitars and bric-a-brac and things lying around just as he left it when I was in there last.

"Lonely? Well, I don't suppose it was lonely just at first; because there were always parties coming over from the mainland. Lots of company, always a house full. They say that when the wind set right you could hear music from there all day and all night coming over the water like—like—well, I am no good at similes and we will have to let it go at that. Any way, there was a good deal of entertaining, and by all accounts they must have had a jolly time. Why, Cairnstorme's name at that time got to be a synonym for hospitality. I reckon there was not a governor or a general or a representative of one of the old colonial families that did not know the taste of Cairnstorme's Madeira, nor one of their daughters (nor many of their wives) that had not enjoyed a flirtation on one of those verandas. Mrs. Cairnstorme was said to be that delightful but rare creature, a perfect hostess.

"What did you say her maiden name was?" asked some one.

"I did not say—but it was—there, I had it on the tip of my tongue. O, yes, Burnette, Florence Burnette."

Miss Marcey gasped a little as though she had been douched with spray. I looked at her and saw that she was quite pale.

"What is the matter?" I asked in an undertone. But she motioned me with her hand to be silent and Burnbee went on with his story.

"The whole thing—gaiety, visitors, music, lights, entertainments—all stopped suddenly one day and the Cairnstorme mansion was shut up. Some of the servants were taken down to Charleston and others lived in a scared sort of way in the quarters. It was given out that Cairnstorme and his wife had gone abroad.

"After awhile he came back. No one knew exactly when he came, but one day he appeared, looking quite ill and old, but dressed with the same scrupulous care he had always shown. He was alone. What had become of his wife nobody knew and nobody dared to ask. The story was that she had died and was buried in Florence, and I do not suppose her family ever questioned it, but the neighborhood either then or afterwards began to harbor a suspicion that she had never left the island. However, no one had a chance to find out anything, as visitors were no longer encouraged. The place got a bad reputation. People said it was haunted. Even the niggers were regarded with distrust and fear by the black people on shore and every once in a while one of them would run away. It was a desolate spot. I have gone down there for ricebirds when I was a youngster, and never have I seen greater desolation. The cotton had run wild and was tangled with vines and weeds, blackberry vines were running over everything and the rice crushed down in the bottom where the half starved cattle had wallowed in it. The live oaks were ragged and the gray moss had about killed off the cypresses. Nightshade and poison ivy literally covered the place where the garden had been and the broken jalousies on the veranda flapped with the wind."

"There were some tales about visitors from the water side," interposed Dallett.

"Yes. That was where the bell came in. The story went that Cairnstorme had got in with a gang of freebooters or pirates and the bell was a signal."

"Do tell us about the bell," lisped Miss Love.

"Well, it's just this. The bell rings all by itself when a storm is coming up and people in the channel in their boats can hear it and always get under shelter. It tolls like a funeral bell. It used to toll when Cairnstorme was alive and then people said he was ringing as a signal to some of his buccaneer associates; but then after his death, when no one was living on the island at all, it kept on ringing just the same. Then they said that his ghost rang it."

"Decidedly grewsome. But what sort of a bell is it?"

"Oh, that is the strange part of it. There isn't any bell. Different parties have hunted the island over and have not found a trace of a bell anywhere. When you hear it tolling you would swear that some one was being buried, but it has never been located. One man, who was stormbound there, was almost frightened out of his wits by it. He got away as far as he could from the house and the shadow of the trees, where he could breathe, he said, down by the barren rocks on the shore, and according to his story the bell followed him and tolled in the air right over his head."

"There is a belief," interrupted Dallett, "that when that bell is heard by the people on a vessel they are sure to be wrecked. It is like seeing the Flying Dutchman."

"That is pleasant," I said. "I should follow a classic precedent and stop up my ears when passing the island."

"I suppose it amuses Cairnstorme," continued Burnbee.

"—Amuses Cairnstorme. Why what are you thinking of? Cairnstorme has been dead for a generation."

"Yes, but he has an unpleasant habit of hanging around still, if the colored people are to be believed."

"O, nonsense!"

"Perhaps it is, but they will not tell you so. Call Tom, he was raised there. Tom!"

Our negro steward came aft in response to the summons and saluted the company.

"Cocktail, Mass Burnbee?"

"Well, that is not a bad idea of yours, Tom, but it isn't what I called you for. Did you ever see Cairnstorme's ghost?"

"O now Mass Burnbee you es' askin' that to make spo'te of de ole man. Shucks! I mos' fo'got dat 'sperience sense I come 'way f'um de cos', an' dat's some yeahs now."

"But we want to hear about it. What were you doing on the island?"

"Now Mass Burnbee, you's poken fun lak you allus does. I ain' do nutten dat 'cep' jest' 'splore 'roun an' projec' on de granger of de ole time." Tom twisted his cap in his hands and looked deprecatingly at his questioner.

"I know jes' w'at you goin' to dissinuate, but 'tain' so, sah. I wa'nt thinkin' of stealin' nothin', on'y jes' splorin' 'roun, an' I get ketch when cum nightfall cause I done fas'n my boat po'ly an' de tide drif her away. Fus thing I know it bin growin' dark an den I see light troo de tree, like a lightnin' bug on'y mo' stiddier. I was that skeered I like to froze, but somethin' er another kep a pushin an a pushin me. An' I yere it a hintin' an' a hintin' to me, lak it say: 'Tom, you is boun' to go see w'at goin on yander at de big house.' I crope up on de pi-azzah an' I look in troo de no'th winder what de blin' ben off an' I see a sight I ain goin' forget twell I cross ober Jerden. Yes as true as I am a standin' yere, Mass Burnbee, I see the ole man Cairnstorme, on'y he ain' a ole man nuther, on'y we es calls him dat, a settin in one dem highback red cheers wid a decantah of wine befor him an' he body sahvent w'at use to wait on him w'en he 'live, stan'in' behine he cheer.

"Mass Cairnstorme he sit an' he sit lak he ben thinkin', but I ain' year an' I ain' see he sayin' nuthin'.

"Torreey he tu'n towds Lige, (dat de name of he body sahvent w'at wait on him) an' he make motion wid he lip and wid he han. I done lis'n but I ain't yere he sayin' a wud. De wool riz up on de top of ma hed when I see dat niggah a movin towards the place wha I done hole de winder sill wid bote hand; fo' I pow'ful weak 'bout dat time. But he go open de do' an' he bow an' he scrape twell presen'ly in come fo' oder gen'mans, dress lak de ole pictures on de wall. I ain see none dem pass me on de po'ch but dere dey is, a bowin' and a scrapin to ole Mass Cairnstorme. I see he sayin sompin to dem but I ain' yere w'at he say, an' dey smile an dey bow an dey set down an he'p deyselves to de wine. Aht'er long time dey go out an' Mass Cairnstorme he go wid dem, all but one and dey go to de big do' in de hall. Den dat one w'at lef he look up to de do', an he take hankchuf w'at some one drop on de flo'—look lak lady handkchuf. An he lahf and put it to he lips and sit lookin at it. W'en he look up Miss Cairnstorme stan' in de do'way and she come in swif an' he done put he ahm roun her an' kiss her. Jes den dey was a gus' o' win' push de do' open and dey jump apart and Mass Cairnstorme he come back smilin'. He smile an' he smile and he bow an' he mak lak he ain' nuvver seen no man w'at he t'ink so much of lak he do dat young gen'lman. Bye bime by Miss Cairnstorme she go out an' say good night—do I ain yere her say it out loud—and den de two men was sit alone. Ahfter dat Mass Cairnstorme he po out a glass o' wine fo' he fren' and den he go to de press in de po'ner an' get out two swo'd an' he sa sumthin' still smilin' to his fren' an' de odder one jump up to he fees lak he goin have fit. Den he set in he cheer an' put he head on he ahm lak he goin to sleep. But Mass Cairnstorme he bow an' he smile an' he smile an' he hol' de pint of de swo'd towuds de young man. Finally he jes get up quick lak he dos sumtheer w'at happen an' he take de swo' f'um Mass Cairnstorme, an' dey cross, I see dem swo'ds is like lightnin' an' bimeby de young gentleman fall, run through de bress, an Mass Cairnstorme he fol he ahm and he stan' lookin down at him, still smilin', twell presenly he wipe de swo'd w'at he hol an go fling it down in de po'ner of de room lak it bu'n him, an put de light out. I get down on all fo's an' crope off de piazzas and down amongst de washer-woman weed w'at grow by de path. Den I year dat der bell a tollin an' a tollin lak it was fo' a fun'ral."

Tom's tones and features were impressive, if his words lacked grace. I could see that Miss Marcey was shivering a little. All were more or less impressed by the superstitious negro's tale, especially those whose youth had been passed in the Old Dominion, where the creed of the ghost seer has not been entirely outworn.

Dallett broke the spell. "You are as good as the Arabian Nights, Tom."

"Yassah?" smiled Tom.

"But it's nearly time to take an observation and that cocktail idea of yours had a more cheerful tone to it than your story."

Tom's smile broadened to a grin.

"Yassah," and he was gone. A puff of wind shook the awning. Burnbee rose languidly and looked to windward. "I think we may need to take a different kind of an observation, old man, the wind is freshening."

A Former Russian Statesman.

During the first half of Catherine's reign the leading statesman was Count Panin, almost the only one of the empress' advisers who dared to think for himself. He was the most level headed of her statesmen, and yet we read concerning him that his indolence and sloth were beyond expression.

He was voluptuous by temperament and slothful in system, and to the industrious Swedish ambassador, Holker, he once remarked: "My dear baron, it is evident that you are not accustomed to affairs of state if you let them interfere with your dinner." In 1778, our English ambassador, Harris, wrote to the foreign office, "You will not credit me if I tell you that out of the 24 hours Count Panin only gives half an hour to the discharge of his official duties."—Saturday Review.

Chance.

Mathematicians have for a century striven to make a law governing chances, but such illustrations as the following beat them:

The writer was once present at the following trial: A gentleman picked up a lottery list containing the winning numbers, some 3,600 out of 100,000. He invited two others to put up $10 each, write a number and if it came on the list it would take the $30. One man wrote these three successive combinations, 227, 7,261 and 18,418. Each of these groups were found on the list, so he won $90. He put it all into $1 tickets and drew all blanks. Certainly no human prescience nor sagacity could order these things or change them.—Philadelphia Times.

TRAINING CARRIER PIGEONS.

How They Are Taught to Act as Reliable Message Bearers.

De Witt C. Lockwood writes an account of the "Carrier Pigeons of Santa Catalina," describing the rapid mail service established between two places, in St. Nicholas. He says:

It must be understood, however, that in certain pigeons, especially those known as the Belgian variety, the homing instinct is developed in a remarkable degree, and it is the birds' intense love of home and the almost unvarying certainty of their return thither after having been taken some distance away and then released which make them valuable as carriers.

The methods used in training a pigeon for special service are not by any means similar, as many persons seem to think, to those employed in teaching a dog to run after a stick, or a white spotted pony to dance the polka. A carrier's education consists in conveying him away from home and letting him go, when he simply flies back to the loft where he belongs.

This sounds almost as thrilling as the story of the enterprising mouse that first ran up the clock and then ran down again, and of course it conveys no idea of the immense amount of care and patience involved in the rearing and breeding of the birds—the special cultivation of those qualities which produce the best results, and so on.

In training the birds for Catalina three or four were usually placed together in a pasteboard box, perforated with holes about the size of a quarter of a dollar. They were carried to a spot a mile or so from the loft, in a direct line for the coast and Catalina, and released. A few days later the same birds were taken a greater distance away—say three or four miles from home—and liberated. In this manner the several succeeding journeys were gradually lengthened until San Pedro, the seaport of Los Angeles, 22 miles distant, was reached.

Then the pigeons were taken aboard the steamer and set at liberty a few miles out at sea, increasing the distance upon the four occasions that followed, until at last the end of the route was reached and the birds would fly, without fail, across the sea and over the land to their home.

WINE DRINKERS' MAXIMS.

Sayings of Our Elders and a Contribution From Theodore Roosevelt.

Jocose remarks, friendly toasts and cheery greetings rather than profound philosophical truths are to be sought usually among those who continuously find solace in wine drinking. But there is some literature of wine proverbs, so called, in which there is an admixture of wit and sagacity. "A cellar without wine, a home without woman and a purse without money are three deadly plagues," is one of the oldest and best-known of the wine proverbs. "Red wine poisons oysters," is another. "Wine is a turncoat—first a friend, then an enemy," is a third. "Burgundy," it is an old saying, "is the wine of princes, Sillery of nobles, claret of the gentle born and beer of the common people." It seems to be a fair inference that those who have gone to the trouble of compiling in various works the apothegms of wine drinkers have chosen them as a good cultivator chooses the best grapes, with much care—and when the authors of such remarks were not drinking. "Champagne," it is a wine drinker's saying, "is like criticism—nothing more execrable if bad, nothing more excellent if good." "Love," says another, "stole its purple light from the wine cup." Here is another, "The bottle is of the aristocracy, treated like a gentleman." "Drink your enemy's wine. It's as good as your friend's," is an inhospitable but not unphilosophic saying, and, "remember," says another, "olives and wine tell what a man is."

One recent saying of a wine drinker does not find a place in the collected maxims heretofore published, but later it may. Theodore Roosevelt, police commissioner, declared at a dinner a few years ago, "There is not one idea in a keg of beer."—New York Sun.

Rather Polygamous.

Frederick William II of Prussia was first married, in 1765, during the lifetime of his uncle, Frederick the Great, to Princess Elizabeth of Brunswick. From her (see Carlyle's "Life of Frederick the Great," volume 6, page 379) on account of her infidelities, though certainly not greater than his own, he was divorced in 1769. She survived the divorce 71 years, not dying till 1840.

The divorce "was done," Carlyle tells us, "in a beautiful private manner; case tried with strictly closed doors; all the five judges under oath to carry into the grave whatever they came to know about it." Within three months of this divorce Frederick William married Princess Frederica Louisa of Hesse Darmstadt, who continued to be his wife till the end, "his Lichtenau and his second wife, jewel of women," says Carlyle, "nursing him in his last sickness." Carlyle says nothing about a marriage with another wife during the lifetime of the second.—Notes and Queries.

Just give it a passing thought that you can get an antique oak bedroom suit, 8 pieces, for $15, $20, $25 and $30, including a woven wire bed spring and a mixed mattress. No house in the city offers such inducements.

And then to think again that you can get tapestry Brussels carpet for 50, 60, and 70 cents a yard, made and laid with paper, which is a saving of 15c per yard. Where is there a house in the city that will offer such bargains?

And then imagine and wonder how we can afford to give away a moquette rug or parlor table with a parlor suit for $20, $30, $40 or $50.

Some of our competitors say that our ads are too much sameness and that this ad. is old. Well, we will admit it, but as long as it does the business and saves the people money we will continue to run it.

As one by one the city fathers entered the council chamber last evening, an unaccountable expression of indifference was noticable on each face.

It was an adjourned session and all of the members answered to the roll call except Councilmen Stockton and Bird.

Clerk MacMurray read the minutes of the last meeting, and on Mr. Erickson's motion they were laid over till next meeting for adoption, for the reason that the corporation counsel had failed to present a written report at the last meeting in regard to the purchase of certain portions of property for the sewage beds, and Mr Ginna did not want the minutes to be read as though the sewer committee had recommended the purchase of the property, which was so intimated. The regular order of business was then suspended, and Mr. Dumont brought up the communication presented a week ago by Harvey Fisk's Sons, signifying their desire to cancel their contract with the city to furnish $100 000 at 4 per cent, and at his request the letter was read by the clerk

Mr. Dumont then offered a resolution that the contract be canceled, and the money thus far borrowed be returned at the same rate of interest, thirty days after the adoption of the resolution.

The resolution was adopted. Another resolution by the same councilman was adopted, that notice be printed in the city papers, the Financial Chronicle, New York Tribune, and Evening Post, advertising for bids for the loan of $100,000 to the city, the same to be received Monday evening, October 28th. The notice read almost the same as the one upon which the money was secured from Harvey Fisk's Sons. Mr. Dumont also presented extracts from the state law on the subject, showing the authority upon which the transfer is done.

Mr. Fisk's request that he be excused from voting on the above resolutions was granted.

A motion was made by Mr. Fisk that 100 extra copies of the notices be printed and sent by mail to the principal bond houses in New York and the savings banks in New Jersey. The motion was adopted.

Mr. Dumont moved that the notice be printed twice in the Financial Chronicle and three times a week for two weeks in the New York Tribune and Evening Post. The motion prevailed.

Mr. Erickson made a motion, which was carried, that when Council adjourn it be to meet Monday evening, October 28th, when the bids for loaning $100,000 would be received.

On Mr. Fisk's motion the petition from E. C. Mulford for crosswalks at South avenue and Berckman street and Richmond street was granted.

Mr. Fisk stated that the steam roller had been purchased for $2,890, and Mr. Erickson reported that the chemical engine had been purchased for $1,800, $60 having been thrown off for cash. He also said that it would be delivered within ninety days.

The Plainfield Medical Association in a communication asked the Council to adopt some improved method for collecting garbage. The substance of the communication was exclusively reported in The Daily Press when the association held their last meeting. President See referred the matter to the sewer committee, but the latter thought that it belonged to the Board of Health. Mr. Fisk stated that a special committee was appointed some time ago to look after the matter and he recommended that it be referred to them, which was done. The committee consists of Councilmen Fisk, Ginna and Bird.

Mayor Gilbert appointed Joseph Swick, H. W. Fraleigh and C.E. Harris special policemen, and after the Council confirmed the nominations it adjourned.

THE PANTRY REPLENISHED.

Odd Ladies Have a Novel, but Practical, Sort of an Affair.

A novel entertainment was given by Mizpah Lodge, No. 1, U. O. of I. O. L., in Red Men's hall last evening. It was called a "China Sociable." Every woman was expected to bring a china plate or cup, while the men were assessed fifteen cents each to pay for the music. This plan was adopted in order to secure dishes which they need. As a result they are now in possession of a large collection of china.

There was a large crowd present and the affair was a great success. Dancing was continued till 'twelve o'clock, when the jolly crowd left reluctantly for their homes. Those who arranged the affair were Mrs. Snyder, Mrs. Weigman, Mrs. Terry, Mrs. Demarest. During the evening coffee and cake was served in abundance. Music was furnished by Frazee.

A THRIVING BUSINESS.

Edsall's Commercial Palace Making Additions to Stock.

Edsall's Commercial Palace is enjoying a thriving business just now with a flattering prospect of a genuine "boom" as soon as colder weather sets in. Mr. Edsall says that his house has never before offered such remarkable inducements as now. Goods of all kinds were never so cheap as at present, and his buyers in the different departments have bought direct from the manufacturer and importer the choicest and most desirable goods, which enables him to compete successfully with the large stores in New York or Newark. The preparation for the fall, winter and holiday trade is immense. A truckload of dolls and toys arrived today, and will soon be exposed for sale in a special department, which is being fitted up in the big basement, about one hundred feet long by twenty wide.

Another Convention Coming.

Nothing but routine business was transacted at the meeting of the Grocers' Association last evening except to decide to hold a special meeting Monday evening to make arrangements for the semi-annual State convention of the Grocers' Association which is to be held in Plainfield some time during January.

A Great Lecturer.

The London correspondent of the Paris edition of the New York Herald cabled to his paper, No American ever created so favorable an impression in London in so short a time." He (Capt. Jack Crawford) will give his wonderful entertainment in the Y. M. C. A. Hall this evening.

Struck On Her Head.

The little daughter of James Carty, of West Front street, fell the full length of the front stairs this morning, striking on her head. It was feared that her brain had been affected, but she appears to be all right.

"Many of the citizens of Rainsville, Indiana, are never without a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house," says Jacob Brown, the leading merchant of the place. This Remedy has proven of so much value for colds and croup in children that few mothers who know its worth are willing to be without it. For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, corner of Park and North avenues.

HACKENSACKED PLAINFIELD.

HOLD-UPS, HEN ROOSTS ROBBED AND HOUSES ENTERED GALORE.

A Gang of Petty Depredators Are Evidently Working in This Vicinity—Lawyer Runyon's Experience With a Chicken.

Plainfield got in the the neck last week, and so did one of Harry C. Runyon's chickens when a band of depredators tried highway robbery, chicken stealing, and tire-cutting in their efforts to enjoy life.

John Wierenga, of Randolph road, was the first to encounter them last Tuesday evening. He was just crossing the Park Avenue bridge over Cedar brook when a man walked up to him and inquired the time.

"I haven't got the time" said Wierenga.

"What's the time?" repeated the man in a harsh tone. "I must know what time it is as I ve got an engagement to meet a man."

"I tell you I haven't got the time" expostulated Wierenga.

"Then you've got some money" said the stranger, as he grasped him by the shoulders Although the stranger didn't know, John Wierenga has a grip and he used it to good effect on the highway robber's wrist and then John got out of the neighborhood as fast as possible.

One evening last week, Lawyer Harry C. Runyon, of Arlington avenue, heard a noise in his barn and chicken house and went out to investigate. He had been troubled by stray dogs and supposed that they were the invaders and went forth prepared to issue a writ of attachment, if necessary. He heard a man slide over the fence and found a chicken in the barn, whose neck had been wrung. Mr. Runyon is waiting for another visit.

The residents in the neighborhood of Leland avenue were the next to hear from the gang One night C. R. Wright, of Leland avenue, missed a single set of harness which had been left in the stable, and John Richardson, his next door neighbor, found the tires to his safety all cut to pieces.

It is supposed that there is a party of tramps, located just outside the city limits, that have been troubling the residents on the outskirts of the city so much.

THE GARBAGE COMMITTEE.

Discussion as to Its Members and Then Laughs Follow.

An amusing incident was enjoyed by members of the City Council last evening when an attempt was made to place the communication from the Plainfield Medical Association, in regard to the garbage question, in the proper channel.

Mr. Ginna thought the matter should be left with the Board of Health, while President See thought it was the duty of the sewer committee to look after it. No one seemed desirous of taking charge of it. But Mr. Fisk came to the rescue by saying that a special committee had been appointed for that purpose, and then Mr. Ginna remarked that Mr. Erickson was on the committee, but it was the first Mr. Erickson had heard of it and he thought that there was a big mistake somewhere so he had the City Clerk look the matter up. He found that instead of Mr. Erickson being on the committee it was Mr. Ginna, and then the members had a good laugh at Mr. Ginna's expense.

Will Speak in Jersey City.

James E. Martine will speak at Jersey city Thursday night on his way back from addressing the Paterson Democrats in the afternoon.

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family has need of it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once and you will never regret it. For sale by Reynold's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

FROM A FAMILY OF PUGILISTS.

PETER JACKSON, THE GREAT, HAS A COUNTERPART IN THIS CITY.

A Colored Acquaintance Called Olmstead Jackson Sundry Names, and He Promptly Divested Himself of Apparel and Fought.

Two colored men who are employed by prominent West Seventh street residents had a lively little scrap last Friday and this morning the aggressor, Olmstead Jackson, appeared before Judge Coddington at his office in the Babcock building. His story was that while passing by the corner of Seventh and Liberty streets Henry Carter, who works in one of the neighboring houses, called him insulting names. Now Jackson is not a little man, but evidently comes from the same family as the great pugilist of the same name, judging from the appearance of the other man's face. Jackson took off his coat, hat, collar and necktie and went for the other darkey According to his own story the reception was not very pleasant and his opponent whacked him over the head with a stick.

"Where is the mark on your head where you were struck with the stick," asked Sergeant Kiely. The negro hummed and hawed and scratched his head as if to find the dent.

"It's on the stick probably," remarked the Judge.

The stories of the two colored men were so conflicting that it was impossible to learn very much about the quarrel except from those who viewed it at a distance.

The Judge finally decided that Jackson was in the wrong and gave him his choice of paying $15 to the city or visiting Elizabeth for sixty days. Jackson did not care to go visiting so he paid his fine.

The other prisoner who came before the Judge was Harry Honan, one of sewer contractors. He paid off a gang of Italians at the corner of Front street and Park avenue Saturday evening and the men, in their hurry to secure their ducats, took up all the sidewalk. Honan was charged with obstructing the sidewalk, but the Judge decided that he was not guilty and discharged him.

REHEARSING FOR THE KIRMESS.

The First Rehearsal Proves Successful Although All Are Not Present.

The first rehearsal for the Kirmess took place in the Plainfield Bicycle Club house yesterday afternoon and continued all through the afternoon and in the evening up to almost midnight. Miss Stewart was in charge and instructed the young people in the mysteries of the different dances. Yesterday afternoon rehearsals were held in the May Dance and the Hornpipe, while those in the evening were the German Harvest Dance, the Spanish, and the Pardon of Brittany. The principles of the dances were soon learned and, from the progress made last evening, the Kirmess will be a great success as far as the dances are concerned. The exact personnel of the different dances has not been decided as a number of those who are to take part were not present last evening. The rehearsals will be continued this afternoon and evening.

A Celebrated Piano.

Vanderbeek & Sattels have added to their line of pianos the celebrated Blasius piano. This instrument is made in Philadelphia. Musicians are cordially invited to visit the warerooms of Vanderbeek & Sattels and examine these pianos. When we say that they are used in twenty of the largest public institutions in Philadelphia it must be evident that they possess rare merit. Edison, in selecting a piano for his experiments with the phonograph, selected the Blasius as being the most perfect in tone of any piano to be found. For catalogues, prices, etc., call on Vanderbeek & Sattels, 221 Park avenue.

THE POOR BOY'S CHANCE GOOD

DR. COLEMAN SAYS POVERTY IS NO BARRIER TO SUCCESS.

Opening of the Educational Department of the Y. M. C. A.—Preparations for an Active Season of Work in All Studies.

The educational department of the Y. M. C. A. opened last evening and if the year's work is as successful as the opening, it will be a red letter year in the history of the society. The hall in the Y. M. C. A. building was partially filled with a crowd of interested listeners. Stephen Cahoone, chairman of this department, presided.

After an opening prayer by President W. D. Murray, Mrs. and Miss Thorn were introduced, and rendered in a most pleasing manner a mandolin and guitar duet. It was heartily applauded, and, after responding to an encore, Stephen Cahoone made a few opening remarks on the work that had been done in past years, and the work that had been planned for this year. M. H. Evans then gave one of his delightful whistling solos, Miss Mabel Matson acting as accompanist. That thrilling recitation, "Asleep at the Switch," was next given by Miss Thorn in a way that brought tears to the eyes of many of the audience.

Then the speaker of the evening, Henry Coleman, president of the Coleman Business College, of Newark, was introduced. He made a very interesting address speaking more particularly on perseverance and energy.

"The progress of this world," he said, "is due to the energy of a few. Don't let failure discourage you, but let it excite you to greater efforts. The poor boy has an equal chance with the rich one. There is always a chance for an industrious boy. The trouble with too many of our young men is that they want too big salaries."

He gave instances of boys who had risen from the ranks and dwelt on perseverance, bringing up as an instance that of Field in laying the Atlantic cable.

At the conclusion of his address Mr. Coleman, who is a kind-faced old man with bald head and grey beard, sang a solo with a voice as clear and powerful as many a younger man. His last selection was "The Sword of Bunker Hill" and then, in response to the loud applause, he sang "There's Nothing as Good as a Hearty Laugh," and his laugh, which came in the chorus, was so contagious that the whole audience roared, too.

After another instrumental duet by Mrs. and Miss Thorn, most of the listeners went upstairs to enroll themselves in the different branches.

The opening sessions of the classes will be held as follows:

Bookkeeping, Wednesday, October 23d; Mechanical Course, Saturday, October 19th; Shorthand, Tuesday, October 22d; German, Friday, October 25th; Arithmetic, Tuesday, October 22d; a class in English Branches for foreign-speaking young men will be started when a sufficient number desire the instruction.

FOUND TWO INDICTMENTS.

Union County Grand Jury Reports—Submit Damage Suit.

The Union County Grand Jury came into court yesterday morning with only a couple of true bills. These are said to be two homicide cases, which the jury had under consideration. The jurors have not by any means finished their labors, as they have many cases yet to dispose of, including the stabbing of John Butch, an Italian, by Nicole Lombardo. This may prove to be a homicide, as the victim is in bad shape.

Judge Van Syckel, in the case of James F. Ahern against the inhabitants of the township of Summit, sustained the demurrer filed August by C. N. Williams, the township attorney. The plaintiff wanted heavy damages for injury to his land by the sewage disposal system of Summit.

MAY BE WOW OJINGS

Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt To Be Reunited.

The Event To Follow Closely the Marriage of Their Daughter. Marlborough Back from the South—He Bought Four Mules, Not for Four-in-Hand, However.

New York, Oct. 15.—Simultaneously with the unexpected arrival of the Duke of Marlborough yesterday from the bluegrass regions of Kentucky, from where he was expected to prolong his trip south several weeks, comes the rumor that there will be another Vanderbilt marriage shortly after Miss Consuelo becomes a duchess, and that this wedding will reunite her divorced parents. This rumor, which finds many believers among the members of the Vanderbilt set who have watched the doings of William K. Vanderbilt and his divorced wife, started in Hempstead last Saturday, when Mrs. Vanderbilt and Miss Consuelo were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Kernochan.

Marlborough Talks.

Marlborough had planned to continue his trip south from Louisville to New Orleans and other southern cities, but for some evidently important reason he left his cousin and party to go on their way, and hastened back to this city, arriving at the Plaza hotel at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He was interviewed later by a reporter: "The bluegrass region of your famous Kentucky is one of the most beautiful and picturesque I ever saw," said he, when asked about his trip. "The horses, too, are equal to the finest we breed on the other side. No, I have decided not to purchase any stud at present, though I like the stock." When asked the reason for his unexpected return he refused to say anything, except that he would not have time to make the contemplated trip and get ready for his wedding at St. Thomas' Church on November 6. "I invested," he continued, "however, in four Kentucky mules, which I shall ship to England and use for farming purposes at Blenheim. No, I shall not drive them four-in-hand."

His Relatives Won't Come.

With regard to his wedding the duke said that he had not selected any of his ushers. The Hon. Ivor Churchill Guest, his cousin, would be his best man. Judging from the last statement made by the duke, Miss Vanderbilt will evidently be disappointed in her wish to have some of her prospective titled female relatives present at her wedding. "Owing to the extremely rough weather prevailing at sea at this time of the year," said he, "I do not think that any of the ladies among my relatives can get here. I hope, however, that they may."

Sullivan. The ex-champion met with a great reception and had a hard time in getting back to his dressing room after his set-to with Paddy Ryan. Sullivan is celebrating his thirty-seventh birthday to-day. He made his usual speech last night, in the course of which he thanked the New York press for its kind treatment of him and said: "I never went to newspaper offices to put up my money, and I fought every one that came along of every nationality. I was twelve years in the ring and was never beaten but once. I wish the present champion every success, but, without beating about the bush and to come straight out, I say right here that I am no friend of his."

SUFFERING FROM DROUGHT.

Water Never Before So Scarce in the Connellsville Region.

Dunbar, Pa., Oct. 15.—The continued drought is having its effect to an alarming degree on the coke works in the Connellsville region. If relief does not come soon a large number of plants will be obliged to close down. At many places the only supply now available is the water pumped from the mines. At Anchor, Atlas and Mahoning works the coke burned up owing to lack of water. The Youghiogheny river and mountain streams have never been so low as at present, and work generally is greatly handicapped by the water famine. Great fear is felt from probable mountain forest fires, common at this season.

DURRANT IS HOPEFUL

Ready Again for the Ordeal of His Trial.

Hobe, He Says, Is Actuated by Revenge Because He at One Time "Whipped Him"—He Has Made No Ante-Mortem Statement and Believes a Suicide Is a Coward.

San Francisco, Oct. 15.—Durrant, when seen this morning, said he was ready for this week's ordeal. He did not think the defense would close to-day as he said it had several witnesses who had not yet testified, though it might be the intention of his attorneys to hold them for rebuttal. He said two of the witnesses the prosecution had for rebuttal had tried to get money out of the defense for information they said they had which would be useful to it. Who these witnesses were he would not say. He expresed himself as hopeful of the outcome.

Hobe Actuated by Revenge.

Durrant stated that Adolph Hobe, the witness who said he saw him at the ferry with a girl he thinks was Minnie Williams, had a grudge against him. While they were going to school Hobe informed on him for an offense and that in retaliation he "whipped Hobe." Durrant said he did not understand the purpose of District Attorney Barnes in regard to the alleged statement in an envelope, addressed to his attorneys to be opened except in the event of his conviction. He said there was nothing to the story and he could not see the purpose of it.

Not the Man To Break Down.

It was suggested that probably District Attorney Barnes would try to show that he had prepared a final ante mortem statement for the benefit of his counsel. This led Durrant to remark that he believed a man who would commit suicide to be a coward. He said there was no danger that he would seek such an escape from his troubles, even should they come to the worst. He said he was not made of that kind of stuff which breaks down. Highly sensational developments are expected to-day.

Unusual Success of Christian Efforts at Fort Plain.

Fort Plain, N. Y., Oct. 15.—The great revival meetings which have been crowding the Opera house and which have been the reason for the closing of all business places, reached their climax last night, when two buildings were needed to accommodate the people. The evangelist, William E. Gell of Doylestown, Pa., came on the stage of the Opera house at 7 o'clock Sunday evening and in a few minutes raised $10,000 for a Young Men's Christian association. Hundreds have been converted and much good is being done. The most prominent men in the community have assisted in the services.

Besides making new flesh and blood, it strengthens all of the vital centres, enabling them to expel existing poisons. It is a germicide, and antidotes the fever microbes. In addition, its beneficial effect on the ulcerated condition of the bowels, so common in this disorder, is marvellous.

EXECUTION OF STOKES

He Was Tried By a Court of One Man.

The English Trader Sentenced To Death By Captain Lothaire, and When His Friend Arose the Next Morning Saw a New Grave Containing Stokes' Remains.

London, Oct. 15.—The Pall Mall Gazette publishes an interview with Dr. Michaux, the Belgian official who is said to have been the only European witness of the trial and execution by hanging of Stokes, the English trader, who was executed by order of Capt. Lothaire, the Belgian commander at Lindi, Congo Free State. Dr. Michaux is quoted as saying that on Jan. 15 of the present year Stokes was brought before an alleged court-martial, Capt. Lothaire composing the entire court, and he and the doctor being the only whites present. The only witnesses present were a few Arabs who had purchased rifles from Stokes. The trial lasted between one and two hours, after which Capt. Lothaire announced that he was sentenced to death and that he would be executed on the following day. Dr. Michaux adds: "All my intercessions were futile. Capt. Lothaire refused to grant even a few days' respite. At 5 o'clock the next morning a servant called me and informed me that Stokes was dead. I rose hurriedly, thinking that Stokes had been stricken with apoplexy or had poisoned himself, and was startled to see a gallows and a new-made grave. Stokes had been executed and buried while I slept. As to the question of his guilt or otherwise, I must be silent."

NO MORE TRUSTING TO LUCK.

Lehigh Mine Bosses Forbidden To Carry Naked Lamps.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 15.—In view of the deplorable explosion at the Dorrance colliery last week, the Lehigh Valley Coal company has issued orders that hereafter no mine boss shall carry a naked lamp at any time or under any circumstances. Many mine bosses, accustomed to danger, become careless and enter workings with naked lights, depending upon the usual streak of luck to hold out. But occasionally such an accident as occurred at the Dorrance happens and lives are hurled into eternity. The Susquehanna Coal company has had a similar order in force at its Nanticoke mines for some time.

HANNIGAN IS SANE.

He Will Be Placed on Trial for the Murder of Mann.

New York, Oct. 15.—The report of the commission in lunacy appointed to examine into the mental condition of David Hannigan, declared that Hannigan is sane and fit to be tried for the killing of Solomon H. Mann, who betrayed and caused the death of Hannigan's sister. This is a victory for Hannigan, as the prosecution was anxious to have his trial postponed on the grounds that he was not in condition to be placed on trial at present. Hannigan's defense will be emotional insanity.

MISDEMEANOR IN OFFICE.

Ex-City Attorney of Pittsburg Morehead Placed Under $9,000 Bail.

Pittsburg, Oct. 15.—At 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon City Controller Gourley appeared before Alderman Black and made three informations against Major W. C. Moreland, ex-city attorney and his assistant, W. H. House, each charging misdemeanor in office, for receiving interest on city money. Three separate charges are made on account of the fact that Mr. House had received interest on city money deposited in three different banks. Warrants were at once made out and placed in the hands of an officer for the arrest of the accused. All papers in the case, together with a copy of the detailed report of council's sub-finance committee, have been placed in the hands of the district attorny.

Released on $9,000 Bail.

Shortly after the informations were made by Controller Gourley, Messrs. Moreland and House appeared at Alderman Black's office, accompanied by their bondsmen. They waived a preliminary hearing and gave bail in the sum of $9,000 each for the December term of court. Both branches of councils had instructed the district attorney to make the informations. The county detective, however, was out of the city and District Attorney Haymaker had Controller Gourley make the informations before the alderman. The action of the finance committee in selecting Clarence Burleigh as city attorney was approved by both branches of councils.

GREAT LABOR EVENT

Coming Convention of the A. F. of L.

To Be Held in New York City, When Plans for the Demonstration Are Already Being Made—Expected To Overtop Other Similar Gatherings—Many Delegates Will Be Present.

New York, Oct. 15.—The convention of the American Federation of Labor, which will be held in this city from Dec. 9 to 23, will be one of the most important events in the labor world this year. There will be present on that occasion delegates representing at least a million workers belonging to the A. F. of L. organization to various parts of the country. A meeting was held yesterday at the office of John B. Lennon, national treasurer of the organization, at No. 1 Lafayette place to make arrangements for a conference to be held in Clarendon hall, on Sunday, Oct. 27, to make preparations for the entertainment of delegates to the convention during their stay in this city.

Raped Strides Forward.

The preliminary conference will issue a call to all the local unions of New York, Brooklyn and New Jersey attached to the American Federation of Labor, asking them to send three delegates each to the Clarendon hall conference, and preparations will be made for a great labor demonstration to be held in this city during the convention, at which prominent delegates from out of town will appear and speak. The American Federation of Labor has been making rapid strides forward in the past year, notwithstanding the bad condition of business. In its gigantic fold are now included many of the largest national organizations of the country. Among these are the Brotherhood of Carpenters, Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers, International Typographical union, United Garment Workers of America, International Cigarmakers' union, American Glass Employes' association, International Brass Workers, Ironmolders, United Mine Workers and many other enormous bodies.

Manner of Representation.

An idea of the importance of interests represented at the convention may be gathered from the fact that although some of these organizations contain over 100,000 members the largest will only be allowed to be represented by four members, although an organization containing 1,000 would get two delegates. Definite arrangements have not yet been made for a hall in which the convention will be held, but Masonic hall has been mentioned as one of the most probable places. There will probably be 500 organizations represented, each by one or more delegates, but it is not possible at present to say what the number will be. Prominent federationists regard Samuel Gompers as almost certain to be elected president.

It is calculated that 2,693,617,061 gallons of water fell on Manhattan Island Sunday, and yet Commissioner Roosevelt maintains that New York is dry on the Sabbath.

"The same old gang" cry of the Republican press and speakers gives evidence that the G. O. P. is sorely perplexed for an issue to wage against the candidacy of Chancellor McGill.

One would think that Editor Runyon of The News, who goes about with a wise look, claiming to have been a graduate of a college, would, at least, know how to spell penny, and especially so when it is considered that he docks his $2.50 a week compositors at a $12 a week rate in order that he may possess more coin. But his ignorance is demonstrated and his hypocrisy evident when he spells it "penney" in an article, written by himself, that is absolutely nauseating in its gushy sentences.

A Dastardly Deed.

The dog is a great pet and Mr. Dryden is very indignant at whoever fired the shot The dog was a gentle one and would not attack anyone without provocation.

Partnership Dissolved.

The partnership between A. Titsworth and John Rickert, in the cigar, confectionery and soda water business on North avenue, has been dissolved, Mr. Titsworth retiring.

THE POWER OF DEVELOPMENT.

Reasons Why Every Man Should Own His Home.

A careful study of economics will show that great power has for centuries lain hidden which is only now being used for the benefit of mankind. Our knowledge of this power has grown by slow degrees, and our study now is by different combinations, more and more to increase that knowledge and to develop that power. The "four elements of the Ancients have one by one been turned from masters into servants, and though always helpful and useful to man, are now daily and hourly more useful. Water, which once only quenched man's thirst, or floated his boats, by combination with laws of gravity and mechanics first turned his wheel to grind his corn or saw his lumber or work his looms. Then came the knowledge of steam, when fire and water working together developed a stronger power for man's use. But if he had relied on wood alone as a fire-producer, the earth would have soon become cleared of forests, and altered conditions of growth would soon have brought us we know not what.

The earth yields her hidden treasure in the shape of coal which we find again needs more air to burn with it to produce the fire which in turn acts upon the water to produce steam, the elements of power. We see then, that the greatest effect is produced by the combination of all possible elements of power. Let us apply the same reasoning to the use of money or values, especially in the form of householding.

Among the first necessities of a young man beginning family life, he recognizes that of shelter. This must be either his own property, or the property of another. If it is the property of another, he must pay that other for its use a share of his wages; and this he must do as long as he uses that other person's property. Ordinary prudence would suggest that he should become the owner of his home, and so be able to apply his whole income to other needs of his family. Now the possibility of doing this to the greatest advantage has been a matter of gradual growth, and the knowledge of the application of different forces. First comes the idea of saving the actual value of the property and making the purchase. But unless there were some changes in a man's cirumstances, this would become a life-long task, his savings being used a little here and a little there for other needs or desires as they should present themselves.

A second idea may now present itself, that of nominal ownership. Only a portion of the purchase money is accumulated and paid, the balance being borrowed on pledge of the property. All too many of us are inclined to halt here, and remain a life tenant instead of a tenant at will; still paying a rental in the shape of interest, and at the same time assuming taxes, repairs, and all other expenses of the property. And there is no special inducement to do otherwise. The real owner, the mortagee, is content with a good income from his investment, and if we speak of reducing our debt is very apt to tell us, "pay all or none."

However, by a combination of money savers, the money may be put aside as before, only at a little profit, till the full value of the property is paid. But ordinarily this accumulation will be fitful; just as one happens to think of it, or just what one has on hand when the interest periods are advertised. As a culmination of helps for the wouldbe house owner, comes one of the greatest blessings of modern times, the building and loan association. We have here the idea of mutual helpfulness; one or more use what many are accumulating, the users themselves helping in the accumulation until finally the point is reached when they have paid into the general fund all that they have taken from it besides having all along paid for its use, their payments in the meantime having earned as interest nearly half the interest paid. Then comes the moment of freedom when the householder is actually a free holder, the property not only in his name, but his in reality. But this is not done without careful thought and persistent self denial, for the method requires regular and systematic saving. And yet the actual saving need be comparatively small. The greater part of the monthly payment is included in what was once the monthly rent. Ordinarily the rent charge increased by one quarter or one-third, will cover the cost of a home through a building and loan association within eleven years from the first payment to the association. Only a few, proportionately are making good use of this combination of forces in the matter of money. It is open to all.

—Paugh - Caugh - Naugh - Sinque Tribe, No. 193, I. O. R. M., will hold their regular meeting tomorrow evening.

WHAT AN EDITORIAL

In the Lafayette, Ind., Daily Call.

The Editor of This Newspaper Tells a Strange Story,

And Vouches for Its Absolute Truth and Accuracy.

Prominence of Paper and Startling Nature of Facts.

Make Article of Vast Interest to the Public.

"Jacob J. Reitemier," says the Lafayette (Ind.) Daily Call, of Jan. 16th, "the well-known compositor in the Call news room, son of one of our oldest and best known German citizens, has a daughter just three years old last Saturday, who almost from her birth has been afflicted with spinal meningitis, and has just experienced a recovery which is little short of miraculous.

"Mr. and Mrs. Reitemeier were three years ago made the proud parents of twin sisters, one of whom died on the 5th of June two years ago, with spinal meningitis. The latter part of the same month her surviving twin sister was attacked with the disease in a most aggravated form. The family had the constant services throughout the whole summer of some of our best physicians, three of whom in turn examined and attended the cases. The child was unable to walk, almost unable to move, and entirely helpless.

"The physicians, one and all, agreed that the case was hopeless, that nothing could be done for this child. Their opinion was that she would never be cured, and probably would soon die. From everything done for her she experienced no benefit, and the physicians, candidly stating that they could do nothing for the cure of the child, were dismissed, and beyond mild domestic treatment, rubbing with alcohol etc., to alleviate immediate symptoms, nothing was done for her, and the sad hearted parents only waited the summons which they felt must soon come for her final release from her afflictions.

"Thus matters went on for about a year, the little one changing, if at all, only for the worse, and steadily but surely going down. One year this month, Mr. Reitemeier informs us, attracted by the advertisement of Dr. Greene's Nervura nerve and blood remedy, in the Call, he and his wife finally concluded to try it, though with but very slender hopes of deriving any benefit. There was a decided improvement in the child's condition with the use of the first bottle, which continued during the second, and before the third bottle was all used the child was able to walk upright, and apparently cured. Thereupon the use of the medicine was discontinued, and has not been resumed.

"In the year which has since elapsed the child has grown to be as fat and healthy and active a little one as any parent need wish to see, and Mr. and Mrs. Reitemeier say they feel beyond a doubt that the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy saved her life. The case is certainly a very remarkable one, and the well-known and reliable character of the parties gives it especial importance and significance."

This is indeed a most wonderful cure, and a great triumph for Dr. Greene's Nervura, and occuring as it did in the Daily Call's official family, the fact will have the greatest weight in influencing all who are sick or ailing to use this truly marvelous restorer of health. This grand remedy should not be classed with ordinary patent medicines, as it is the discovery of a successful physician who has the largest practice in the world among nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th st., New York City. He can be consulted without charge in regard to any case, personally or by letter, by all who use the medicine.

PUNTS AND KICKS.

While the Y. M. C. A. and Leal's School elevens give the older football players plenty to do, the younger element have been given no chance to exhibit their skill, but now a team has been organized from this material and another eleven is preparing to defend the honors of Plainfield. The team was organized by Roy Phillips and averages about 110 to 115 pounds. It goes by the peculiar name of the "Alis" and has for one of its yells the well known siren yell, using the word "Ali." The line-up of the team is as follows: Left end, Albert Finch; left tackle, Lindley Hillman; left guard, Willard Wadsworth; centre, Walter Long; right guard, Donald Stewart; right tackle, J. V. Rittenhouse; right end, Orville Waring; quarter-back, James Taylor; left half-back, Harry Cuming; right half-back, Aaron Thompson; full-back, Roy Phillips. Next Saturday morning the team will play their first regular game at Westfield, and will endeavor to bring the victory to Plainfield. The eleven is now willing to play any team not averaging more than 115 pounds, and Capt. Phillips would like to hear from any other team wishing to arrange a game.

PERHAPS THIS MAY HELP YOU.

"My food does me no good," you say. Then it does you harm. There is no halting place between these extremes. Digested food alone gives health and strength. Undigested food sours or ferments in the stomach and becomes a poison to the whole body. It causes headache, heart palpitation, liver and kidney trouble, distress after eating, pains in the chest and sides, and the tired, languid, heavy feeling we hear so much about. When the digestion goes wrong every function of the body goes wrong. Yes, and the mind, too. Men fail in business and die poor for no other reason than this,—they are weakened, dulled and stupefied by dyspepsia. The lives of a host of women are blighted in the same way. You may be one of this miserable multitude. The writer of these lines was one of your number a short time ago. I tried dozens of things to get cured; just as you have done, no doubt. The thing which at last succeeded with me may succeed with you. It is a discovery of those wise and good people—the Shakers, of Mt. Lebanon, N. Y.—called the Shaker Digestive Cordial. It is not a purgative, which at best gives only transient relief. It is in itself a digested food and also a corrector of the digestive function. You can eat and digest your food while taking this cordial. It helps you at once and soon makes the stomach vigorous and healthy. It is not like any other so-called dyspepsia cures. It is prepared by the Shakers principally from herbs cultivated by them. They do not ask us to spend a dollar for a bottle while we are in the dark as to its virtues. They take that risk themselves. Almost any druggist will sell you a trial bottle for 10c, so you can see whether it is what they say—and adapted to your case. And tsn't even the mere chance of a cure worth that much?

CYCLING COMMENT.

Littell will be paced by Thos. A. Cuming and Will Havens. The record to be tried for is that of the Athletic Association, and should not be confounded with the High School record.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

J. T. MacMURRAY, City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., Oct 8, 1895.

locating the tracks of the extension of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, and regulating the construction and operation of the same, and also concerning the compensation to be paid by said Plainfield Street Railway Company to the City of Plainfield.

The inhabitants of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council do enact as follows:

Sec. 1. That the tracks of the extension of the Plainfield Street Railway Company's railway be and are hereby located in the following streets, roads and alleys of the city of Plainfield:

Route 1. From the present terminus of the road in Watchung ave through Watchung ave to East Fifth street, through East Fifth street to Richmond street, through Richmond street to Putnam avenue, and through Putnam avenue to Woodland avenue, through Woodland avenue to South avenue, through South avenue to the station of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, at Netherwood. Also from Watchung ave., through 4th street to Grant ave.

Route 2. From the present terminus of the road in Front street at Grant avenue to the city line at Dunellen.

And in those portions of said streets, roads and alleys marked out and shown on map filed in the office of the city clerk of said city entitled "Map showing location of tracks, turn-outs and poles for proposed extension of Plainfield Street Railway, dated, Sept. 1895," to which reference is made and the same hereby made a part of this ordinance; and the said company is hereby given the right to construct, maintain and operate its extension to its street railway in said portions of said streets, roads and alleys under and subject to certain restrictions and regulations hereinafter specified or referred to; the same being such restrictions and regulations as the common council hereby deem requisite for the public interests, as well as subject to such further reasonable regulations as may be hereafter enacted by said common council. A detailed plan of construction shall be filed with the City Clerk by said company, and be approved by said Common Council before any work is done under the permission herein granted.

Sec. 2. That the said company shall construct, maintain and operate a single track railway for said extension, to be laid upon the middle line of the street, except on Watchung avenue; between North avenue and East 4th street, No. 2, and signed by John T. Fritts, Vice-President, and shall construct the tracks, switches, turnouts and poles in the manner and at the points and places indicated for the same on said map.

Sec. 3. That said company shall keep in repair to the satisfaction of the Committee on Streets, the paving or other surface materials of the portion of streets, roads and bridges occupied by its tracks, and in addition shall s keep in repair eighteen inches on each side of the portion of said streets, roads and bridges occupied by its tracks. In case of double tracks, or switches or turnouts, the expression "occupied by its tracks" shall be construed to mean all space in the street between the outermost rails. In case the city shall at any time determine to pave or repave any street or section of a street, the said company shall forthwith repave any portion of said street or section of street which may be occupied by the company's tracks and for eighteen inches beyond, with same material and in same manner, and shall do so at the company's expense under the supervis on of the street commissioner. If said company shall at any time fail to comply with any of the requirements of this section, the work or repairs hereinabove specified may be done or made by or under the direction of said committee on streets, and to their satisfaction, and the expense thereof shall on demand be paid by said company to said city; provided that the said committee on streets or a majority of them shall give at least ten days notice in writing of the intention to do such work or make such repair, said notice to be served upon any officer or employe of said company who may be found at their office or depot.

Sec. 4. The said company and its officers, servants, agents or employes shall not, nor shall any or either of them be allowed to shovel, throw or place any snow, ice or slush alongside the shad track or tracks, in any street or streets, in such manner as to obstruct other public travel therein; but, when removing said snow, ice or slush from said track or tracks, the said company or its officers, servants agents or employes shall cause the same to be immediately levelled between said track or tracks and the gutter lines on each side thereof unless the fall of snow shall have been too heavy to make it practicable to level the sam as aforesaid; in which latter case the said company shall pay its pro rata of the expense of the removal of said snow. Upon violation of any of the provisions of this section, there shall be incurred a penalty of ten dollars for every city block on which any such violation shall take place, but said penalty shall not aggregate more than one hundred dollars in any one day; said penalties to be paid to the city by the said company or by any of its said officers, agents or employees so offending for each and every offence.

Sec. 5. That the rights and privileges intended to be given by this ordinance to said company are subject to all limitations provisions, terms and conditions set forth and contained in sections 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 13, 14, 16, 17 and 18 of the ordinance of the city, entitled, "An ordinance locating the tracks of the Plainfield Street Railway Company and regulating the construction and operation of the same and granting permission to said company to use electric motors as the propelling power of its cars", approved April 27, 1891, to the same extent and with the same effect as if said sections were re-enacted in full as a part of this ordinance.

Sec. 6. That the guage of the tracks of said company to be hereafter laid shall be four feet eight and one-half inches, and the other tracks of said company already laid may be made of the same guage. That all the cars of the said company shall be similar to those now in use by it or such as shall be approved by the common council of said city. They shall be lighted by electricity, and properly heated in winter. Said company shall use upon its cars the Climax or other noiseless gearing and equip said cars with proper bells or gongs, and said cars shall be run at a speed of not more than ten miles an hour. No salt shall be used by said company on any part of its tracks.

For violation of any of the conditions of this section there shall be incurred a penalty of ten dollars for each offence and ten dollars additional for every day that such violation shall continue not exceeding one hundred dollars on any one conviction.

Sec. 7. That said company shall on or before the first day of December, 1895, equip each street railway car by it operated or run within the city of Plainfield, with fenders of the most improved pattern, to be selected by a commission of 3 appointed by the Mayor, and so attached to the car as best to protect from injury persons or vehicles using the streets or riding on the said cars; that after said last mentioned date no street railway car, the motive power of which is electricity, shall be operated or run upon any of the streets of said city, unless such car is equipped with fenders as above required, and in case any such car is operated or run contrary hereto the said company and every person or persons who shall either as president, manager, conductor, motorman or otherwise be engaged in so operating or running any such car shall be deemed to have violated this section and on conviction shall forfeit and pay fifty dollars for each day during which such violation shall continue, not exceeding one hundred dollars in any one conviction.

Sec. 8. The said company shall build or construct its extensions in the order specified in Sec. 1 and if the said company shall fail to build or construct the lines mentioned in route one of this ordinance with turnouts and switches in the manner aforesaid, and put the same into complete operation for the transportation of passengers within nine months after the passage of this ordinance, and if the said company shall fail to build or construct the lines mentioned in route two of this ordinance with turnouts and switches in the manner aforesaid, and put the same into complete operation for the transportation of passengers within twelve months after the passage of this ordinance; or shall afterwards fail or neglect to operate the same as aforesaid daily and every day for the space of three consecutive months, all the rights, powers and privileges and every one of them of said company, their successors or assigns, under and by virtue of this supplemental ordinance, shall thereupon cease and determine, and this ordinance shall be null and void so far as the grant of any such right, power and privilege to said company is concerned, and in either of such cases the common council expressly reserve the right to cause the said railroad or any part or parts thereof, so constructed, to be removed from said street or streets, or any of them, and to sell and dispose of the materials thereof by public auction, and, after paying all the expenses of such removal and sale and of repairing the said street or streets, and of restoring the same nearly as possible to its or their original condition, to pay the balance of the proceeds of such sale to the said company, or its successors or assigns, provided, that no notice of such sale shall be required to be given, other than an advertisement, signed by the city clerk, and published in any one or more newspapers printed and published in said city.

The time during which the said company shall be delayed in the prosecution of its work or in the operation of its road or in any section thereof by injunction or other legal proceedings in the courts of New Jersey, or the federal courts in New Jersey, shall not be included within the 9 and 12 months within which the said extensions are to be constructed and put into complete operation.

Sec 9. The said company shall for each and every mile of street occupied by its tracks laid already or that shall hereafter be la d by said Company, whether under the provisions of the ordinance hereinabove referred to, approved April 27, 1891, or the amendment thereof approved May 4, 1892, or under the ordinance entitled "An Ordinance authorizing the Plainfield Street Railway Company to extend the location of its tracks", approved Oct. 4, 1892, or under this ordinance, or under any other ordinance, and also for every mile of street occupied by tracks that may be owned or operated or that may be hereafter owned or operated by said company within the limits of the city of Plainfield, pay or cause to be paid to the collector of taxes of said city for the use of the said city, the following sums, to wit: For the year beginning Jan. 1, 1896, fifty dollars a mile; for the year beginning Jan. 1, 1897, seventy-five dollars a mile; for the year beginning Jan. 1, 1898, seventy-five dollars a mile; for the year beginning Jan 1, 1899, one hundred dollars a mile; for the year beginning Jan. 1, 1900, one hundred dollars a mile; for the year beginning Jan. 1, 1901, one hundred and twenty-five dollars a mile, for each and every mile of track; said payments to be made each and every year on on or before the last day of each year.

For the years succeeding that beginning 1901 the said company shall pay at the same rate as for the year 1901, provided that when the gross receipts in any one year from the entire system within the city of Plainfield and the borough of North Plainfield shall equal or exceed eighty thousand dollars, then for that year and annually thereafter, the said company shall pay annually to said city collector for the use of said city five per cent. of the gross earnings of said company, and said gross earnings shall be construed to include all earnings of said company and full proportion on all earnings on through traffic to be calculated according to the proportion between the entire length of the journey and the number of miles travelled within the limits of the city of Plainfield or the borough of North Plainfield or both as the case may be. That to enable the city to ascertain from time to time the amount of gross earnings of said company the books of the company shall be open to inspection by the finance committee of the common council or such other person or persons as the common council for that purpose shall designate.

The payment provided for in this section shall be in lieu of all license fees for cars, whether provided for in prior ordinances or not.

Sec. 10. That the tracks and cars of said company shall be used for the carrying of passengers only; that no freight shall be carried by said company or over its tracks, and that no luggage other than hand luggage actually carried by passengers shall be carried or allowed upon the cars of said company or any other cars passing over said tracks. Nothing herein contained, however, shall prevent the company from carrying U. S. mail. That cars shall not be run in trains of more than two cars over any of the tracks of said company, and that all cars shall stop upon being signalled by any foot passenger at any street corner past which said tracks are or shall be laid and passengers shall be freely allowed to board said cars or alight therefrom at any of said street corners, and said company shall cause the cars to come to a full stop and sound the gong or bell immediately before turning any curve, on road now constructed or to be constructed. Any violation of any of the provisions of this section by said company or any of its employes shall be subject to a penalty of twenty dollars fine for each and every offence.

Sec. 11. That in case the said company shall lease its tracks or any section of the same, or sell, or assign its franchises, or attempt so to do, said company shall cause to be inserted in any such lease, deed, bill of sale, assignment or other transfer, a stipulation and agreement and condition that the same is made subject to the provisions of this ordinance, and that the lessee, vendee, assignee or other person to whom such lease, conveyance, assignment or transfer may be made or attempted to be made in accepting the same agrees to be bound thereby and to conform thereto, and will in turn insert a clause similar to that required by this section in case of any lease, conveyance, assignment or transfer thereof to be made, so that no persons or corporations shall acquire any rights in the premises except subject to the same terms and conditions as herein provided.

Sec 12. That said company upon the final adoption of this ordinance and before exercising any of the rights and privileges granted hereby, shall as a condition precedent file with the city clerk of the city of Plainfield a contract to be executed by said company and duly approved by the corporation counsel, wherein said company covenant and agree with the inhabitants of the city of Plainfield, to abide by and perform all the matters and things herein, on the part of said company required to be observed, kept and performed; that it will, at any and all times hereafter, fully indemnify and protect the city of Plainfield of and from any and all suits, actions and proceedings that may be brought and maintained, or sought to be brought and maintained, by any person or corporation for, on account of or by reason of, the adoption or maintenance of said company, its successors or assigns, of said electric system aforesaid, or the construction or maintenance of said electric system or anything connected therewith, or any act of omission or commission by said company, its successors or assigns or any of its agents or servants, at any time or times, and shall whenever requested by said city, fully defend any and every such action, suit or proceeding.

Sec. 13. That said company shall also at the same time herein above specified for filing said contract, file a bond to the city in the sum of twenty thousand dollars to be approved as to form by the common council and corporation counsel of said city, conditioned for the full and faithful keeping, observance and performance of the terms and conditions in this ordinance contained, on part of said company to be kept, observed or performed. And in case the conditions or terms upon which said company is granted permission to locate its tracks and maintain and operate its road or any of the terms or conditions of the said contract are violated, the city reserves the right to revoke the permission herein granted, to remove the tracks of the said company and all the constructions made in the streets of the city by said company, its successors or assigns.

Sec. 14. DRIVES. IN DressGoods

Our Dress Goods Department has never been stocked with a more complete line of "Up-to-Date" Novelties than at at the present time. Our lines of Serges, Cashmeres, Crepons, Silk Warp Henriettas and Silks, are unapproachable in quality and price, and are the envy of all our "would be competitors.

At 47c—High-class novelties in worsted goods, 38 inches wide, 40 different shade effects; were 63c a yard.

At 45c—Fine Scotch Cashmere plaids, all the newest and latest designs; were 59c a yd.

At 49c—A beautiful line of Crepon cloth, in brown, green, blue and black, were 65c a yard.

At 75c—An all-wool black serge, 52 in. wide, a genuine beauty; must be seen to be judged rightly; were 92c a yard.

At 45c—An all-wool black serge, 45 in. wide; very reasonable at 55c a yd.

At 39c—All-wool serges in blue and black, the regular 50c quality; further comment unnecessary.

At 50c—A very pretty line of all-wool figured dress goods, with changeable effects; were 59c a yard.

At 15c—38-inch worsted dress goods in all leading shades; can you match this elsewhere?

Talk about silks, why we are right in it, as far as prices and style goes.

At 75c—Fancy plaid silks, suitable for waists or fronts; the very latest combinations; were 90c.

At 39c—An immense line of plain silks an entire new importation; would be considered cheap at 50c a yd.

Millinery Goods.

Our opening in this department has greatly exceeded our fondest hopes. We wish to convey to our patrons in general the assurance that anything needed by them in this line, such as Sailors, Alpines, Tam O'Shanties, Toques, ribbons, and in fact, everything and anything pertaining to this line, will be sold at prices which cannot be approached by any other millinery house in this city.

CHAPTER II.

During the next hour a decided change came over the ocean and sky. The wind veered and was squally. Awnings were down and the hatch closed and the M. S. put about to beat up the coast again, homeward. Another hour, and the appearance of the sky was ominous. We had put a double reef in the mainsail and donned our oilers and maskintoshes, for the spray made a clean sweep from the yacht's bows to the cockpit. The ladies had reluctantly gone below. Dallett, as the last of our fair companions disappeared through the hatch, looked at us in some anxiety. "I wish we had a different sort of a freight, boys. We are going to have some nasty weather and this shift makes a dead beat to windward for fifteen miles; no joke under the circumstances. Some of those girls are going to be sick before we get back."

It was an ignominious retreat. We had planned to reach a certain bay and camp there for a day or two, but the adventure promised to be too perilous. Burnbee beckoned to me and pointed to the western sky. It was the color of copper. Dallett was watching it anxiously. At last he brought her up shaking in the wind and we reefed down close at the word of command, leaving hardly more than the peak, a bit of canvas as big as a table cloth. "We cannot do it," said the helmsman "We must put about again and run for it. The Trawls are only twenty-five miles down and there is a harbor where we can lie."

Going before the wind was so much easier that the ladies ventured out, quite delighted with the idea that the weather had moderated. The yacht no longer pounded and surged, but skimmed under her peak like a petrel and as we did not think it worth while to enlighten them as to our change of course they were entirely satisfied. Only Miss Marcey, who was a better sailor than the others, guessed the true state of the case and she bravely held her own council.

The copper sky changed to bronze and a streak of lightning cleft it. The horizon to windward was a deep black line, that broadened till the white crests showed against it.

It was a tempest when it reached us finally. The M. S. sprang her length like a wild horse under the lash and the jib broke adrift. Our passengers were once more housed below, for we could no longer pretend to keep up a holiday tone and the room aft was needed in working the boat.

When darkness overtook us we were still afloat, for the M. S. was an able craft, but Burnbee and I had been taking trick and trick at the pump for two hours and the weather did not lighten.

Suddenly, in a lull, Dallett said, "Do you hear it?"

We listened. It came faint and fitful, but deep and solemn. The tolling of a bell.

When Burnbee spoke it was with the voice of a man who has heard news of disaster. "That is Cairnstorme bell. I know its sound. It means that in the dark we have overrun our distance and there is no harbor between us and the cape."

We could not see Dallett's face, but we gathered close to hear what he was saying.

"There is only one chance, boys. We must make the lee of Cairnstorme."

"But the reef."

"There is an opening somewhere. I have gone in by daylight in decent weather. We must chance it tonight. It is our only hope. Stand by and be ready if we strike. Better get the girls out and tell them just how the land lays." This was said in short, jerky sentences, for it was not a time to waste many words.

We ran for Cairnstorme island in the dark with what speed we could, but it was like the progress of a bird with a broken wing, and more than one sea came aboard, wetting us all well, before we approached the reef. Fitfully, but louder with each repetition, sounded the ominous bell.

An electric display added variety to the storm and the frequent glare of the lightning increased the terror of the more timid members of the party. As we strained our eyes to make out if possible the contour of the land a strange thing occurred. A zigzag sheet of violet flame swooped to the earth, revealing distant cypresses and live oak trees and a stretch of rocky, barren shore in one vivid panorama. The centre of this supernal fire seemed to focus upon the broad roof of a gray and gloomy dwelling, and almost immediately from that point rose the red glare of a conflagration.

Exclamations of surprise and terror followed the moment of silence during which we realized what had happened. Cairnstorme house had been struck by lightning. It was Dallett who changed the current of our thoughts with a cheery exclamation.

"Nature is working our way, boys. By that torch we will get in safe."

Indeed, it was obvious that nothing more favorable to us in our dilemma could have happened. The great mass of flame that soon lit the sky and reflected on the sombre masses of the foliage, illuminated the sea as well and shone across the crested, turbulent waves on which our little yacht tossed. It was a friendly beacon.

As we neared the shore the booming of the great bell increased during every lull of the tempest. All on board heard it and more than one heart quaked at the sound, for superstition is latent in most human breasts, however well we may conceal the fact from ourselves or our neighbors.

Dallett found the opening of the reef and we stood through into safety, dropping our kedge at last in the quiet water of the inter reef to leeward of the island. The change from the tension of anxiety and the great discomfort of our recent voyage to the present comparative peace and security was so great that we all made light of such small matters as the sea wet clothes we wore and the saline incrustations on our faces and hands, where the spray had dried. We repaired damages with merry hearts and words and Tom crawled out from some impossible hiding place in the "fo'c's'le sah" and began to prepare a meal, seasoning it with many a quaint quip; yet his flow of speech was interrupted and his eye rolled nervously towards the shore with each repeated peal of the heavy bell notes that now seemed to be overhead. Indeed it dashed all our spirits to hear that doleful sound. Miss Marcey, to whom in the excitement of our greatest danger, when we first turned to the shore, I had said a few words of a purely personal nature, was decidedly nervous and stole her hand into mine when no one was looking. I had simply assured her in a brief sentence, there being no time to choose my words, that if we struck she need be under no anxiety for her life, as it was much more precious to me than my own and I would see that no harm came to her. That was all, yet it seemed greatly to allay her anxiety and now it was exceedingly pleasant to me that she should show her reliance upon me as her chosen protector. Really, when I think of it I am inclined to forget that there was any discomfort at all attending our situation. I hardly think that we watched the conflagration of the Cairnstorme house as intently as our companions did, having other thoughts to distract us.

After awhile the flames died down and then we took advantage of Tom's efforts to make our quarters comfortable by turning in for rest, the women in the cabin and the men in the cockpit, where, in spite of the noise of the storm that still raged outside and the sound of the bell that continued to toll, sleep soon came to most of us. Not to all. I lay awake, thinking long thoughts for a long time, and Miss Marcey afterwards confessed to me that her slumbers were fitful.

When morning came the noise of the bell had ceased. The sun shone on the bright water and the glistening foliage of the shore, and only the smoke from the ruined mansion reminded us of the terror of the previous night.

After breakfast we repaired the damage the yacht had suffered and hoisted our mainsail, with peak dropped, to dry. Then we went ashore in our dory to explore the mysterious island.

Most of the party strolled in the direction of the house, but Miss Marcey and I got separated somehow from the others and made our way to the rocky ledge which overlooked the bay and the reef. It was a barren and desolate headland, not difficult of ascent save for the ill-balanced scales of rock that successive storms had thrown upon the shore. At the very summit was one larger than the others that rested insecurely on the irregular foundation of smaller fragments. It must have been ten feet across and was hard and black as flint.

"See," I said to my companion, "here is a curious bit of nature's work. This leaf has been the roof of one of the limestone grottoes of the shore. The waves pounding into it have worn it thin till one mighty one proved too much and burst it as you might strike the cover from a bon bon box. What a terrific force it must have been to cast it here on top of this mass of debris. One of the peculiarities of such rock is that it cuts like chalk almost when it is first uncovered and then hardens in the air like steel."

She walked around the slab studying it. Suddenly, giving a little cry of surprise, she pointed to some marks cut upon its surface. "Here is more than nature's handiwork," she said.

I came to her side and saw there on the rock, rudely engraved, an inscription. It read:

"Beneath this unstable stone lies all that is mortal of Florence, the wife of Robert Cairnstorme."

When Dora looked up at me her eyes were swimming in tears.

"She was very beautiful," she said softly. "Poor thing."

"Why—" I asked in surprise, "You have never seen her. She died long ago."

"I have seen her miniature. My mother was her niece and was said to resemble her greatly."

Dora did not add that the resemblance had descended to the third generation, but when I looked at her I understood why Florence Burnett had been noted for her beauty.

As I leaned upon the edge of the slab a strange thing happened. It tipped upon its insecure base and swung down for a foot or more, striking its edge upon the lower rock, and as it did so we both sprang back in amazement and momentary alarm. The whole mass resounded like a sheet of metal under the blow of a hammer and deep and resonant at our very touch pealed the mysterious Cairnstorme bell.

CHURCH UNITY.

A Paper on That Subject is Read at the Ministers' Association Meeting.

The Ministers' Association is one of the many signs of church unity for which Plainfield is famous, and yesternoon the reverend gentlemen gathered at the home of Rev. C. L. Goodrich on West Seventh street for their regular meeting.

Rev. M. E. Dwight read a very interesting paper on "Church Unity," after which Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, as chairman of the committee on the church census, made his report stating that the census had been completed and what the result was.

Of the families that were visited, some or all the members of thirty-four hundred families regularly attended church, while in only five hundred families there were no church attendants.

After the business was completed the party adjourned to the dining room where a dainty supper was served. Ten of the clergymen were present.

LIFE OF A HIGHWAYMAN.

Some Kentucky Reminiscences of the Notorious James Brothers.

"Where I live in southern Kentucky," said the doctor, "the uncle of the famous outlaws, Frank and Jesse James, lives also on a big farm, and here, when pursuit of them became too fierce, these bandits used to come, while detectives scoured the country and state officers dreamed of the price set on their heads.

"Of course we more than guessed who the gentlemanly looking strangers were who appeared every now and then, and after 'accidents' had happened to some amateur detectives who tried to arrest them we let them come and go undisturbed.

"On one of these visits Jesse James, tired of life that had lost its charms, worn out with being hunted from place to place like a badgered animal, perhaps remorseful for his many crimes, tried to commit suicide by taking an immense dose of morphine.

"I was sent for and held a prisoner in the house for three days. When I arrived, he was almost dead. I tried every antidote for morphine poisoning, but without success, and I finally said to his brother: 'Is there no way to frighten him? Rouse him any way you can.' Frank took Jesse's pistols, unloaded them, buckled the belt around the collapsed form and rushing in the room cried: 'Jesse, we're surrounded! Caught like rats in a trap! Fight for your life!' In an instant the outlaw sprang to his feet, his eyes flashed, and he stood with a pistol cocked in each hand. After awhile he collapsed again, but time after time when he was practically dead we called him back to life with that cry, 'You are caught!'

"Think what fear such as that must be like. The horror of it was so great that he responded to it when dead to every other sensation in this world. Can you imagine what it must be to have that torturing fear of something dogging your footsteps, walking in your shadow, haunting your dreams and waking you up in the dead hours of the night with a cold sweat on your forehead? 'You are caught! Fight for a life red with crime and black with the shadow of the gallows!' What wonder that such a fear went beyond life into death itself?

"And that," said the doctor, "is one of the romantic and delightful experiences of the gay life of the highwayman."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Things She Didn't Know.

"I am going into a stock company, Em'ly," Mr. Rising announced, with pardonable pride.

"Will you like that, John?" Mrs. Rising's question was given with a tone of surprise.

"Well, rather," returned Mr. Rising. "I shall be an officer."

"Oh, John, that's splendid! Will you wear a uniform?" Mrs. Rising asked, with interest.

"No, Em'ly; the officers don't wear uniforms," replied Mr. Rising.

"How did you get to be an officer, John?" Mrs. Rising asked a moment later.

"A majority of the stock elected me," Mr. Rising answered.

"Will we have to live in the country, John?"

"What put that in your head, Em'ly?"

"I'd like to in the summer and thought it might be better on account of the stock."

"That's a curious notion, Em'ly. The stock's all right. A No. 1. No water in the concern. They want me here at headquarters."

"Why, John, I didn't suppose there was any stock without water."

"Precious little in these days, but this ranks first class on the market, and they let me in on the ground floor. Hello, there's the president now! I'm off." And Mr. Rising joined his business associate in the street.

"It beats me," said Mrs. Rising as she went about her household duties. "I don't think John's mind is affected, but if stock can vote and officers not wear uniforms I'd like to know what the world's coming to. I suppose he meant city water would do as well as the country, but men are crack brained on some things. I'm thankful I don't have to worry about business. It's all I can do to look after three meals a day."—Chicago Times-Herald.

In a Bad Plight.

A writer in the Cincinnati Times-Star recalls a story of Elihu B. Washburn while he was minister to France. There was a court dinner given at the palace of the Tuileries one night by the Emperor Napoleon III. It was the custom at these dinners when the empress arose to retire with the ladies for the gentlemen to rise from their seats and step back, so that the ladies should pass down the line between them and the table. By this all could avoid turning their backs upon the empress. Mr. Washburn had very tender feet. During the dinner they had given him a great deal of annoyance, and to ease himself he had slipped off his patent leather pumps. He was absorbed in conversation at the close of the dinner and was caught unawares when the empress made the signal for departure. Minister Washburn was obliged to step back without his pumps. There he stood in his stocking feet, grave, dignified and self possessed in the row of grinning diplomats to his right and left. He betrayed none of the embarrassment he must have felt and was never heard to allude to the incident.

WHAT ABOUT OUR KIDNEYS

Some Facts About Their Pains and Diseases.

The Symptoms of Sick Kidneys and the Diseases That Sick Kidneys Will Cause—A Sure Cure for the Kidneys and for These Diseases.

There are a great many people who don't know that the kidneys are simply filters.

All the blood made by the food we eat passes through the kidneys.

The kidneys separate what is bad from what is good, what is unhealthy from what is healthy, throw out the bad and let the good pass on to nourish our body.

And this is going on every minute of our lives.

Some folks overwork their kidneys. They have to suffer the consequences.

But the consequences would not be so bad if they would take Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills.

The kidneys get overworked from worry, hard work of the body or mind excesses, overeating, etc.

Worry is probably the most common of these causes.

Overwork of the kidneys makes them sick, and they make us sick.

When the kidneys are sick the blood suffers. It gets poor, thin, unhealthy poisonous.

When our kidneys are sick we may have Bright's disease, diabetes, nephritis and other dangerous kidney troubles.

Or we may have have rheumatism, gout, neuralgia, general muscular weakness, etc., or anæmia, pale and sallow complexion, chlorosis or green sickness, dizziness, etc., or skin diseases, pimples, blotches, eruptions, etc.

It may seem wonderful that one medicine should be able to cure all of these diseases, but when we remember that they are all caused by impure blood, and that the impure blood is caused by the kidneys, it becomes a question of simple common sense.

The kidneys make pure blood.

Pure blood means health.

Therefore, when you have diseases of impure blood, cure your kidneys with Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Pills.

This will make you well and strong and hearty.

Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills contain, in concentrated form, special vegetable drugs which cure and renew the kidneys.

The combination from which they are made is found in no other medicine or prescription. It was first used by Dr. Hobb in his private practice many years ago, and was so unfailingly successful that his original prescription was finally made up into Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills. The concentrated extract of arparagus, which is the principal ingredient, is prepared exclusively by the Hobb Medicine Co., under a special process.

Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills will cure you when you are sick.

They will put new blood and new life into you. They will give you new ambition, new looks and new brightness of eyes and skin.

A few doses will relieve. A few boxes will cure.

Companion of Great People.

Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, who lectures in the First Presbyterian chapel tonight, is a link between two generations. She knew and thought with the great thinkers of a generation ago. Garrison and Wendell Phillips were her compatriots. She not only lived with Emerson, Whittier, Longfellow, Sonree, Hawthorne and the contemporaries, but with Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, she has lived to see the "last leaf" flutter from the bough where it clung, for Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes was the best man of a group of brilliant literary lights of which Boston may well be proud.

And then to think again that you can get tapestry Brussels carpet for 50, 60, and 70 cents a yard, made and laid with paper, which is a saving of 15c per yard. Where is there a house in the city that will offer such bargains?

And then imagine and wonder how we can afford to give away a chiffonette ring or parlor table with a parlor suit for $20, $30, $40 or $50.

THE NEW IDEAL OF WOMAN.

MRS. MARY A. LIVERMORE HAS ORIGINAL AND INTERESTING VIEWS.

She Says the Woman of the Present Time Believes in Physical Development and Cares Not for Newspaper Ridicule.

Those who failed to hear Mrs. Mary A. Livermore lecture in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church last evening missed a rare opportunity of hearing a talented woman. The chapel was filled with a cultured audience, who thoroughly enjoyed the lecture. The talented woman entered the room accompanied by David P. Hall, who introduced her in a few well chosen words, in which he said that her work on behalf of woman and education had endeared her to the hearts of all. Mrs. Livermore's subject, "A Dream of Tomorrow," was certainly an ideal one in every respect. She commenced by giving a most vivid description of a vessel starting on a voyage, how every need of the ship and the crew is amply provided for, and the course she is to sail laid out This she likened to the human voyage. Continuing, she said in part:

That man sails a mysterious voyage under sealed orders. It is not possible to forcast the future. Every age, race and generation has left something of real value, until today the civilized nations know something of this great voyage, which knowledge has been gained through the grand thinking of lofty thoughts of noble men.

There never has been a time when there has not been a belief that better things are coming. We are comforted with this hope that there are better things beyond. Every summer I take a trip to the White Mountains and I enjoy looking at the face of the "old man in the mountains," who seems to be looking ahead into the deep future. We are anchored up to our necks in trouble and surely there is something better to look forward to. The best thinkers tell us there is. German scientists tell us that man has a sixth sense, commensurate with the world's progress which makes it possible for him to be cognizant of higher intellectual obtainments.

Man has been surrounded with labor saving machinery, simply because it was not intended that he should work himself to death, but have more time to build himself up intellectually.

The great advantages of the press, telegraph or telephone are incalcuable. They tell us what Congress is doing or not doing, of the things that happen in foreign countries, and sometimes before the people in those countries know it themselves. Recently I was riding on a railroad train to Boston when I met an eminent railroad man who told me that in five years the principal roads in the country would be equpped with electric motors in the place of engines.

Mr. Edison told me recently that electricity would be used at an early date to take ships across the ocean and instead of 3,000 tons of coal being used, 250 tons would answer the same purpose.

Physical development has grown to be a fad, and women have taken to the wheel. Newspaper criticism on the subject has failed for the first time to destroy woman's enjoyment, for they act indifferent to the criticisms and cartoons that are incessantly brought before them. This fad has grown so that the gymnasiun is preferred to the library. But the cycle and gymnasiun can be abused, and injure the heart so that it cannot be cured.

Before long it will be a passion among women to grow strong, healthy and robust. There was a time when it was decidedly offensive to be so, and women would boast of being delicate.

When I was a young girl there were fourteen occupations open to women; now there are 350. People talk of unsexing women, but I don't understand it. When a girl starts out on her wheel for a ride I don't believe she will come back a boy. In Massachusetts there are 100,000 more marriageable women than men. After twenty years of married life I discovered that I was masquerading about in my husband's things and he found it out the same day I did. He went to the bank to draw some of my money on an order I had given him. When he presented it the cashier told him the order wasn't necessary, for according to the laws of Massachusetts everything that a married woman had belonged to her husband.

Mrs. Livermore closed her lecture by stating that Christianity was better understood today than when Christ taught it on earth, and after repeating a beautiful bit of prose the evening's enjoyment was brought to an end.

Mr. Hall then announced the fourth lecture in the course for the benefit of school suffrage for New Jersey women, which will take place Tuesday afternoon at four o'clock in the Y. M. C. A. Hall by Miss E. Marguerite Lindley, on "The Coming Girl and How Shall We Rear Her?"

FANWOOD BOROUGH'S FIRST ELECTION A NEIGHBORLY CONTEST.

Three Tickets in the Field—All But Two of the Independents Elected—T. S. Young is the New Mayor—Other Officers.

The new borough of Fanwood held their election yesterday. Politics did not seem to figure prominently in the contest it being more of a neighborly fight for supremacy.

The greatest struggle was between Thomas S. Young and Benj. Urner for mayor, and Ambrose I. Harrison and Alfred Beeken for member of the council.

There were three tickets in the field, the Independent, Conservative and Citizens. The Independent ticket was elected with the exception of Harrison for member of council. Will Dance for Firemen.

Mrs. Abner Bartlett has kindly offered her services to the firemen for their fair and will arrange a dance and drill to be given every evening while the fair is open.

Rev. Charles E. Herring is ill at his home on East Second street.

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chambertain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family has need of it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once and you will never regret it. For sale by Reynold's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

THEIR THREATS MADE GOOD.

BOROUGH WILL INSTITUTE SUITS FOR GREEN BROOK POLLUTION.

Counselor Reed So Instructed By the Borough Board of Health—A Red Hot Letter as to the City's Health Board.

The Borough Board of Health last night made good their threats of taking legal action against thore who are emptying sewage into Green brook. Besides the city being made a defendant in a suit, all other private citizens whose sewage empties into the brook will also be involved in actions to punish them under a State law of 1893 which provides a fine of $1,000 or two years imprisonment for violations thereof.

This action was taken at a full board meeting last night when a set of resolutions were introduced and unanimously passed instructing Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed to institute suits against all who run sewage into the brook, and asking the Borough Council to co-operate with them in the prosecution.

Counselor Reed was talked with by a Press reporter this morning as to the most probable line of action that would be taken by him in the courts.

Mr. Reed first heard of the action of the board from The Press reporter and was not prepared to say what action would be taken until he had received a communication from the board and looked into the law with reference thereto.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh was also talked with and asked what most probable line of defense the city would offer in any action brought by the borough. All that Mr. Marsh would say was:

"The city especially forbade the running of any sewage into Greenbrook as soon as the law of 1893 was enacted, and the city cannot be held responsible for the acts of private citizens."

The city sewer was built several years ago and up to the time the law prohibiting the polution of any public stream was passed, collected an annual tax, but since that time those who had connections have paid nothing.

The borough Board of Health have prepared the following letter for publication to set forth their side of the case:

As is well known, the citizens of the borough have for years vainly protested against Plainfield's sewering into Green brook, and have especially objected to the Watchung avenue sewer, which begins at the erstwhile Elkwood Hotel, and runs through North and Watchung avenues to the brook. In January, 1893, at our request, there was a joint meeting of the two Health Boards over which Mayor Gilbert presided, and at which the Plainfield board agreed to have all house connections with the brook severed on their side, and also to flush the Watchung avenue sewer twice daily, thus reducing to a minimum the evils arising from said sewer. To the best of our knowledge and belief, no such flushing has ever taken place, and the sewer's condition today is worse than it was when the agreement to flush it was made. Six months thereafter, having good and sufficient reason for believing that many house connections on the Plainfield side had not been severed, our Board employed two reliable men to examine the raceway from its outlet near Grove street to French's mill, and there were discovered thirty-one connections, nineteen of which were in active operation. We afterwards understood that the city's Street Commissioner made an examination for himself and found one more connection than our agents discovered. When notice of these connections was furnished to the Plainfield board, they promised to remedy the evil, but the work was imperfectly done, as an examination four months thereafter clearly showed. Another notice was sent to them, after which we were told the connections were all severed.

Last summer, believing it to be necessary to free the brook from the weed that grew rank between the Grove street and Washington avenue bridges, forming a resting place for the sewage matter that found its way into the brook, we, on our own responsibility, and at the time assuming all the expense, had the said weeds dug out, and the stream thoroughly washed out by the Warren Engine Company, under the supervision of one of our own members. Half of the expense was finally paid by the Plainfield board. A few months ago, deeming the condition of the brook to be again inimical to the public health, we requested the Plainfield health board to cleanse the stream, informing them that we believed that all connections on our side had been severed, and that the unhealthy condition that existed was due to the actions of citizens on their side, and should therefore be remedied by them, but the board refused to take any action. We then appealed to the Common Council, as the public know.

As to the statement that there are more house connections on the borough side than on the city side, we have the assurance both of our present and late health inspectors that there is not a single house connection on our side. Of course it is possible that we are mistaken, but if any reliable information is furnished us that there is a single connection of that kind, we promise to have it severed within a week, or suit commenced against the offender. But even if every house in North Plainfield, contiguous to the brook, should empty its sewage into its waters, it would not pollute them as much as does the Watchung avenue sewer alone.

As to the dump on the borough side of Watchung avenue, it consists of one or two small loads of rags, with some tinware thrown there one night between ten and eleven o'clock by a Jew, who left next morning for parts unknown. Its condition is about the same as the Plainfield side. As to the statement that no complaint concerning the brook's condition has been made by those living on Front street, we can easily prove that the contrary is true.

When a mayor publicly confesses that the city over which he presides has for years been violating a State law, he having full knowledge of the existence of said law, and of the complaints against its violation, it ill becomes him to attack his law-abiding neigbors, who in the conscientious discharge of their bounden duty, are striving to protect the community from an evil that depreciates the value of property, endangers health, and jeopardizes life.

EPWORTH LEAGUE RALLY.

They Meet at Monroe Avenue Chapel and Spend a Pleasant Evening.

The Epworth Leagues of Plainfield and Dunellen met last evening at the Monroe Avenue chapel for a grand rally. The chapel was crowded with delegations from the visiting chapters, while a goodly number of the entertaining were present.

Rev. S. Custard, of Dunellen, was the first to speak. He told of the object of the league and spoke very favorably of the reading course which had been extensively taken up in his chapter. He advised all the other members to take it if possible.

J. R. Joy, from the chapter of the First M. E. church, made some humorous remarks, and also spoke on the advisability of the literary course, suggesting a union meeting of all those interested which, he thought, would be a great help to those taking it.

The Grace M. E. church chapter was the next to be heard from, and John Valiant was the speaker. His remarks were in the same strain as the former speakers, and he also told something of the organization of which he was a member. Miss Grace Carroll sang a vocal solo in a most delightful manner. Rev. Mr. Randolph made a short address, and then Raymond A. McGee rendered a very acceptable cornet solo, accompanied by Mrs. J. R. Joy on the piano.

The social part of the evening followed and an informal reception was held while the women of the chapel passed the refreshments.

HUMOR AND PATHOS AMUSE.

CAPTAIN CRAWFORD CAN TELL A FUNNY STORY IN A FUNNY WAY.

The Poet Scout Says the Yellow Covered Novel Has Carried Many a Boy to Ruin—Philosopher as Well as Story Teller.

If the rest of the star course of entertainments of the Y. M. C. A. this winter are as enjoyable as the first, the association hall will be far too small to hold the throng that will gather there to attend them. The first of the course was held last evening, and for over two hours Captain Jack Crawford, better known as "The Poet Scout," held either sent his audience into roars of laughter or almost brought the tears to their eyes. He kept their attention throughout the evening, and that his entertainment was much enjoyed, was shown by the hearty applause that burst forth on every possible occasion. Capt. Crawford certainly has the faculty of entertaining an audience, for from the moment that he came on the stage everyone in the hall was all attention. His dialect stories were especially well told. He began his entertainment by starting to tell how he came to give his first public entertainment but diverged from the subject to tell of the squirrel hunting exploits of a stuttering young man, which at once sent his hearers into roars of laughter. He recited several of his own quaint poems, the spirit of pathos in which touched the hearts of his hearers. He told of some of his varied experiences among the Indians and the rough characters of the "wild and fuzzy west," as he termed it.

He spoke strongly against the writers of the dime novels and the bogus great Indian killers which have excited the imagination of the youth of the land and started them on the road to ruin. The prisons of the west, he said, were filled with eastern boys who had been led astray by these false representations of life in the west.

It would be impossible to tell all of the amusing and pathetic tales with which he kept his audience spellbound, as they lose their force when coming from the lips of any but the "Poet Scout," but certainly in all the crowd that comfortably filled the hall there was no one who did not enjoy himself and was not sorry when Captain Crawford said good night.

During the evening he introduced Prof. Spencer, an old and valued comrade of the plains, who gave several delightful selections on the violin and guitar. During the course of the evening, Captain Crawford gave one of "Pony Bill's" quaint cowboy sermons.

Captain Crawford appeared dressed in regular cowboy fashion with a six shooter placed in his belt which he handled in an apparently careless manner while illustrating some of his stories.

As the two hours drew to a close he told how Wild Bill killed two soldiers who tried to rob him of his earnings. One was seated opposite him at a table and the other one behind him, so the story ran, and both drew their revolvers as a pretext for a quarrel was found.

"His only way," said Captain Crawford, "was to shoot the man opposite him and then shoot over his shoulder at the other soldier, like this," and the next instant everybody in the hall jumped as he fired two shots from his revolver very rapidly, one to the front and the other over his shoulder. The last was pointed in the direction of a little boy in the gallery, who was almost asleep, and when the bang came the lad sprang into the air in a most surprised manner.

"I didn't say that I was going to do it before, for the ladies might have fretted, you know," the smiling speaker explained. Then, after a few closing words, he bade his audience good evening.

Did Not Pay For The Liquor.

An attachment was issued yesterday by Justice Newcorn for Frank Linke to attach money now in the hands of Harry Honan, which is said to belong to an Italian named Marco. Marco was a sort of padrone who keeps a boarding house for Italians and purchased considerable liquor from Linke but never paid for it. Linke was represented in the case by George W. DeMeza.

—Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., will have initiation tomorrow evening.

Every mother should know that croup can be prevented. The first symptom of true croup is hoarseness. This is followed by a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given freely as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the cough has developed it will prevent the attack. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues.

AGAIN AT HIS DESK

Return of President Cleveland to Washington.

The Voyage from Buzzards Bay Was Rough and Stormy, But the President Experienced No Inconvenience or Sea Sickness—Mrs. Cleveland and Children Arrive.

Washington, Oct. 16.—The president arrived in Washington at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He was accompanied by Private Secretary Thurber and E. C. Benedict, who has been for the past four days his host aboard the steam yacht Oneida. The party boarded the yacht off Gray Gables and started down Buzzards bay about 5 o'clock last Friday afternoon. A rough sea was encountered, which tossed the little vessel about in a most uncomfortable manner the greater part of the night, but the president and Mr. Thurber proved good sailors and suffered no particular inconvenience during the run to Sandy Point, near New Rochelle, at the western end of Long Island sound, which was reached about 9 o'clock Saturday morning.

Rain Spoiled the Fishing.

The Oneida remained at achor all day, the president desiring to fish, but it rained hard all day and prevented any sport. On Sunday morning the yacat moved down East river and anchored off 26th street, the party going ashore and dining with Dr. Bryant. Sunday afternoon the yacht proceeded down the bay, anchoring for the night a short distance from Sandy Hook. Had not the weather outside been too threatening there would have been no break in the course at this point, but the indications pointed to a heavy blow during the nigat, and as there was no particular hurry for reaching Washington it was decided to wait for daylight.

Rough Ocean Voyage.

Promptly at 5 o'clock the Onedia put to sea and set her course for the capes of the Chesapeake. From Sandy Hook, as far as the entrance of Delaware bay, the ocean was exceedingly rough and the Oneida rolled badly, but all the party declare that she behaved wonderfully well and all on board claim to have reported at every meal between Gray Gables and the White House. The sea subsided after the Delaware was passed and salutes were exchanged with a number of coasting steamers. Cape Henry and Cape Charles lights were abeam at 1 o'clock yesterday, and at about daybreak the Potomac was entered. No incident occurred until the yacht was recognized and cheered at Mount Vernon. The president was met at the wharf by his carriage which drove him rapidly through the city, reaching the White House, accompanied by Mr. Benedict, at 4:15 o'clock.

Many Vacancies To Fill.

The president has improved notably in appearance and is evidently in excellent health. In addition to the recreation he secured at his seaside home, he managed to keep up with all the current business which demanded his attention, and in consequence he returns to find no accumulation of work on his desk except a great number of vacancies created during his absence and for which in most instances he has practically determined on the appointments he will make. Private Secretary Thurber is also much refreshed by his vacation. He had lots of good fishing during the summer and attained a very becoming tanned skin.

Mrs. Cleveland's Return.

Washington, Oct. 16.—Mrs. Cleveland and party arrived in Washington last night at 11:10 in a private car attached to the Colonial express from Boston over the Pennsylvania road. A large number of people were at the station early in the evening to get a glimpse of the president's wife, but when she entered her carriage not more than fifty persons had awaited the arrival of the train. She was met by Private Secretary Thurber, with two of the president's carriages. The party left the station by the side entrance in order to avoid the crowd which was waiting at the main entrance. Mrs. Cleveland looked well as the result of her long vacation. Secret Service Officers Hazen and McManus, who were on duty at Gray Gables this summer, accompanied the party.

FIRE AT ATLANTA EXPOSITION.

Negro Plantation Building Burned and the Entire Midway in Danger.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 16.—There was considerable excitement on the midway at the exposition grounds yesterday occasioned by a fire which started in the building occupied by the old negro plantation, and which caught on to the uncompleted arena of the Hagenbeck show. The building was entirely destroyed, but a considerable portion of the plantation building was saved. The buildings burned rapidly, and for awhile, on account of the west wind which was blowing, it was feared the whole midway was doomed. The firemen, however, finally succeeded in getting it under control and soon had it extinguished.

Father Fitzgerald Arrested.

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 16.—Sheriff Hannan located Father Fitzgerald, who was indicted yesterday for arson in the second degree, during the afternoon in the law office of his counsel. While practically under arrest he was allowed to remain there until late in the evening when he finally secured bail.

Smuggling in Newfoundland.

St. Johns, N. F., Oct. 16.—The smuggling disclosures, which are growing, now involve nearly every liquor dealer in the city. It is estimated that the loss of revenue last year through the operations of the syndicate was $60,000.

Convicted of Arson.

New York, Oct. 16.—The trial of Morris Schoenholtz for arson was concluded in the court of general sessions last evening, the jury returning a verdict of guilty in the first degree. The prisoner was remanded for sentence.

Telegraphic Transfers of Currency.

New York, Oct. 16.—Telegraphic transfers of currency to New Orleans through the sub-treasury yesterday were $285,000. Exchanges of large for small notes over the counter at the sub-treasury were $150,000.

MEXICO IS PROSPEROUS.

Not in Ten Years Has the Country Been So Thriving.

Boston, Oct. 16.—A special from the City of Mexico says: The financial situation continues favorable. The glut of money in the banks remains, merchants having so much cash that they are independent of banks in being able to purchase foreign exchange without resorting to them. Mexican capital is being invested in tropical agricultural land, principally coffee, and in manufactures and city real estate, but not so much in the latter as during the past years for the reason that good mortgages are steadily declining, forcing capitalists not content with a net of five per cent. to be more speculative. The railways are hauling more and more native freight as the country prospers. Large shipments of dollars are being made to San Francisco for Asia, largely for China. Many railways are soon to be built, and the country has not been so generally thriving for ten years. President Diaz and Finance Minister Liamntour are now in hopes of refunding the entire external gold debt at 5 per cent.

GEN. HARRISON AT SARATOGA.

Called There on Account of the Illness of "Baby" McKee.

Saratoga, N. Y., Oct. 16.—Ex-President Harrison arrived here last night from the west and is at the winter residence of his daughter, Mrs. James R. McKee. The ex-president is called here by reason of the illness of "Baby" McKee, for whom some alarm was felt a day or two ago. The little fellow, who is suffering from a mild form of scarlet fever, is not considered to be in a dangerous condition, however, by his attending physician, Dr. W. H. Hall. The ex-president will no doubt remain here until all danger is over.

Several speeches were made in eulogy of the patriot.

He has named it the Nile of the North and says it is one of the largest known rivers in the world.

PLANS OF PUGILISTS

May Yet Outwit the Governor of Arkansas.

Hot Springs Officials Have Probably Made Terms with the Fighters. A Test To Be Made in the Courts with the Object of Tying the Governor's Hands.

Hot Springs, Ark., Oct. 16.—Pugilist Corbett arrived last evening, as did Brig.-Gen. Taylor, commanding the state troops. A conference between the general, the state's attorney and the citizens' committee began at 8 p. m. Crowds surrounded the hotel where the meeting was held, and the excitement at Hot Springs is at fever heat.

Brig.-Gen. Taylor Talks.

Before the meeting Gen. Taylor said to a reporter: "I am invested with full power to stop this contest in its incipiency. As soon as Fitzsimmons appears in the state one of the men will be placed under arrest. I am acting under instructions. I do not consult my own feelings in the matter. To indicate my personal preferences, I will tell you that I had obtained my ticket to the fight at Dallas and intended to go to see it there myself. If necessaary, I can muster 10,000 men, and you can make up your mind now that Corbett and Fitzsimmons will not meet in Arkansas."

New Articles of Agreement.

At the meeting Mr. Vendig made the following statement: "The governor seems to have been laboring under a misapprehension of our intentions. The Florida Athletic club did not come to Arkansas to make an invasion. Individually and collectively we all are law abiding and have had no intention to violate the laws of the state. We come to Hot Springs at the earnest invitation and solicitation of its chief executive officer and attorney with a promise of protection and the understanding that no statute of the state law should be infracted. When we discovered that a finish contest was a misdemeanor under the law we changed the articles of agreement from a finish contest to one of a limited number of rounds. The new agreement calls for a glove contest of twenty-five rounds with soft gloves to weigh not less than five ounces. The athletic club has pledged itself to pay the men $45,000 for their services, and the men have agreed that the winner in scientific points is to receive the entire amount ($45,000) paid by the club."

Plan To Head Off the Governor.

Judge Kimbell, who returned from a conference with the governor, informed United Press correspondent that it is understood to be the programme to arrest Corbett upon the charge of a threatened breach of the peace and require a peace bond. The bond will be refused, and the case will come up before the chancellor, Judge Feathermore. A writ of habaes corpus will be applied for to make a test case to determine whether the courts or the dictum of the governor is superior. Gov. Clarke cannot go behind a writ of habaes corpus under the law, and to suspend the law requires an act of the legislature in session assembled. A declaration of martial law would be the only course to pursue to overcome this, and citizens do not believe that the governor will declare martial law to prevent a misdemeanor of the sort contemplated. The people now seem confident that the combat under the revised agreement will take place.

May Fight at Juarez.

El Paso, Tex., Oct. 16.—A concession has been granted by the govenor of Chihuahua permitting the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight to take place in Juarez, just across the river from this place. Matters have been kept very quiet until everything was arranged. The Florida Athletic club has a representative here and it has been agreed that the fight will take place in Juarez. The prominent citizens met and organized last night and an executive committee was appointed to sign all contracts and transact such other business as comes up. Both El Paso and Juarez are enthusiastic over the prospects of securing the fight.

NAVIGATION CLOSED.

Millions of Bushels of Fruit Going to Waste Along the Ohio River.

Cincinnati, Oct. 16.—Millions of bushels of fruit are going to waste along the Ohio river because of the close of navigation. Between this city and Evansville 150,000 barrels apples, in addition to potatoes and other produce, will be lost by decay. At the little port of Amsterdam, Ind., 2,000 barrels have been lying on the wharf for two weeks awaiting shipment. The river is lower now than it has been since 1860, with one exception. The continued drought in central Kentucky is interfering with the distilleries. Glens creek, which is the only source of water supply for several distilleries, has gone dry and a large number of men are out of employment.

PLENTY OF WORK IN SIGHT.

Mines, Shut Down on Account of Drought, Resume Operations.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 16.—The Red Ash mine at Laurel Run, and the Firewood colliery at Yatesville will resume work to-day. They have been idle for the past two months on account of the drought. Several hundred men and boys are employed at these mines and they will now have plenty of work for many months to come.

Reception to Northerners.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 16.—The directors of the exposition tendered a reception yesterday afternoon to Colonel A. K. McClure of Philadelphia and to Edward Atkinson of Boston. Both the guests made brief speeches, referring to the south's development on all business lines.

Summer Hotel Changes Owners.

New London, Conn., Oct. 16.—The Pequot house, one of the oldest and best known summer hotels on the New England coast, has been sold by the Blanchard & Hagar company. It will be remodeled on modern lines and improved in all respects possible.

MERITED REWARD.

SALES OF LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND.

Unequalled in the History of Medicine. Honesty, Excellence, Faithfulness Fitly Rewarded.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Never in the history of medicine has the demand for one particular remedy for female diseases equalled that attained by Lydia E. Pinkhams Vegetable Compound and never in the history of Mrs. Pinkhams wonderful Compound has the demand for it been so great as it is today.

From Maine to California, from the Gulf to the St. Lawrence, come the glad tidings of woman's suffering relieved by it; and thousands upon thousands of letters are pouring in from grateful women, saying that it WILL and does positively cure those painful Ailments of Women.

It will cure the worst forms of female complaints, all ovarian troubles, inflammation and ulceration, falling and displacements of the womb, and consequent spinal weakness, and is peculiarly adapted to the change of life.

Every time it will cure

Backache.

It has cured more cases of leucorrhœa by removing the cause, than any remedy the world has ever known; it is almost infallible in such cases. It dissolves and expels tumors from the uterus in an early stage of development, and checks any tendency to cancerous humors.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills work in unison with the Compound, and are a sure cure for constipation and sick-headache. Mrs. Pinkham's Sanative Wash is frequently found of great value for local application. Correspondence is freely solicited by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., and the strictest confidence assured. All druggists sell the Pinkham's remedies. The Vegetable Compound in three forms,—Liquid, Pills, and Lozenges.

BIG REBEL VICTORY

Maceo, with 800 Men, Defeats 2,600 Spaniards.

Government Troops Lost Five Chiefs and Officers Killed, Ten Officers Wounded, and 300 Soldiers Killed and Wounded—Splendid Camps Made by the Insurgents.

Santiago de Cuba, Oct. 3, via Key West, Fla., Oct. 16.—The famous mountain of Mogote, one of the highest of this district, was the scene of a heavy battle on the 2d inst. and one more victory of the insurgents. The Mogote is forty-five miles northeast of this city, and a point where many battles were fought during the ten years' war. The rebels, learning that Spanish Generals Garcia, Navarro and Linares were on their way to that place, stationed themselves in a good position for the attack. The combined Spanish column, 2,600 strong, opened the attack from their vanguard. Antonio Maceo with 800 men returned the fire, and after a severe battle of five hours he conquered the Spaniards who were obliged to retire, leaving five chiefs and officers killed 10 officers wounded and three hundred and eighty soldiers killed and wounded.

Rebels Gaining Splendid Camps.

The rebels are really fighting like heroes as they begin to be short of ammunition. During the last few days the insurgents have made splendid camps in Sabanam, Miranda, Mogote and La Gran Piedra, the second and last of these being natural fortresses almost inaccessible. Sabana Miranda is situated about twelve miles from San Luis, terminus of the American railroad. Mogote, as said above, forty-five miles northeast of Santiago, and La Gran Piedra six miles from the American Iron Mining company, Juragua, situated on the south coast of Cuba. The rebels have isolated the towns of San Luis and Palma Sorisna, situated twenty-four and thirty miles respectively from Santiago, by setting fire to a bridge between the towns.

Man-of-War's Boat Attacked.

A boat of the Spanish man-of-war Nueva Espana, manned with an officer and ten sailors, while passing near the Baconeo river, about thirty-six miles from Santiago on the south coast of the island, was fired on by a band of insurgents who were on the coast making salt. The boat returned fire while the man-of-war fired six bombshells to protect the landing of the men. The rebels left the place and no one was wounded on either side.

Women Enthusiastic.

Yellow fever still continues very bad here among the Spaniards. The enthusiasm is very great among the Cubans and many young men go to the field almost daily. The women are more enthusiastic than the men, if possible.

WRECK ON THE W. N. Y. & P.

Fireman Killed and Two Others Seriously Injured.

Bradford, Pa., Oct. 16.—A bad wreck occurred on the Buffalo division of the Western New York & Pennsylvania railroad at 1 a. m. As a north-bound freight train was passing Eldred station the locomotive left the rails and plunged down an embankment, followed by eleven loaded cars. Fireman Jesse Baxter of Buffalo was caught beneath the engine and crushed to death. Engineer Brockway and Brakeman Hagmire, both of Buffalo, were seriously injured. It is feared the engineer's injuries will prove fatal.

MENELIK'S TROOPS FLEEING

Italy Determined To Complete the Subjection of the King.

London, Oct. 16.—The Central News has a dispatch from Rome saying that advices from Abyssinia are that the troops of Ras Mangascia, the Abyssinian leader, have been dispersed and that they are fleeing toward Shoa. Gen. Baratieri, the commander of the Italian forces in Abyssinia, proposes to invade Shoa and Harrar and complete the subjection of King Menelik.

46,000 LOST WOMEN.

That Number Carted Out to Potter's Field Every Year.

Baltimore, Oct. 16.—At the session yesterday afternoon of the National Social Purity congress Mrs. Edholm said: "Of the 230,000 erring girls in the country, over half have been snared or sold into their lives of shame. Their average life is five years. Forty-six thousand are carted out to Potter's Field every year. Over one hundred American homes have to be desolated every day to recruit the ranks of shame. Isn't it time that somebody is trying to save these girls from falling into those dens of iniquity? Twenty million Christians can rescue 230,000 erring girls, or surely the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ is a failure." Then Mrs. Edholm read a long list of statistics bearing upon her subject. "Men go out into the country districts," she continued, "and bring these girls into our cities. A mock marriage is often performed and the girl is taken into these haunts of shame, believing she is going to a boarding house. One man, who was recently converted, told me he had gone through the marriage ceremony twenty times, and every time sold the girl into a house of iniquity."

SPIRITUALISTS' MEETING.

Third Annual Convention in Session at Washington.

Washington, Oct. 16.—At the third annual convention of the National Spiritualist association President Barrett read a report showing that the membership had increased 65 per cent. during the past year. He recommended that committees on litigation and legislation be appointed in every state with sufficient means to make an aggressive fight against the prosecution of mediums. He claimed that spiritualists had defeated Governor Foraker in Ohio in 1883, and urged the convention to take decided action on political matters, principally on the question of woman suffrage.

NOT ENOUGH WATER.

Battleship Texas Cannot Be Docked at Norfolk Navy Yard.

Washington, Oct. 16.—After an inquiry into the matter the navy department has decided that the depth of water in the dry dock in the Norfolk navy yard will not permit the new battleship Texas to be docked there. The dock was found adequate for the Texas before she was fitted with armament and other heavy material, but she is now too deep in the water to permit her to enter. She will be sent for docking either to Port Royal, S. C., or the Brooklyn navy yard, with the probabilities strongly in favor of the latter place.

KATAHDIN'S TRIAL TRIP.

The Course To Be Off New London, Conn., on the Sound.

Washington, Oct. 16.—Arrangements are being made at the navy department for the trial trip of the unique ram Katahdin, designed by rear-admiral Daniel Ammen. Owing to the trial trip of the Indiana, however, the department will be unable to lay off the course without some delay, and it is not likely that the trial will be made before the week after next. The course will be seventeen nautical miles on the Long Island sound, off New London, Conn.

HISTORIC SPOT MARKED

Patriotic Exercises on the Banks of the Delaware.

A Monument at Taylorsville, Pa., and a Tablet at Washington's Crossing, N. Y., To Commemorate the Father of the Country's Famous Voyage of 1776 Unveiled.

Trenton, N. J., Oct. 16.—The monument at Taylorsville, Pa., and the tablet at Washington's Crossing to mark the spot where the father of his country crossed the Delaware the night before he routed the Hessians in Trenton were dedicated yesterday with interesting ceremonies. The crossing is about two miles above this city and at the present time the scene of a pretty village. Notwithstanding the air was raw and chilly a large assemblage of people gathered and school children from Pennington, Hopewell, Doylestown, Titusville and Washington's Crossing were present. The children all wore the national colors and participated in the exercises by singing patriotic songs. The monument at Taylorsville was erected by the Bucks County Historical society. It is a block of gray granite set upon a granite base and bearing the following inscription:

"Near this spot Washington crossed the Delaware on Christmas night, 1776, the eve of the battle of Trenton."

The monument is about 100 yards above Yardley bridge and stands on property between the river road and the Delaware.

Patriotic Exercises.

The exercises took place in front of Dr. Griffe's residence. All about American flags were flying and patriotic music stirred the emotions of the spectators. General William W. H. Davis of Doylestown, Pa., president of the Bucks County Historical society, made the introductory remarks. Prayer followed by the Rev. Alphonzo Dare of Pennington. General William S. Stricker of Trenton then delivered an historical address after which the monument was unveiled by Mrs. Elizabeth Twining of Yardley, Pa. The orator of the day was Dwight M. Lowrey of Philadelphia, who spoke of the heroes of the revolution and their work. The children in concert recited a song poem written by Miss M. Harcourt Clarke of New York and then sang America. The exercises on the Pennsylvania side of the river being brought to a close with the benediction pronounced by Rev. E. M. Jeffreys of Doylestown.

Unveiling of the Tablet.

The tablet at the crossing was unveiled by Miss Ada Byron Nelson, daughter of Dr. Adonis Nelson of Neshanic, N. J. It is of brass and bears this inscription: "This tablet is erected by the Society of the Cincinnati in the state of New Jersey to commemorate the crossing of the Delaware river by General Washington and the continental army on Christmas night, 1776."

Now it is given out that A. W. Meehan, head of the free delivery system, is coming to the city to look into the matter himself.

At a meeting of the Democratic State committee yesterday Senator Blodgett said the State committee had been very busy ever since its organization in feeling the pulse of the people and ascertaining correctly the feeling throughout the State. The result had been most gratifying. Never in all its thirty years experience in this State had he seen the Democratic party so thoroughly united and in accord as it is today for the success of the ticket. The Leech Is a Natural Getter Out.

In the top of the bowl marked "Leeches" in the drug store are holes not bigger than a knitting needle.

"You wouldn't think," said the druggist, "that the leeches could crawl through that, would you? You notice their apparent size, which is about that of a lead pencil, and you watch them extend themselves and draw themselves up. You admit their elasticity, but the thought of their crawling through such a place as that seems impossible. Yet in a down town drug store the other day six of them, impelled by some instinct, some atmospheric or physiological cause, squeezed through those tiny holes and crawled out upon the floor, where they were found in the morning."—Lewiston Journal.

A Fish's Tail.

A fish exerts its great propulsive power with its tail, not with its fins. The paddle wheel was made on the fin theory of propulsion, and the screw propeller had its origin in noting the action of the tail. It is now shown that the fins of the tail actually perform the evolutions described by the propeller blades, and that the fish in its sinuous motion through the water depends on the torsional of the tail to give it power.

So It Has.

"De singin of a mockin bird am sweet," remarked Uncle Eben, "but de cackle ob er chicken on your own roos' has a heap more expression in it."—Washington Star.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

AN APOSTLE OF HYPOCRISY.

The Sweat Shop News Editor in a Ridiculous Position.

That apostle of hypocrisy, the News, whose editor cries for protection to the American mechanic and then employs compositors whom he pays $2.50 a week and docks at a $12 week rate for lost time, put itself in a ridiculous position Monday with its much vaunted claims of accuracy, when it printed the report of Dr. Rodman's anniversary. Last Thursday The Daily Press exclusively announced the completion of twenty-five years of service by the eminent rector, and in the article relative thereto erroneously printed that of the original 122 communicants in the church when Dr. Rodman assumed the pastorate, only two remained. It should have been of the 122 ministers in the diocese of New Jersey only two still remained in the service besides Dr. Rodman. But the News editor, who runs his office on sweat shop principles by making his reporters do the work of four ordinary men, thought it would be cheaper to filch from the Daily Press of Thursday than to assign a reporter to the anniversary services. Hence the mistake that stamps him as an apostle of hypocrisy.

ARRESTED ON SUSPICION.

But in Borough Police Court He is Found to Be Demented.

Frederick Wickster, of Warrenville, was arrested by Marshal Wilson late last night on suspicion. He was poorly clad, and his clothes were spattered with blood. When Marshal Wilson called to him he started and ran like a deer.

The marshal gave chase and finally caught him. Wickster was then placed in the borough lockup and this morning Justice Crosley gave him a hearing, but from his actions it is thought the man is insane.

The Justice released him and advised him to go home. When he struck Somerset street he took the middle of the road and ran as fast as he could in the direction of home.

Plainfield's Dago Accused.

The coroner's jury in the case of the Westfield Italian murder held an inquest at Elizabeth Monday, and after listening to the testimony, the jury retired and rendered a verdict that Salerno came to his death through the effects of a pistol shot wound inflicted by Ventozzi.

The murderer is still at large and the authorities have not yet secured any clue to his whereabouts. It is believed that he has succeeded in leaving this part of the country through the aid of some of his countrymen employed in Westfield.

The witnesses of the shooting are still in custody, and will be held for some time yet in the hopes that the detectives will apprehend the murderer.

Great Catch of Eels.

On Monday morning and early on Tuesday morning there was nearly 300 pounds of eels taken from the forebay at Sebring's Mills. They clogged the wheel which furnishes power for one of the dynamos, and no one can ever remember of such a large amount of eels ever being before taken in this section of the State. Old fishermen say that the fish run up streams in the early spring and return to the rivers late in the fall. Mr. Sebring's friends were furnished with eels enough to last for several days. They were all large ones, and much labor was exerted in capturing them.

He Was Not Born Blind.

Mr. John B. Herreshoff, senior member of the firm of Herreshoff Bros. of Bristol, R. I., was born with the full use of both eyes. From the time he was old enough to know the use of a jackknife he began whittling out boats. In his fifteenth year he built a good size craft for sailing on the bay. Then he lost his sight. A film gradually came over his eyes and finally shut off forever the last dim glimpse of Bristol and her boats. But he went on building just the same—not, of course, as if nothing had happened, for his methods of perception had to be radically changed. Instead of studying the grace and strength of lines by the eye, the matter became to Herreshoff at once a more abstract study—a mental calculation. He had the task before him of carrying in his mind the models he worked upon. The objects he had seen with his eyes in the first 15 years of his life he could summon up into his mind again. His sense of touch also developed to a wonderful sensitiveness.

All the models of vessels to be built in the manufactory are submitted to him. His brother Nat invariably has a tiny model made on the lines to be pursued in the construction of a new craft, and this model is given to the elder brother. If the work is of extreme importance, the elder Herreshoff sometimes sits for days rubbing his hands lightly over the model, thus getting a perfect picture of the lines of the boat in his mind. Many changes suggest themselves to him, and he works them out with mathematical precision. In short, he seems to have converted his misfortune into a positive advantage.—New York Herald.

HE KNOWS BETTER NOW.

But Someone Is Wearing His Daughter's Shoes and Enjoying the Mistake.

There is one Plainfield man that is minus a pair of shoes but he has gained considerable knowledge. Monday morning he started for the shoemaker's shop on Madison avenue, between Front and Second streets. When he arrived there he found that the shop had not opened yet, but in front of it stood a man whom he supposed to be an assistant. He gave him the pair of shoes and explained what was to be done. Then he went on his way to his work. In the evening he returned and went after the shoes but, sorrowful to relate, the shoes were not there and had not been seen. There was no assistant in the shop and the man that stood in front of the store in the morning was missing.

Eating, Rest and Recreation.

A physician once said, "It does not so much matter what we eat as how we eat it." While this is only partly true, it certainly is true that most healthful food, hurriedly eaten and immediately followed by work which engages the entire available physical and mental forces, is much worse than a meal of poor food, or what is usually termed indigestible food, which is eaten leisurely and followed by an interval of rest. While the quality and quantity of foods have much to do with health, the manner of eating has quite as much, if not more, to do with keeping up the tone of the system to a natural, healthful point. All meals, but especially dinner, should be followed by a short rest. A short rest will keep the tone of the body better during the day, and it is always best to be on the safe side. After supper there should be not work, but recreation.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Sharpened Senses.

In showing how one sense is sharpened to supply the loss of another, Dr. S. Millington Miller writes that Mr. Alexander Hunter of the land office at Washington, though entirely deaf, spelled without mistake 150 words read to him from the dictionary. He has become able to read the motion of the lips of those addressing him. This faculty is not rare among the deaf, and by means of it some of them, like Mitchell, the chemist of the United States patent office, have been able to understand the lectures necessary for their graduation at college.—Philadelphia Ledger.

IT WAS A TOUGH TOWN

AN ENGINEER'S REMINISCENCES OF THE OLD DAYS OUT WEST.

The Famous Grape Story—How the Ministers Played Poker and Lost About Everything They Had With Them—The Stranger Who Declined to Drink.

Coming down through the California desert, the train was disabled and had to be laid up above the Cajon pass. It was at a little town that in old times when the railroad was new had accumulated history faster than it could be recorded. The engineer entertained some of the passengers by telling about it.

"I don't know," said he, "whether you have heard the famous grape story, but this is the original station and there is the barroom," indicating a shanty ahead. "When the Grand Duke Alexis was over here, the government paid him a good deal of attention. They got up big hunts and detailed troops of cavalry to guard them and gave the visitors a great send off. After it was all over they separated, and some of the big guns came this way. So the story goes, one of the noblemen wandered in here one morning and walked up to the bar, where Jimmy Fogarty was selling red eye whisky, and ordered drinks. It's a tough place now, and then there wasn't a blade of grass or a green thing in sight except the man at the bar. Seeing the floor littered with grapeskins, the visitors said to Jimmy:

"'Is it possible you raise grapes in this desert spot?'

"'No, your highness,' said Jimmy. 'Them ain't grapes; they're eyes that was gouged out in the fight at the ball here last night.'

"What the Russian said the story don't tell, but they say in a book he wrote on American customs in the far west he mentioned gouging as the national method of fighting and gave that case as an example.

"In the old days every man carried his life in his hands, and what with jumping claims and other things there was a good big death rate every day. Every man went armed, and there was only one word to describe it, and that was tough. I was on the late run one night and was about 20 miles outside of the town when I saw a man on the track signaling with a lantern. I slowed up and jumped down with the fireman to see what was the matter.

"'Nothing's the matter,' said the man. 'Me and my friends merely want to ride into town.' And with that four men stepped out, leading their horses, and began to tie them with long lariats to the baggage car. 'Now,' said the leader, poking a six shooter into my neck, 'steam on, and if you go fast enough to trip up them bronchos, why, it will be a question of planting you in the sand.'

"So we started ahead at a rate of about five miles an hour, and every once in awhile a bullet would whiz through the cab and one of the party would come along and intimate that we had better give the horses a rest, and once they made us water them.

"Meanwhile they had gone into the sleeper and found there were some ministers there who were coming from some convention. They made the porter rout everybody out and fix up a table, and then they forced the ministers to open up a game of poker. Some wouldn't play at first, but a ball fired six inches from your ear is a good persuader, and soon they were playing as if they had been at it all their days. The boys showed them how and made them bet their money, watches and other things. As the car got full of smoke from the cigars the boys would pull out their six shooters and with one in each hand fire shots through the roof to let the smoke out. By the time the train rolled into town every minister was dead broke, and some were rigged out in old corduroys. The authorities tried to find out who did the mischief and finally caught one of the boys, but when the case came up the judge, who was a tough citizen himself, asked one of the ministers if it was a square game. The minister said he supposed it was, but he was forced into it. The judge wouldn't believe that, so they failed to convict.

"I never saw the gang here phased but once. There was a fandango, and all the boys from the camps were in, about the toughest crowd the sun ever set upon. About half the men were sitting around the dancing ring, when in walked a small sized man, thin, but wiry. You could see from his dress he was a tenderfoot, just in on No. 14 that stopped there to water. The minute he got inside the door a yell of 'grass' went up, and half a dozen of the boys asked him to drink. For a second the stranger seemed nonplused; then he said:

"'Much obliged, gents, but I don't drink.'

"'What! don't drink?' yelled the boys.

"'No,' he said, jerking away from one who had him by the arm.

"'Oh, yes, you will,' said another, hauling out a shooting iron. 'You drink whisky or lead, and take your choice quick.'

"By this time the place was in an uproar, and Red Jack, who was a leader, sung out:

"'Tenderfoot wants to speak. Give him a show,' and pushed him into the dancing ring. The stranger took off his hat and said:

"'Gentlemen, you have invited me to drink, and I have declined, and I want to say right now that the man don't live that can make me drink if I don't want to. I'm an invalid, seeking health in this country, and I have no shooting irons, but as some of you insist on my drinking I'll make a proposition. Clear the ring and give me a fair show, and if there is any man with his fists that can make drink, why, I'll drink.'

"As there were a dozen or more spoiling for a fight the tenderfoot was soon accommodated. They formed a ring, and Red Jack claimed the honor of cleaning the new man out. The stranger took off his coat, shirt and shoes, turned up his pants and stood the prettiest looking figure you ever see, and after a minute they came together. Red Jack sailed at him like a mad bull, but the youngster stepped back, dodged him quick as a beam of light, and as Jack went by he socked it to him right under the jaw and simply drove him head first into the crowd. Then another fellow jumped in, one of the best fighters in the country. He made a feint and tried to grab the tenderfoot by the legs, but before he could move the little man butted him on the forehead so hard that he dropped like a log. Two others he laid out at quick notice. His fists seemed to glance from one to another, and they never hit him. In this way he topped off six men, and when no one else entered the ring he asked if they were satisfied that he didn't want to drink. You may be sure they were. The joke of it was that he was the champion middleweight fighter of Australia, and it was all practice to him."—Pasadena (Cal.) Cor. New York Sun.

GRACE.

A REMINISCENCE.

BY HAMLIN GARLAND.

(Copyright, 1895, by Irving Bacheller.)

CHAPTER I.

Sunday is the day for courtship on the prairie. It has also the piety of cleanliness. It enables the young man to get back to a self-respecting sweetness of person. It enables the girls to look as nature intended, dainty and pure.

The change from everyday wear and tear on the part of young workmen like Ben Griswold was more than change; it was transformation.

It took courage to go through it all. Yes, it took more than courage—it took love. Ben arose a little later on Sunday morning than on weekdays, but there were the chores to do as usual. The horses must be watered, fed, and curried, and the cows were to milk, all before breakfast at half-past seven.

After breakfast he threw off the cares of the hired hand. When he came down from the little garret into which the hot August sun streamed redly, he was a different man. Clean from tip to toe, newly shaven, with a crackling white shirt, a linen collar and a new suit of store clothes, he felt himself a man again, fit to meet maidens.

His partner, being a married man, was slouching around in his tattered and greasy brown denim overalls. He looked at Ben and grinned.

"Got a tag on y'rself?"

"No; why?"

"Nobod'y know ye, if anything happened to ye. There's thirty dollars gone to the dogs." He sighed. "O, well, you'll get over that, just as I did."

"GOT A TAG ON YOURSELF?"

"I hope I won't get over liking to be clean," Ben said a little sourly. "I won't be back to milk."

"Didn't expect ye. That's the very time o' day the girls are purtiest—just about sundown. Better take Rock. I may want the old team myself."

Ben hitched up and drove off in the warm bright morning, feeling a wonderful elation. He was clean and self-respecting once more. His freshly shaven face felt cool, and his new suit fitted him well. His heart took on a great resolution, which was to call upon Grace.

It made his brown hands shake to think of it. He remembered how many times he had sworn to do that and had never had the courage, though it seemed she allured him at times.

He overtook Milton Jennings on his way along the poplar lined lane.

"Hello, Milt, where you bound?"

Milton looked up with a curious look in his laughing eyes. From the pockets of his long linen duster he drew a handful of beautiful scarlet and yellow Siberian crab-apples.

"See them crabs?"

"Yes, I see 'em."

Milton drew a similar handful out of his left pocket. "See those?"

"What y' goin' to do with 'em?"

"Take 'em home again."

Ben noticed something in Milton's voice which led him to ask:

"What did you intend doing with 'em?"

"Present 'em to Miss Cole."

Ben laughed. "Well, why didn't y' do it?"

Milton showed his white teeth in a smile that was frankly derisive of himself.

"Well, when I got over there I found young Conley's horse hitched to one post and Walt Brown's gray hitched to the other. I went in, but I didn't stay long, in fact I didn't sit down. I was afraid those infernal apples would roll out o' my pockets. I was afraid they'd find out I brought 'em over there for Miss Cole, like the darn fool I was."

They both laughed heartily. Milton was always as severe upon himself as upon anyone else.

"That's tough," said Ben, "but climb in, and let's go to Sunday school."

Milton got in, and they ate the apples as they rode along.

The Grove schoolhouse was the largest in the township, and was the only one with a touch of redeeming grace. It was in a lovely place. Great oaks stood all about and back of it, the woods grew thick, and a clear creek gurgled over its limestone bed not far away.

To Ben and Milton there was a strange charm about the Grove schoolhouse. It was the one place where they met the boys and girls in garments disassociated from toil. Sundays in summer, and on winter nights at lyceums or protracted meetings, they came to see the girls in their bright dresses, with their clear and (so it seemed) scornful, bright eyes.

All through the service Ben sat where he could see Grace by turning his head, but he had not the courage to do so. Once or twice he saw the curve of her cheek and the delicate lines of her ear, and a suffocating throb came into his throat.

He wanted to ask her to go with him [illegible] to the Methodist camp meeting, but he knew it was impossible. He could not say "good day" to her when she took pains to pass near him after church and speak to him. He nodded like a great idiot, all ease and dignity lost, his throat too dry and hot to speak.

He cursed his shyness as he went out after his horse. He saw her picking her dainty way up the road with Conrad Sieger walking with her. What made it worse was a dim feeling that she liked him, and would go with him if he had the courage to ask her.

"Well, Ben," said Milton. "It's settled we go to Rock river to-night to the camp meeting. Did you ask Grace?"

"No, she's going with Con. It's just my blasted luck."

"That's too bad. Well, come with us. Take Maud.'"

As they drove away they passed Grace on the road—that is to say, Ben hurried up to do so before they turned off into the yard.

"Going to the camp meeting, Con?" asked Milton in his merry voice.

"I guess so," said Conrad, a handsome, but slow-willed German.

As they went on Ben could have wept. His keener perception told him there was a look of appeal in Grace's upturned eyes.

He made a poor companion at dinner, and poor plain Maud knew he esquired her only out of pity. She was used to that and accepted it with a pathetic attempt to color it differently.

They got away about five o'clock.

Ben drove the team, seated in the front seat with Maud. Driving took his mind off his weakness and failure. Milton was very happy sitting beside his latest sweetheart. There was a certain seclusion about the back seat of the carryall which favored much merry skylarking.

It was growing dark as they drove up the Cedarville road, a delicious evening hour. The curving road along the river was a relief from the rectangular and sun-smitten roads of the prairie, and they lingered under the great oaks and elms which shaded the wagon track in spots. It would have been perfect, Ben thought, if Grace had been beside him.

He wondered how he should manage to speak to her. There was a time when it seemed easier. Now the consciousness of his love made the simplest question seemed like the great question.

Other teams were abroad laden with young people, some returning, some going. A camp meeting had come to mean a score of great amusements, like a circus, and young people from all over the country drove down on Sundays, as if to some celebration with fireworks.

"There's the lane," said Milton. "See that team goin' in?"

Ben pulled up and they looked at it doubtfully. It looked dangerously miry. It was quite dark now and Ben said:

"That's a scaly piece of road."

"O, that's all right. Hark!"

As they listened they could hear the voices of the exhorters nearly a mile away. It pushed across the cool spaces with a wild and savage sound. The young people thrilled with excitement.

"There they are, that's the road!"

Insects were singing in the grass. Frogs with deepening chorus seemed to mark the coming of night, and above these peaceful sounds came the wild shouts of the far-off preacher, echoing through the cool, green arches of the splendid grove.

The girls sat silent, listening to the voices growing louder.

Lights appeared ahead, and the road led up a slight hill to a gate. Ben drove on under a grove of oaks, past dimly-lighted tents, whose open flaps showed tumbled beds and tables laden with crockery. Heavy women were moving about inside, their shadows showing against the tent wall like figures in a pantomime.

The young people alighted in curious silence. As they stood a moment, tying the team, the preacher lifted his voice in a brazen, clanging, monotonous reiteration of worn phrases.

"Come to the Lord—come now—come to the light. Jesus will give it. Now is the appointed time—come to the light."

From a tent near by came the groaning, gasping, gurgling scream of a woman in mortal agony.

"O, my God!"

It was charged with the most piercing distress. It cut the heart's palpitating center like a poniard thrust. It had murder and outrage in it.

The girls clutched Ben and Milton. "O, let's go home!"

"No, let's go and see what it all is."

The girls hung close to the arms of the young men and they went down to the tent and looked in.

It was filled with a motley group of people, most of them seated on circling benches. A fringe of careless or scoffing on-lookers stood back against the tent wall.

Occasionally a Norwegian farm-hand, or a bevy of young people from some near district, lifted the flap and entered with curious or laughing or insolent faces.

The tent was lighted dimly by kerosene lamps, set in brackets against the tent poles, and by stable lanterns set here and there upon the benches.

Ben and Milton ushered in the girls and seated them a little back. The girls smiled, but only faintly. The undertone of women's cries moved them in spite of their scorn of it all.

"What cursed foolishness!" said Ben to Milton.

Milton smiled, but did not reply. He only nodded toward the exhorter, a man with a hideous jumble of features and the form of a gladiator, who was uttering wild and explosive phrases.

"Oh, my friends! I bless the Lord for the SHALL in the word. You SHALL get light. You SHALL be saved. Oh, the SHALL in the word! You SHALL be saved!"

As he grew more excited his hoarse voice rose in furious shouts, as if he were defying hell. Foam lay on his lips and flew from his mouth. At every repetition of the word "shall" he struck the desk a resounding blow with his great palm.

"He's a hard hitter," said Milton.

At length he leaped, apparently in uncontrollable excitement, upon the mourners' bench and ran up and down close to the listening, moaning audience. He walked with a furious rhythmic, stumping action, like an Indian in the ghost dance. Wild cries burst from his audience antiphonal with his own.

"He 'SHALL' send light!"

"Send Thy arrows, oh, Lord."

"Oh, God, come!"

"He 'SHALL' keep His word!"

One old negro woman, fat, powerful, gloomy, suddenly arose and uttered a scream that had the dignity and savagery of a mountain lion's cry. It rang far out into the night.

The exhorter continued his mad, furious, lumping, barbaric walk.

Behind him a row of other exhorters sat, a relay ready to leap to his aid. They urged on the tumult with wild cries.

"A-men, brother."

"YES, brother, YES!" clapping their hands in rhythm.

The exhorter redoubled his fury. He was like a jaded actor rising at applause.

Out of the obscure tumult of faces and tossing hands there came at least certain recognizable features. The people were mainly farming folk, of the more ignorant sort, rude in dress and bearing, hard and bent with toil. They were recognizably of a class subject to these low forms of religious excitement which were once well-nigh universal.

The outer fringe continued to rifle scornfully and to jest, yet they were awed, in a way, by this sudden revealed deep of barbaric emotion.

The girls were appalled by the increasing clangor. Milton was amused, but Ben grew bitter. Something strong came out in him, too. His lip curled in disgust.

Suddenly, out of the level space of bowed shoulders, tossing hands and frenzied, upturned faces, a young girl leaped erect. She was strong and handsome, powerful in the waist and shoulders. Her hair was braided like a child's and fell down her back in a single strand. Her head was girlish, but her face looked old and drawn and tortured.

She moaned pitifully; she clasped her hands with wild gestures, ending in a quivering motion. The action grew to lightning-like quickness. Her head seemed to set in its socket. Her whole body stiffened. Gasping moans came from her clenched teeth as she fell to the ground and rolled under the benches, wallowing in the muddy straw and beating her feet upon the ground like a dying partridge.

The people crowded about her, but one of the preachers, a powerful man, with a harsh, domineering voice, roared above the tumult:

"S' down! Never mind that poor girl. She's all right; she's in the hands of the Lord."

The wild tumult went on and the people settled into their seats again. Ben rose to go over where the girl was and the others followed.

A young man seated by the struggling girl held her hand and fanned her with his hat, while some girl friends, scared and sobbing, kept the twitching limbs covered. She rolled from side to side restlessly, thrusting forth her tongue as if her throat were dry. She looked like a dying animal.

Maud clung to Milton.

"Oh, can't something be done?"

"Her soul is burdened for you!" cried a wild old woman to the impassive youth who clung to the frenzied girl's hand.

A moment later, as the wild chorus of yells, songs, incantations, shrieks, groans and prayers swelled higher, a farmer's wife on the left uttered a hoarse cry and stiffened and fell backward upon the ground. She rolled her head from side to side. Her eyes turned in. Her lips wore a maniac's laugh, and her troubled brow made her look like the death mask of a tortured murderer, the hell horror frozen on it.

She sank at last into a hideous calm, with her strained and stiffened hands pointing weirdly up. She was like marble. She did not move a hair's breadth during the next two hours.

Over to the left a young man leaped to his feet with a scream:

"Jesus, Jesus, Jesus."

The great negress caught him in her arms as he fell, and laid him down, then leaped up and down, shrieking:

"O, Jesus, come. Come, O thou Lamb."

Around her a dozen women took up her cry. Most of them had no voices. Their horrifying screams had become hoarse hisses, yet still they strove. Scores of voices were mixed in the pandemonium of prayer.

All order was lost. Three of the preachers now stood shouting before the mourners' bench, two were in the aisles.

One came down the aisle toward the girl with the braided hair. As he came he prayed. Foam was on his lips, but his eyes were cool and calculating; they betrayed him.

As he came he fixed his gaze upon a woman seated near the prostrate girl, and with a horrible outcry the victim leaped into the air and stiffened as if smitten with epilepsy. She fell against some scared boys who let her fall, striking her head against the seats. She rolled down upon the straw. They looked like sisters. They had round, pretty, but childish faces.

Milton and the rest retreated. They smiled no more; they were horrified, stricken.

Squads of workers now moved down the aisles; in one they surrounded two people, a tall, fair girl and a young man.

"Why, it's Grace!" exclaimed Maud. Ben turned quickly. "Where?" They pointed her out.

"She can't get away. See! O, boys, don't let them—"

Ben pushed his way toward her. His face was set in a fierce frown, bitter, desperate.

Grace stood there. On one side was one of the powerful elders; a woman of the same sort was upon the other. Conrad, over-awed, had fallen into a trembling stupor. Grace was alone.

The elder's hand hovered over her head, on her face a deadly pallor had settled, her eyes were cast down, she breathed in great gasps; she was ready trembled from head to foot. She to fall.

"Get out o' my way," shouted Ben, shouldering up the aisle. His words had oaths, his fists were like mauls.

"Grace!" he cried and she heard. She looked up and saw him coming; the red flamed over her face.

The power of the preacher was gone.

"Let me go," she cried, trying to wring herself loose.

"You are going to hell. You are lost if you do not—"

With one thrust Ben cleared her tormentor from her arm. For one moment the wordless young man looked into her eyes; then she staggered toward him. He faced the preacher.

"You keep your hands off her, or I'll smash your face," he said. In the tumult his words were lost, but the look on his face was enough. The exhorter fell away.

Their retreat was unnoted in the tumult. At the door they looked back for an instant at the demoniacal scene.

At the mourners' bench were six victims in all stages of induced catalepsy, one man with head flung back, one with his hands pointing, fixed in furious appeal. Another with bowed head was being worked upon by another brother of hypnotic spells. He struck with downward, positive gestures on either side of the victim's head.

Over another the negress towered, screaming with panther-like ferocity:

"Git under de blood! Git under de blood."

As she screamed she struck down at the mourner with her clinched fist. On her face was the grin of a wildcat.

Out under the cool, lofty oaks, the outcry was more inexpressibly hellish, because overhead the wind rustled the sweet green leaves, crickets were chirping and the scent of flowering fields of buckwheat was in the air.

Grace grew calmer, but she clung with strange weakness to her lover. She felt he had saved her from something, she did not know what, but it was something terrifying to look back upon.

Conrad was helpless. Ben bundled him into the carryall and took his place with Grace. The horse and carriage belonged to Grace's father, anyhow, but Ben did not stop to argue. He would have done the same had they belonged to Conrad himself.

On the long ride home, Grace lay within his right arm, and the young man's tongue was unchained. He talked, and his spirit grew tender and manly and husbandlike, as he told his plans and his hopes. Hell was very far away, and Heaven was very near.

THE END.

"Wants 'Em Bad."

A little story is told in Bruce's "Life of General Houston" which illustrates the familiar way in which military orders were expressed sometimes during the civil war.

In a certain battle a Confederate commander stood upon a hilltop gloomily watching the Union battery which was making havoc of his troops. At the foot of the hill, on the other side, was his last body of reserves; by his side stood his aide-de-camp in shirt sleeves.

"Tom," said the general quietly, without turning his head, but his lips quivering, "I want them guns—want 'em bad."

The aid nodded, turned his horse and dashed down hill to the reserve.

"Boys," he shouted, jerking his thumb over his shoulder, "the old man says he needs those guns over there. Suppose we go get them for him."

There was a yell of approval, and in a few minutes the general had the guns.

A Knowing Cat.

William Gilen of New London threw some lobster meat to his cat. Cats are very fond of this delicacy, so what was William's surprise on seeing Grimalkin lug the meat around the corner. Following her, he found that she had placed it carefully in front of a large rathole as a bait. Then she lay in wait behind a barrel until an unwary rat came out and snapped the bait, when pussy pounced on him and broke his back with a single shake.—Hartford Courant.

Wasn't a Fool.

The late Dr. Edward Beecher on one occasion was dining with friends and inadverently took a mouthful of exceedingly hot coffee, says The Argonaut. Immediately he deposited it upon his plate, and, turning around, remarked, "A fool would have swallowed it."

A contemporary remarks that you can't keep women away from weddings. You don't want to. What would a wedding amount to if there was no woman there?

No less than 86,000,000 eggs are consumed each year in London, most of which come from over the sea.

THE MONTH OF REST.

"LAY BY" TIME AND ITS PLEASURES IN THE SUNNY SOUTH.

While the Fields Are Ripening In August the Work People Do Little Work, but Spend the Time In Visiting and Otherwise Enjoying Themselves.

In the cotton planting districts and on the rice plantations the interval between the last working of the crops and the beginning of the harvest is called "lay by" time. It occurs in the month of August and is looked forward to with pleasure by white and black alike.

"Lay by" time means rest for the hoe hands, women and children, who have chopped away endless hours beneath the burning sun of May, June and July; rest for the men who have followed the furrows up and down the measureless rows since the last of February; rest for the mules and oxen which have tugged at the plow each day through all those months and now are free to graze and doze in turn in the green spaces of the pasture. The last work has been done to the cotton; it is now too strong and vigorous for the grass to interfere with its growth, and the wide acreage is studded with bolls and gemmed with gay colored blossoms. The rice is heading in its fretted sheath, the corn swelling in the green swathed ear, and the peanut, the sorghum and the sugar cane are all maturing in rank and luxuriance. "Peas ripe?" the quail calls across the fields, surveying the promising outlook, and his mate pipes her three sweet notes in precise approval, thinking of provender for the brown covey later on.

Uncle Ned lies in the shade of his cabin, idly smoking his corncob pipe, and the breeze that skims the cornfield fans his temples as it hurries by and ruffles the quilt patch which his wife is placing in squares and diamonds in order to get the best effect.

The circuit preacher looks upon "lay by" time as his peculiar harvest, and the politician likewise avails himself of this season of leisure and sunny weather to get certain arguments and schemes of his own before the public.

The south is noted for its large families and equally noted for the strong attachment which binds those families together. In the rural districts and smaller towns whole communities are related, and many boast that for many generations no single member has married outside the pale of consanguinity. It is in "lay by" time that this bond of brotherhood or sisterhood or cousinhood finds opportunity for expression. Black Billy, Boston or the gray mule is not needed on the farm in this halcyon season and can be hitched up to take the master and his family to visit Cousin Jake or Aunt Merlina, 'way up in Lexington or down on Sandy Run, as the case may be, the time being more auspicious for this pilgrimage than even the Christmas season, owing to the midsummer condition of the roads.

It is not merely human freight that Black Billy and Boston transport to Cousin Jake's. Pink home cured hams that were sewed into their coarse coverings by painstaking feminine fingers are stowed away in the bottom of the carryall, along with loaves of famous light bread made with grandmother's yeast and catsup and sweet pickles prepared especially for this occasion. It will take the visitors a day and a half to go and the same to return, but they will spend at least two days at Cousin Jake's and hear the news of himself and his vicinity that has occurred since their last visit.

"I likes for lay by time to come, 'cause people keep a-stirrin 'bout so," comments Maum Dilcie, whose cabin commands a view of the neighborhood road. "I done see five buggies pass here today. Dem chillun makes right smart, too, a opening de gate," she continues as a fleet footed grandson, who contrives to run even though hampered with trousers three sizes too big for him, flings wide the broad barred gate to admit a waiting team.

"Dem's Betsy Spriggins' chillun gwine to spend a time wid her," adds the old woman, shading her eyes with her hand in order to scrutinize the strangers, and as the heavy rockaway, with its budgets and parcels and trunk tied on behind, lumbers slowly out of sight, she indulges in reminiscences concerning the Spriggins family and characteristics.

Although fond of motion and excitement, the negroes, as a race, take their pleasure sadly, and having funeral sermons preached is a conspicuous diversion among them in "lay by" time. "De buryin was corn plantin season in March, but de funeral gwine be preach next Sunday," they explain to one who does not understand this custom, and the relatives of the dead brother or sister hunt up appropriate badges of mourning and prepare to take a conspicuous part in the purposely delayed ceremonies.

A burying and a funeral are two distinct occurrences in plantation etiquette, and not at all synonymous, although the functions of the burying are not in the least abbreviated because the funeral at a later date is to supplement it. The dead are interred precisely at the same hour of day or night at which they expired, but the funeral takes place on a Sunday morning, months later, when the virtues of the dead man are extolled or his sins expatiated upon, with more or less eloquence, the preacher never hesitating to indicate plainly his convictions as to the destination of the departed soul.

"Did they use to have a 'lay by' time in the old slave days?" was asked of a white haired negress.

"Dey was always bound to have it while waitin for de cotton to open and jist 'fore strippin fodder time," was the answer. "All 'tis, de white people never let us fling work away and study 'bout nothin at all but play, like de colored people does now. We had to rake straw and patch up fence and do light work one way and annudder, and de womens was give our winter frock and body clothes to sew. De white people always did have a mighty jubilation and visitin 'bout mongst one anudder in de 'lay by' time, seein its sich a sweet season, and eberyt'ing growin so pretty," and the old slave looked approvingly at the green gourd vines at her feet and the greener fields that spread beyond quite down to the banks of the creek.

But this "sweet season" is of only brief duration. By Sept. 1 every hand on the place and every vehicle and animal that can be put in motion will be busy gathering the crop and carrying it to market or stowing it away in cornhouse or barn.—Cor. New York Tribune.

WEDDED AT SCOTCH PLAINS.

MISS ROBISON BECOMES THE WIFE OF A BROOKLYN MAN.

The Ceremony Performed Amid a Floral Display and Admiring Friends—Gowns of the Fair Members of the Bridal Party.

A charming wedding was witnessed in the Scotch Plains Baptist church yesterday afternoon at four o'clock, when Miss Grace Robison, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Robison, became the wife of Wm. Bridges Noble. Long before the appointed hour the handsome edifice was filled with relatives and friends of the bride and groom. Palms and choice flowers were prettily arranged in the front part of the church, forming an attractive scene.

Miss Hayes, organist of the church, rendered classic selections while the guests were awaiting the arrival of the bridal party. Precisely at four o clock the first notes of Lohengrin's wedding march were heard, as the bridal party entered the church. The ushers preceded the maid of honor, Miss Louise Robison, sister of the bride, who was becoming in a gown of green broadcloth, trimmed with green velvet and Persian buttons. She carried a bouquet of daybreak carnations. Then followed the bride leaning on the arm of her father. She was gowned in golden brown broadcloth trimmed with sable fur, and carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums.

They were met at the altar by the groom, best man, William Stoddard, of New York, Rev. J. S. Braker, the pastor, who performed the ceremony of the Episcopal church. The responses by each were noticeably clear. The bride was given away by her father and the marriage was performed with a ring.

As Mendelssohn's wedding march was being rendered the bridal party retired from the church just the reverse of entering.

Mr. and Mrs. Noble were brought to Plainfield in a coach and took a train at the North Avenue station for a bridal tour. On their return they will reside in Brooklyn for the winter. Mr. Noble has an excellent position in a New York bank and both he and his wife are exceedingly popular among a large circle of friends. An informal reception to the friends and relatives was held at the house after the ceremony, and greatly admired were the beautiful and costly presents which included a quilt from the groom's mother which was a present to her forty years ago when she was married, silver knives and forks, paintings, china, banquet lamp, onyx table, fancy work and a pocket book containing $50 in greenbacks. There was also a handsome carving set and several choice pieces of glassware.

The ushers at the church were Richard Robison, brother of the bride, Arlington M. Drake, Charles Patterson, of Scotch Plains, and Irving Quereau, of New York.

Trinity Church Election.

The annual election of elders and deacons of Trinity Reformed church was held last evening. Robert Clark, Daniel Van Winkle, and F. E. Smith were elected elders for two years, the two former being re-elected. For deacons, Messrs. E. E. Anthony, F. C. Adams and R. A. Meeker were elected for two years, the two former being re-elected. F. S. Cutter was also elected deacon for one year to fill the unexpired term of A. B. Clemens who has removed from the city.

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family has need of it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once and you will never regret it. A DISPUTED BILL.

Results in a Law Suit Between An Administrator and a Physician.

The case of George D. Morrison, administrator of R. W. Rice, against Joseph F. Berg, on contract, was tried before Justice Newcorn yesterday afternoon.

The action arose over a disputed bill which Mr. Morrison presented to Dr. Berg for payment. The account was opened in December, 1894, through the solicitation of Henry T. Williams who owed the doctor a bill for medical services. Williams was at that time in the employ of R. W. Rice & Co., and urged the doctor to trade out the amount of his claim with the firm and told him that he would settle with R. W. Rice & Co. for the amount of the bill. The doctor accepted the agreement and supposed the matter settled. Williams failed to account to the firm or to inform them of the transaction; and Mr Morrison finding the account opened upon the books was compelled by Dr. Berg to bring suit for collection.

After hearing the testimony Justice Newcorn rendered judgment for the plaintiff. Lawyer R. P. Bell, of Elizabeth, represented Dr. Berg, and Lawyer C. L. Murphy, the plaintiff.

A List of the Class of '96 at Leal's School.

The members of the class of '96 at Leal's School met again yesterday afternoon. It was decided that a class pin or ring be adopted, and that a New York designer be asked to make some original designs, using colors which do not belong to any prominent college.

The class is composed of the following: Willard Tracy, Joseph Wadsworth, Raymond A. McGee, Benjamin O. Bowers, Jr., Gilbert Lovell, J. Vincent Rittenhouse, W. Kirby Dwight, Herbert Johnson, and William M. McCutchen.

To the Friends of the Childrens' Home.

The treasurer's report of the Childrens' Home shows that they only have money enough for six weeks expenses. Tuesday afternoon I had applications for the immediate admission of seven children from three families. In two cases the father's had left the family without any support. In one of these the mother is dead and there is no one to care especially for the children. The last is a domestic now in service, who would pay partial board. Money may be sent to Miss Ella Serrell, 625 West Front street, or Mrs. M. E. Kimball, 219 East Fifth street. Fruits, vegetables and groceries, new or second hand clothing in good order, will be acceptable. M. E. Kimball, President.

A PUGILISTIC MILL.

"Gentle Willie" Murphy and John Morecraft Have a Scrap.

A prize fight took place in the suburbs of this city Sunday night, and Gov. Werts was not asked for a license, either. The principals were "Gentle Willie" Murphy of baseball renown, and John Morecraft, a carpenter by trade, but who has not been working for some time. "Gentle Willie" has been in town for several weeks, employed as an assistant by a city drayman. Some time ago a difference arose between the erstwhile ball player and Morecraft, and last week the ill-feeling between the two became so bitter that they decided to have it out in a ring in true pugilistic style.

Sunday night, accompanied by a number of friends, they went to Scotch Plains, where in an isolated spot an improvised battle-ground was pitched and the two men fought out their differences. Which one was victorious it has been impossible to learn, as the affair has been kept very quiet by those who witnessed it.

THE BOWLING SEASON TO BEGIN.

The Y. M. C. A. Will Have a Team and May Enter a Tournament.

C. A's, of Trenton, Newark, New Brunswick, and Orange, asking that Plainfield enter a team in a tournament with the other teams. There is plenty of good material in the association, and Physical Director McPhie seems heartily in favor of putting a team in the tournament.

With the reopening of the classes in the gymnasium, the bowling alleys are used most of the time and the experts are rapidly getting into good form again. Several of the new members are well up in the game, and bowling promises to hold a prominent position in the athletic department of the association.

HE WAS A NOVICE.

And He Felt the Usual Longing to Run Into Something.

The readiness of the beginner at bicycle riding to run into everything is well known and but for the gentleness of D. W. Littell's horse last evening there would have been a serious accident. Shortly after 9 o'clock Webster Littell was driving down West Second street on the right hand side of the road, and coming up on the other side was a cyclist, who, when he had almost reached Littell, started straight for the horse. Littell stopped the animal but that didn't make any difference, for the rider came straight for the horse, striking him directly in front. Instead of running the horse jumped over the man with his front feet while the bicycle went under his hind feet and the wheel. The man was not seriously injured and crawled out of his precarious position pulling his wheel after him. He then remarked to Littell that he had only ridden a wheel four times but supposed that every one must pay for learning.

MARRIED IN ST. MARY'S.

Miss Margaret Wierenga Becomes the Wife of Joseph Hyland.

There was a large gathering of relatives and friends at St. Mary's R. C. church yesterday afternoon at 4:30 when Miss Margaret Wierenga, the youngest daugter of Mr. and Mrs. John Wierenga, was united in marriage to Joseph Hyland. While the bridal party was entering the church Lohengren's wedding march was rendered by Miss St. Leger.

The groom and bridemaid, Miss Minnie Welsh, entered first, and were followed by the bride leaning on the arm of the best man, Joseph Porter, of New York. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Murphy.

The bride was charmingly gowned in white silk with tulle veil and a wreath of orange blossoms, and carried white roses, while the bridesmaid wore a gown of white albatross, trimmed with satin ribbon. She also wore a large white hat and carried pink roses. Mendelssohn's wedding march was rendered as the bridal party left the church.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the groom's home on the Rahway road, where the couple will live in the future.

A costly and handsome collection of presents were received by the bride and groom. Excellent music was furnished by O'Reilly, and it was late when the happy event came to a close. Mr. and Mrs. Hyland left about midnight amid a shower of rice and old shoes, to take the 1:17 train for Washington, where they will remain for a time. Guests were present from New York, Massachusetts, Elizabeth and Plainfield.

MOSTLY RAIN WATER DRAINS.

Street Commissioner Meeker Investigates the Pipes Running Into Green Brook.

In the interest of the Plainfield Board of Health, Street Commissioner Meeker made an investigation a short time ago of the drains running into Green brook and the mill race. He found one more drain than the inspector of the borough did, and with the aid of a tape line located the drains exactly. He then located them on the surface and found that over two-thirds of them were merely to carry off the rain water from the roofs. The others were supposed to be sewer drains and the owners were ordered by the board to break their connections. Whether the orders of the board have been complied with is another question.

Greatest Convention Ever Held.

The news bulletin sent out by the New Jersey Christian Endeavor convention has the following to say about Plainfield '96:

Plainfield '96—Plainfield came down to Atlantic City, 241 strong, to fulfill the pledge made to their successful rivals of last year, and to secure the convention for next year. Both ends were accomplished; they were a most important factor in the convention and to their delight were awarded the next convention by the executive committee. Although the committee had to weigh most carefully the pleas of the claimants, the other one being Paterson, before reaching this result, Paterson was sent home, as Plainfield was last year, to lengthen the ladder in order to reach the coveted prize. Plainfield is laying plans for the greatest convention ever held in New Jersey, and the leaders are men who know how to count the cost. May success crown their efforts.

STRUCK BY THE TROLLEY.

MRS. ROSETTA KNOCKED DOWN AND QUITE BADLY HURT.

She Was Deaf and Did Not Hear or See the Approaching Car—Motorman Higgins Blameless for the Accident.

The first serious accident in the city resulting from the trolley car in which a person was injured, occurred this morning. About ten o'clock Mrs. Cecelia Rosetta started from her home at 527 Watchung avenue and went to MacDonald's grocery store to purchase some articles. Mrs. Rosetta is a stout woman of about fifty-eight years of age and is quite deaf. On several occasions she has narrowly escaped being struck by a car as she is unable to hear the warning bell. Mrs. Rosetta's home is on the east side of Watchung avenue, and at Front street she crossed over on to her own side. When she had almost reached her home for some reason she started to cross the street again.

As she left the sidewalk, an electric car turned the corner from Front street. Motorman Morris Higgins saw her and rang the bell, but she paid no attention. Then seeing that she did not hear him, he put on the brake with all his might, ringing the bell and shouting at her all the time. But Mrs. Rosetta went on and had just passed the middle of the track when the car which had not quite stopped struck her and knocked her down. Then just as Motorman Higgins stopped the car, the wheel-guard struck her in the hip. The car backed off, and Frank Vermeule and the conductor and motorman assisted her to her home.

Dr. Long, who happened to be passing, came in, but seeing that she was not dangerously injured, awaited the arrival of the family physician, Dr. O. L. Jenkins, who had been sent for. He arrived and soon after Dr. Fritz, president of the railroad. The physicians examined her and found that her shoulder had been sprained, her body was somewhat bruised, while there was a small cut on her leg.

Every effort was made by Motorman Higgins to prevent the car from striking her and he is in no way to blame for the accident.

THE INDIANA SPEEDED

Good Showing on the Unofficial Trial Trip.

An Average Speed of 15.31 Knots Against a Strong Tide Over Half of the Government Course—Machinery Worked Smoothly—Absolute Absence of Vibration.

Boston, Oct. 17.—The battleship Indiana was given a preliminary run over the official trial course yesterday, and so successful was the trial that when the boat reached the upper end of the course Edwin S. Cramp decided that it was unnecessary to speed her back again. The Indiana got under way at 8:30 a. m. from Boston light and started down the bay to cape Ann. At 8:50 the ship was going ahead at full speed, and when about seven miles from the starting line the forced draught was turned on. The course was from cape Ann to Boone island, a distance of 31 knots, and was marked by six can buoys at an equal distance apart of 6.2 knots. At 10:30 the starting point was crossed. At 10:55 the second buoy was left astern, the speed between the two buoys being fifteen knots. At 11:20 the third buoy was passed, the speed between the two buoys being 15.1 knots. At 11:43 the fourth can was alongside, the speed between the third and fourth being 15.75. At 12:07 the fifth buoy was passed, the speed between the fourth and fifth being 15.64. At 12:32 the sixth and last buoy was passed, the speed between the fifth and sixth being 15.17.

Average Speed 15.31 Knots.

The average speed for the run up was 15.31. Although the Cramps expected to do fifteen knots easily with the boat, they are more than pleased with the showing she made on the run. The tide was running against her rather fast and cut off probably three-quarters of a knot. There were two particularly noticeable things developed in the run. One was the absolute absence of the usual vibration that the powerful engines of a big ship make and the other was the bow wave cast off by the ship. The torpedo tube in the bow threw up quite a wave, but the bow of the boat itself cleft cleanly through the water and the lateral waves, instead of extending many feet on each side of the ship did not extend much further than fifteen feet and then they converged sharply inwards and clung to the vessel's side, leaving no side wave at all.

Proved a Great Boat.

When Mr. Cramp found the ship had done so remarkably well on the run up he concluded not to push her on the way back. The forced draught was taken off and eighteen minutes were consumed in turning. The ship passed the first buoy on the return at 12.50 and she jogged back at an easy average speed of 13.03 knots, passing the last buoy on the return trip at 3.13. The engines of the Indiana are, with one exception, the finest that have ever been built by the Cramp company. The engines of the cruiser New York were the most perfect that had ever been previously built by the Cramps, and those of the Indiana worked as well as did those of the New York on her trial trip. The engines ran as smoothly as if they had been working for months and not the slightest heating of any of the crossheads of journals was observed. On the whole the Indiana proved herself a great boat.

Rides the Seas Like a Yacht.

The run of the Indiana from Philadelphia to Boston in the nasty head seas and this run under high pressure vindicated the title of American naval constructors and American shipwrights as the best in the world. Foreign critics have declared that the Indiana would be topheavy and that she would roll herself to death in any sort of a sea. Never were prophesies more completely refuted. The Indiana, with the heaviest weight of armor and guns above water of any ship in the world, rides the seas like a yacht.

AREAS COVERED BY WATER.

Secretary of Interior Gives a Decision on that Question.

Washington, Oct. 17.—The secretary of the interior in response to a letter of the commissioner of the general land office asking what the practice of the department was as to areas covered by water in permanent unsurveyed reservations where such reservations are used as a basis for indemnity selections by a railroad company, has decided that when rivers, lakes or other bodies of water are found within such reservation which under the manual of surveying instructions should be measured, the area of such bodies of water should be approximately ascertained and deducted from the basis for which indemnity may be allowed.

LYNCHING OF JEFF ELLIS.

The Most Horrible Affair of the Kind Ever Perpetrated.

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 17.—The mutilated remains of "Jeff" Ellis, the negro who was lynched yesterday morning for assaulting a girl, hung all day from the telegraph pole at the railroad crossing a few miles from here, the placard pinned on the body giving warning of death to the man who cut it down before 6.30 o'clock in the evening having the desired effect. The lynching of Ellis was probably the most horrible affair ever perpetrated in the south. The negro was run down Tuesday night in a mill near a swamp and the news soon spread and a vast crowd gathered. They took the wretch to the girl, who at once identified him as her assailant. He was then hustled down the road to the railroad crossing where a huge fire was kindled. He was told to pray, but although falling on his knees was too wild with fear to pray. While in this position he confessed to two murders of which he was suspected. Several members of the mob then advanced with open jackknives and severed his ears, fingers and toes. The wretch screamed with pain, but his torturers did not cease. The work of mutilation continued for fully 30 minutes and then a rope was placed around his neck and he was dragged to the pole fifty feet away. He was soon swung into the air. He was lowered and his head was chopped off with jack-knives. Then the rope was fastened round his ankles and he was again swung into the air feet foremost.

AN OBJECT OF SUSPICION.

The Spanish Minister Exercised Over the Steamer Woodhall.

Washington, Oct. 17.—The steamer Woodhall now at New Orleans, La., is the object of suspicion by the Spanish minister in this country, and he is in constant communication with the state department on the matter. Minister de Lome alleges, it is said, that the Woodhall, which cleared from Baltimore for Progreso, Mexico, landed en route on Cuban soil arms and ammunition for the insurgents. From Progreso the Woodhall proceeded to New Orleans, where she has been for some time. The collector at New Orleans has been instructed to furnish the Spanish authorities at New Orleans with all the information he posseses regarding the movements of the Woodhall. The vessel has not been seized by the United States authorities nor have any charges been made officially against her and she is lying at her dock, free to depart and innocent as far as the authorities here know of any infraction of United States laws.

Counsel for the condemned pleaded that his client had not been convicted in due process of law, because the grand jury which indicted him contained no members of his own race. The court told the attorney, Thomas F. Mahr, of Algiers, La., to strengthen the application with additional affidavits as to Murray's financial disability to pay the usual expenses and present it to-day.

SENTENCED FOR LIFE

An American Citizen Convicted in Cuba.

He Fought with the Patriots, But His Record Is Not of the Best—Rebel Defeat Reported via Government Sources—Casualties in the Spanish Army.

Havana, Oct. 17.—In the case against Gen Julio Sanguilly, an American citizen, who has been tried on the charge of rebellion against the Spanish government, Senor Ejulo, the attorney-general acting in the case, yesterday asked that the sentence of life imprisonment be imposed upon the prisoner. Senor Enjulo made the followiug conclusions: First—That Julio Sanguilly, an American citizen since 1889, is a born resident of this island, and was up to his arrest on Feb. 24, one of the most energetic ringleaders of the armed revolution that has broken out with the aim of obtaining the independence of Cuba. Second—That these crimes constitute the crime of rebellion. Third—That Julio Sanguilly is responsible for having directly taken part in the rebellion. Fourth—That there are no circumstances tending to mitigate the punishment of imprisonment for life which he has justly incurred and is demanded for this offense by the penal code. The defense of the prisoner is not yet known.

His Record Is Bad.

Julio Sanguilly, it is said, has a bad record, and it has been reported that the Cubans have threatened to assassinate him if he is released from custody. He was arrested in Havana in February with Aguirre, Ramon Perez, Trujillo and others and was incarcerated in the Cabanas prison. He fought with zeal during the revolt of 1868 and rose to the rank of general. But his conduct recently has not met with the approval of the patriots. He is said to have been short in his accounts with a railroad at Havana a few years ago, and it is said that he gambled away half of the funds collected by Manuel Garcia, which were given into his care to be used in the cause of Cuba, and some surprise was expressed that he was granted citizenship papers in New York.

NO ULTIMATUM TO ENGLAND.

The United States Offered Its Good Offices in Venezuelan Dispute.

London, Oct. 17.—In an interview last night the Hon. Thomas F. Bayard the American ambassador, denied the story that the United States had sent an ultimatum to Great Britain in regard to the latter arbitrating her difficulty with Venezuela. He explained that since the rupture between Great Britain and Venezuela there had been anxiety in the United States to procure a friendly settlement of the dispute, and, to that end, the United States had offered her good offices to Great Britain and had repeatedly tried to devise means to arrange the trouble. This, he added, was the present position. The longer the question was allowed to drift the more anxious the United States became to see it finally settled.

Diphtheria

✱ Less Fatal.

If the patient's strength can be maintained, and the great vital centres of the body "kept up" to the performance of their natural functions, they will thus dispel the disease germs that impregnate the entire body, and if sufficient vitality is experienced, the fatality of this dreaded disease is lessened a hundred-fold.

that greatest raw food, is a wonderful creator of new flesh and nerve tissue, is indispensible in the treatment of this malady, as it gives strength to the patient with the least effort on the part of the digestive organs, and in addition, being itself a germicide, it antidotes the existing microbes of the disease. The ease with which it can be taken when the lesions of the throat preclude the use of other foods, makes it an additional necessity for the sufferer's recovery.

P. T. DUFFY'S APPEAL.

Dismissed in the Supreme Court by Chief Justice Fuller.

Washington, Oct. 17.—The appeal of P. J. Duffy, auditor of the state of West Virginia from the decision of the circuit court of the United States for the district of West Virginia in favor of Alexander B. Green and Isaac E. Gates, which was docketed June 27, 1891, was dismissed in supreme court of the United States yesterday by Chief Justice Fuller. Green and Gates were trustees of a mortgage given by the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad company to secure the payment of certain bonded indebtedness, and brought suit to restrain Duffy and certain county officers from proceeding to collect certain taxes assessed against the railroad company in the years 1879-84, inclusive, amounting to $193,000 in the aggregate. The injunction prayed for was granted by the circuit court of the United States, and the then attorney-general of West Virginia on behalf of the auditor appealed to the supreme court of the United States. The record, which was quite voluminous, was not printed and the case was passed at last term at the request of T. O. Riley, attorney-general, in order to give the legislature an opportunity to make an appropriation to pay for the printing. The legislature has met and adjourned and failed to make the necessary appropriation. This fact being made known the dismissal of the case followed.

WANT THEIR JOBS RESTORED.

Discharged State Employes Claim Protection as War Veterans.

Albany, Oct. 17.—A number of veterans of the war who were discharged by Supt. Easton of the state department of public buildings from positions which they held as orderlies and watchmen in the new capitol building have made strenuous afforts to be reinstated, claiming that the civil service law protected them in their positions. As a result of their agitation of the question Col. Cole, Gov. Morton's private secretary, Attorney-General Hancock, C. T. Lincoln, the governor's legal adviser, and Supt. Easton will hold a conference today at the executive chambers to consider the question and determine just what course should be pursued in the matter. A committee representing the discharged veterans waited upon Col. Cole yesterday afternoon and asked the state officials to take some action looking to their reinstatement.

They demand ten and twelve cents respectively.

JAPAN'S NEW FLEET.

England and the United States Rivals for Its Construction.

Washington, Oct. 17.—Lieutenant Miyaoka, the naval attache of the Japanese legation, is one of the invited guests on board the battleship Indiana, which is at Marblehead for her trial trip. Lieut. Miyaoka is a graduate of the two naval schools at Tokio. He has been attached to the legation at Washington for several years and is a staunch friend of the United States. He will make an official report to the Japanese naval office respecting the performance of the Indiana, and whatever influence he can exert in having some of the new Japanese war vessels built abroad will be in favor of this country. On the other hand, a number of the experts at the Japanese navy department received their academic and technical training in England, and these gentlemen are strongly urging their government to have the new fleet built in that country. Notwithstanding these conflicting interests, it is believed that the Japanese goverment will place the contracts for the new additions to their fleet where they can, all other things being equal, be most cheaply constructed.

BELVA LOCKWOOD'S CASE.

Under $300 Bonds at Washington on a Charge of Libel.

Washington, Oct. 17.—Mrs. Belva Lockwood, the well-known female attorney and one time candidate for president, is under bond in the sum of $300 to await investigation by the grand jury of the charge of libel. The complainant in the case is Robert A. L. White, a lawyer and real estate broker, who formerly had his office in a building owned by Mrs. Lockwood. He charged that Mrs. Lockwood placed, or caused to be placed, on his office door libelous statements, charging him with having defrauded his former landlady for her rent and endeavoring to do the same with his present landlady. Two amateur detectives testified that they saw Mrs. Lockwood attach the placards to the door. She absolutely contradicted their testimony on every point. Her attorney was ex-Congressman Turner.

CLAIMS A GREAT FORTUNE.

Mr. Pass Says He Is Heir to About $45,000,000.

Lowell, Mass., Oct. 17.—James Pass, an engineer of this city, says he is the sole heir to an estate the personal property of which is worth from $4,000,000 to $22,000,000, besides an equal or greater amount in landed property in England. This, he says, comes to him from his mother's sister, Mary Pickering, of Bolton, Lancashire, who has been dead some thirty years. The documents, consisting of four wills, which confirm the property to him were recently found by him in an old writing desk descended to him on the death of his mother six or eight years ago. Mr. Pass announces that he is going to England on Saturday.

MASONIC TEMPLE TO BE SOLD.

Boston Masons Looking for Temporary Headquarters.

Boston, Oct. 17.—At a meeting held yesterday afternoon the directors of the Grand lodge of Masons of Massachusetts were empowered to sell the Masonic temple on the corner of Tremont and Boylston streets, recently damaged by fire. A suggestion has been made that the old public library building be hired until the new temple is completed, which will be in 1898 or 1899, and occupy it for Masonic purposes.

ATTENDANCE INCREASING.

Big Crowd Expected at Atlanta Exposition on Cleveland Day.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 17.—The attendance at the exposition is growing steadily. Chief Felder of the admissions department states that the increase this week over last, so far for the corresponding date, is 28 per cent. Everything points to an enormous attendance on Cleveland day next Wednesday. Excursions are coming from points 400 miles away. The National Road parliament meets to-day.

GOV. CLARKE GIVES IN

Will Not Oppose the Fight as Now Arranged.

Said To Be Satisfied That Only a Glove Contest Is Contemplated—Test Case To Be Made—One Active Opponent Says There Is No Law to Stop the Mill.

Hot Springs, Ark., Oct. 16.—A conference regarding the proposed fight took place at the Arlington hotel last night. Governor Clarke, Judge Duffie, Sheriff Houpt, State's Attorney Teague, the citizen's committee and their legal representatives participating. Newspaper men were excluded. A member of the conference stated after adjournment at 1 o'clock that the governor had agreed to leave the whole matter to the local authorities, that the latter have given him positive assurance that there will be no prize fight, but a glove contest as indicated in the revised articles of agreement as sent out yesterday. It is stated that the governor gave him positive assurance that if there was no law to prevent glove contests and if only a glove contest was contemplated he would not invade the city with an armed force to prevent it.

To Make a Test in Court.

The programme is now to make a test case by causing the arrest of Mahon and O'Donnell, who are both in close proximity to the city, some time to-day. They will be placed under bonds to keep the peace, which they will refuse to give, and they will go to jail, when a writ of habeas corpus will be sued out and taken before Chancellor Feazleton. More.

One Active Opponent Gives In.

Col. John J. Sumpter, a church member and one of the most active opponents of the mill, said this morning that he, in company with Judge Hutchins, had examined the statutes of the state and found that there is no law against prize fighting, and that he would oppose any attempt that might be made to place Garland county under martial law for the purpose of suppressing something that was not in violation of any law. In other words, he did not propose to violate the law himself, nor see it done if he could prevent it. He was assured by the governor that there would be no militia sent to Garland county, but the governor will insist that there shall be nothing more than a glove contest.

Fitz Insists on Hard Gloves.

Corpus Christi, Tex., Oct. 17.—Martin Julian will leave to-day for New Orleans. From there he will go to Hot Springs to size up the situation. When asked by the reporter if Fitzsimmons would consent to fight with soft gloves Julian answered emphatically, "No."

BARNETT ARRESTED.

Farden's Accomplice in the Adams Express Robbery.

New Orleans, Oct. 17.—James Barnett, who with John D. Farden robbed the Adams Express company at Terre Haute, Ind., of $16,000, has been arrested here. One hundred and fifty dollars of money was found on his person. He denies any complicity in the robbery, neither does he implicate Farden, and says his shortage amounts to only $250, which is due the Vandalia railroad, of which he was the city ticket agent. He also alleges that it would have been impossible to secure the amount named at one time as the company only did business of $25,000 per annum.

RIOTS AT AGRAM.

The Mobs Intensely Excited Against Magyars and Servians.

Vienna, Oct. 17.—The rioting at Agram, which began on the 14th inst. on the occasion of the opening of a new theatre by Emperor Francis Joseph, and was resumed yesterday, continued last night. The Croatian students, among whom the disorder originated, last night tore down the Hungarian flag from the statue of Gen. Jellachich and, after submitting it to many indignities, burned it. An enormous crowd had gathered on the streets, and cries of "Down with the Magyars!" were heard on all sides. The mob remains intensely excited against the Magyars and the Servians.

FOURTEEN BUILDINGS BURNED.

Destructive Fire at Tidioute, Pa. Houses Blown Up.

Tidioute, Pa., Oct. 17.—A bad fire took place here yesterday afternoon. The flames started in the livery stable of H. Hastings and with a high wind spread rapidly. A telegram was sent to Warren, Pa., asking for assistance. The fire was gotten under control after fourteen buildings had been distroyed. It was found necessary to blow up two small structures with dynamite in order to stay the progress of the flames.

J. E. MARTINE,
President Democratic Association.

The deadlock in the Elizabeth City Council over the payment of bills was broken last night, ten councilman, just the requisite number, voting for the payment of all outstanding claims against the city. The disputed salary bills of the six new policeman, which were the original cause of the deadlock, were also ordered paid.

R. V. Lindabury telegraphs to the Democratic State committee that "the prospects for the election of McGill are brightening every day. There was at first some distrust and perhaps a little ill feeling among certain elements. But both have now completely disappeared. The welcome change in sentiment is largely due to the personality of Chancellor McGill."

The present attitude of Editor Runyon towards those employed on the Daily Press resembles the street urchin who has a fancied grievance against a playmate, and attempts to get even by calling names. Editor Runyon needs to have his mouth washed out with soap—that is the way boys of immaturity are treated when their words display evidence of depraved thoughts. It has been a good many years since Editor Runyon claims to have been a student at college, but the effect of the stories for which he was famous as a relater of seem to still permeate his character. What a revengeful, hateful and vile disposition Editor Runyon exhibits when he indulges in such epithets as "sissy," and all because the Daily Press maintains the lead in furnishing live news. Calling names is boy's play.

MANY CANDIDATES IN UNION.

Numerous Republicans Willing to Run for the Assembly.

Candidates are looming up for the Republican nominations for Assembly in Union county, says the Newark News. The list of prospective aspirants now embraces Freeholder J. Martin Roll, of Springfield; ex-Attorney Clarence D. Ward, Justice William R. Frazee, ex-Mayor Chamberlain, and ex Councilman Joseph Potter, of Rahway; General George H. Rhodes, Freeholder Fred Miller, and ex-Alderman Augustus Y. Pool, of Elizabeth, with Plainfield and half a dozen other townships yet to hear from.

The Democrats cannot boast of such a wealth of material to pick from, as up to date the only name mentioned is Judge Green of Westfield, who ran last year and was beaten. Ex-School Commissioners Samuel Williams or Charles H. Moore each could get the nomination if they made a bid for it, but they positively decline to be candidates, as they say it would interfere with their business. Outside of Judge Green the Democrats just now appear to be at sea as to who will be their selection.

The game between the Y. M. C. A. team and the South Orange Field Club will not be played Saturday as the Orange boys secured a game before Plainfield's answer was received.

THEATRICAL.

The American theatre-goers of to day are the most advanced class of people in the way of amusements of any nation in the world, and their ideas change so often that unless managers watch closely and cater to what the public want, they are soon left in the background. Henry J. Sayers, the manager and author of "Cupid's Chariot," a musical comedy in three acts, which plays an engagement at Music Hall Monday night next, has always been recognized with strictly first-class shows, and his name at the head of any organization is a guarantee of its being a standard attraction. The author, watching closely the style of entertainment that pleases the masses, has come to the conclusion that a performance that has plenty of good comedy, lots of good music, staged with beautiful scenery, and produced by a company of metropolitan artists, with lots of pretty girls, is what the American theatre-goers of today want, and Mr. Sayers has put all of these requirements in the comedy of 'Cupid's Chariot." The management has secured Geo. Thatcher's XXth Century Minstrels, and, as a special feature, has engaged Raymon Moore, the world's best ballad singer, and who is also the composer of "Sweet Marie."

There is a particular strong bill this week at Proctor's Theater, 23d street, in New York. The pretty Swedish equilibrists, the Sisters Anderson, from the Winter Garden, Berlin, have become great favorites. Nothing so graceful and adroit in the way of intricate pedal juggling has ever been seen in this country. The brothers Donaldson and Ardel continue their acrobatic animal grotesquerie "Scenes at the Zoo." Redding and Stanton, whose acting would grace any legitimate stage, present "A Happy Pair," one of the daintiest of comedie ttas.

Grief Made Him Insane.

The authorities of Rahway have been asked to place Henry Mann, a resident of East Rahway, in an asylum. About a year ago his eight-year-old son was accidentally drown in the Rahway river. The father was frantic with grief, and his mind has slowly given away. He has made several attempts to kill himself.

Two Startling Cures by Dr. Greene's Nervura.

This Time One of the Cures Was in the Herald Office.

Both Struck Down By Terrible Nerve Disease.

Are Now Well, Strong and Vigorous Again.

By Using This Great Invigerator for Blood and Nerves.

[From the Syracuse Herald.]

Among those well-known residents of Syracuse, N. Y., who have received almost untold benefit from the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, can be counted Austin R. Whipple of No. 134 Linden Street, an operator of one of the type-setting machines in The Herald office. Mr. Whipple and Nervura are not new friends, for the gentleman can look back for some years since he first received relief from nervous prostration by its use after a strong recommendation from one of his own friends who had been cured of long-standing nervous prostration. Mr. Whipple's nervousness dated from the time that he met with loss of appetite and general debility resulting from overwork and taxation of his nervous system.

Mr. Whipple says that he began to receive noticeable benefit after he had taken two bottles of Dr. Greene's Nervura and a half dozen bottles proved so efficacious that he felt like a new man and was able to prosecute his duties even better than before he was overtaken with such agonizing nervous disorders. His recommend for Dr. Greene's Nervura comes from his heart and not from any selfish motive. He believes that Nervura taken as directed has been the means of saving the lives of many people who have taken it and received benefit almost from the first bottle taken.

"It gives me great pleasure to recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura," said Mr. Whipple, when asked for his opinion concerning it. "I can cheerfully advise my friends and all others who are suffering from nervousness to try Dr. Greene's Nervura."

Mrs. Eleanor M. Sherwood, of No. 303 Shonnard street, Syracuse, a widow who has been almost a life-long resident of this city, has very much to be thankful for after taking Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Mrs. Sherwood after the death of several members of her family within the space of a few months, lost control of her nervous system and became almost helpless. In fact she experienced a severe shock of paralysis affecting her entire left side. It left her a cripple and it was with the utmost difficulty that she was able to get about the house.

At the solicitation of some of her friends she tried a half dozen bottles of Dr. Greene's Nervura and she says that the effect was wonderful. She began to improve after taking three bottles and in a short time was able to get about with more freedom and comfort than she had dreamed of after experiencing the shock of paralysis. The remedy not only gave her great relief from the malady that had deprived her of all control, but her physical condition generally began to improve. Her blood which had been low and circulated sluggishly, began to take on new vigor, and she fairly began life over again, she says.

When seen at her home and asked what she thought of Dr. Greene's Nervura, Mrs. Sherwood said that she believed that it had saved her life.

"I believe that it is one of the greatest remedies for the blood and nervous disorders that will ever be known," she said. "There would be less call for physicians if the people would try the effects of taking a half dozen bottles. I believe that it is a great tonic and invigorator for the blood. To my mind nothing better can be taken when one feels the effects of a nervous strain or wants an invigorator at any time."

It is not a patent medicine, but the prescription of the most successful living specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th street, New York City. He has the largest practice in the world, and this grand medical discovery is the result of his vast experience. The great reputation of Dr. Greene is a guarantee that his medicine will cure, and the fact that he can be consulted by anyone at any time, free of charge, personally or by letter, gives absolute assurance of the beneficial action of this wonderful medicine.

A Household Treasure.

D. W. Fuller, of Canajoharie, N. Y., says that he always keeps Dr. King's New Discovery in the house and his family has always found the very best results follow its use; that he would not be without it, if procurable. G. A. Dykeman Druggist, Catskill, N. Y., says that Dr. King's New Discovery is undoubtedly the best cough remedy: that he has used it in his family for eight years, and it has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. Why not try a remedy so long tried and tested. Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c. and $1.00.

The Killing of McCarthy's Horse.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—The item in your paper last night contained several errors, and instead of correcting the item I shall state the case as it happened. I was called to adjust a sewing machine at Mrs. Peter Kunz's, who lives near Bound Brook, on the Opossum town road. I arrived there at 6:30 in the evening and tied my horse to a fence opposite the house. I remained in the house half an hour, when I found the horse was gone. It was very dark, and Mr. King went as far as the corner with a lantern, and we saw that he had turned towards home. I started for home expecting to find the horse when I got there. I arrived about nine o'clock and found that the horse had not arrived. I got a bicycle and started back to look for him. I went by the way of Dunellen to Mr. Close's place, through Cedar lane and over Eagle's crossing, and back to the house of Mr. Kuhns, and from there up the Opossum town road to Nelson Giles. Then to New Market, where I inquired of the gateman if he had seen anything of a horse and wagon going by. He stated that he had not.

It was then about 11 o'clock: I went to the other crossings and roads that I thought he might be on and arrived at home about 2 o'clock in the morning without having any tidings of him. The next morning Bennett Brittin and myself started and drove to New Brunswick and back but got no trace of the horse. At about 6 o'clock that evening John Kenney came and informed me that my horse had been killed the night before at Blackford's crossing at Samptown. On the following morning I investigated the affair and learned that he was killed at 10:50 the night he went away by a fast freight. I could trace him along the track for nearly four miles to about half a mile from Eagle's crossing. I went to the crossing and found that he had crossed the L. V. R. R. and then turned to the right between the C. R. R. and the L. V. R. R. and stood there for some time and then went along the side of the cut for half a mile. He must have stood in the place between the two railroads both times that I went by the crossing not twenty feet from the road and I did not see him. T. A. McCarthy.

THE GREAT DELUGE.

SOME OF THE MANY AND VARIED VERSIONS OF THE FLOOD.

The Most Skeptically Inclined Must Believe That Something of the Sort Actually Occurred, For It Has Been Perpetuated by Almost Every Nation and Race.

One of the most powerful and vivid descriptive portions of the book of Genesis is that devoted to the wonderful story of the deluge. Together with the accounts of Adam's fall, the slaying of Abel and the turning of Lot's wife into a pillar of salt, every one remembers from childhood how Noah was warned of the doom impending over the children of men and how he constructed a huge ark in which he did live, himself and his family and two of every beast of the field and fowl of the air, for the space of 190 days, or until the waters subsided and the dry land appeared. But the biblical recital of this terrible visitation of divine wrath is by no means the only one. In fact, the most skeptically inclined must believe that something of the sort actually occurred long ago, for it has been perpetuated not only in the Talmud and Koran, but in the legends of almost every nation and race that ever lived on the face of the earth, including the Chinese, the ancient Aztecs of Mexico, the Indian tribes of North and South America and even the savages of Africa.

The story, of course, varies materially in the multitudinous traditions, but the gist of it remains substantially the same—namely, that the earth was once visited by a great flood in which nearly every living thing was overwhelmed and lost. Thus in the Koran we read that Noah constructed the ark with divine assistance and was railed at for his pains by the wicked. When the time prescribed for the punishment of mankind arrived, water was seen to flow from the burning oven of Noah's wife, and immediately all the veins and arteries of the earth broke and spurted out water.

Noah was then admonished in these words: "Take and bring into the ark two couples of every kind of animal, male and female, with all your family, except him who has been condemned by your mouth, and receive the faithful and even the unbelieving, but few only will enter." The Koran also says that the ark was built in two years, and that it contained three stories, the upper one for the birds, the middle one for the men and the provisions and the hold for the beasts. Canaan, the son of Ham, refused to be saved. Therefore Noah cursed him, and his posterity became black and were enslaved. The Persians assert that Ham incurred his father's malediction as well. When six months had passed, the ark rested on the top of Mount Djondi (Ararat), after having made the circuit of the world. Tabari says that two sorts of animals left the ark which had not entered it—the pig and the cat. Concerning the latter we have this interesting piece of information: When the rats began to make trouble, the voyagers complained to Noah. Whereupon the patriarch "passed his hand down the back of the lion, who sneezed, and the cat leaped out of its nose. And the cat ate the rats."

According to the Talmud, Noah and his family and one pair of each kind of beast were to be saved in the ark, but of every clean beast seven were to enter in. The rhinoceros, however, had to be left out, for the simple but sufficient reason that its neck alone was three miles long. Nevertheless all the rabbinic writers agree that the rhinoceros survived the flood; hence it is reasonable to suppose that the huge beast was taken in tow by a rope attached to its horn. Some authorities likewise declare that Noah extended his hospitality to another outsider in the shape of Og, the giant, who climbed on the roof of the ark and received his daily food through a hole bored in the side of the vessel.

Ararat has been known under this name for 3,000 years, and an Armenian writer declares that an entire country was so called after Arai the Fair, an ancient Armenian king, who lived about 1750 B. C. He fell in a bloody battle with the Babylonians, and the scene of his death was thenceforth known as Arai-Arat, or the Fall of Arai. Josephus refers to the mountain as Nazuana and declares that the remains of the ark were there to be seen carefully preserved.

Almost all the Asiatic traditions closely resemble the Biblical account. Berosus in his Chaldee history (B. C. 260) speaks of ten kings, who appear to correspond to the ten patriarchs in Genesis before the flood. The last of these kings was called Xisuthrus. Berosus relates that "Kronos appeared to Xisuthrus in a dream and warned him that all men would be destroyed by a deluge on the 15th of the month Daesios and commanded him to write down all the learning and science of men and to hide it in the sun city Siparis, and then to build a ship and enter it along with his family and relatives and nearest friends, and to take into it with him food and drink and beasts and winged fowl. When he was asked whither he was about to sail, he was bidden to reply, 'To the gods to pray them that men may prosper.'" Xisuthrus did as he was commanded, and when the flood showed signs of abating he sent out three birds in succession. The first and second came back, the latter with mud on its feet, but the third returned not. Soon after this the ship was stranded on a mountain, and Xisuthrus disembarked with his family, offered thanks to the gods and vanished. Subsequently the remaining survivors heard his voice in the heavens, bidding them fear God and to take his writings out of Siparis and from them instruct men.—New York Post.

He Took Her Back.

A witty and popular London clergyman had an unpleasant experience. One Sunday he was going up the steps of his church when he was asked by an old lady (who, of course, did not know him) to help her up the steps. With his usual good grace he complied with her request.

On reaching the top she asked him who was to preach.

"The Rev. Mr. Jelf," replied he, that being his own name.

"O Lor!" exclaimed the old lady, "help me down again. I'd rather listen to a man sharpenin a saw. Please help me down again; I don't care to go in."

At first he was inclined to refuse, but then he gently helped her down again, remarking, as he reached the bottom, "I would not go in either if I was not paid for it."—London Tit-Bits.

Music.

Music may be classed into natural, social, sacred and martial. It is the twin sister of poetry, and, like it, has the power to sway the feelings and command the mind. In devotion it breathes the pure spirit of inspiration and love; in martial scenes it rouses the soul to fearless deeds of daring and valor, while it alleviates the cares and enhances the innocent and cheerful enjoyments of domestic life.—Acton.

ENGAGED ONES IN SOCIETY.

What Etiquette Demands of the Future Husband and Wife.

An engaged girl may receive her future husband alone in her mother's drawing room, though it is requisite at some time during this daily visit after a considerate cough outside the portieres or preliminary rattling of a door knob for the maternal dignity to hover a moment on the threshold. Out of consideration of her lover's feelings she does not receive her young men friends save on her mother's day at home. She accepts no invitations, except to gatherings of her own sex, where he is not included and devotes every attention to his family, with peculiar courtesies to his parents.

It is considered most important that together they attend church at least once every Sunday. They may drive, walk and bicycle alone, but must take an obliging younger member of the family along to the theater, opera and concerts. It is permitted them to go to a dinner party with only her maid's company, yet to a ball an older woman relative is the proper companion, and any demonstrations of affection in public are utterly discountenanced.

Discussion has raged high at times on the question of just what part an engaged pair have a right to take in the frivolities of society, and of late it has been satisfactorily decided that when attending a dancing party the happy couple should take a few turns together in a round dance, with partners of their own choosing, and then take their leave. As to the exchange of gifts between these young people a new and very sensible decision has been reached respecting their proper bestowal and value.

The engagement ring may be as splendid or simple an affair as the man's taste and pocket can afford, while in exchange may be given a thin disk of ivory on which is painted a fair face, shut into a red leather, heart shaped case. This case is just large enough to fit nicely into an inside waistcoat pocket and closes with a lock, of which only the owner knows the spring. During the weeks of engagement an abundance of flowers, fruit, books, bonbons and odds and ends of bric-a-brac are tokens proper to lay on the shrine of love, but not until the week before the wedding ought jewels to be given, for beyond her engagement ring none of them can be used by the recipient, and in case of any rupture of the agreement the return of such gifts is an awkward duty.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

THE NEVILLE AFFAIR.

BY FRANK H. MARSH.

The day had been a dreary one; one of those foggy December days with which one becomes only too well acquainted, when residing in London; and for me, the time had passed at such a lagging pace that in the evening I put on my overcoat and started out for a stroll—despite the weather.

As I reached the street, where I stood undecided for a few moments, the darkening shadows of night were fast closing about the city. The atmosphere was damp and chilling. I concluded not to go very far, so I turned toward the private apartments of a friend who was at that time chief superintendent of the detective force of Scotland Yard.

A brisk walk of a few squares brought me to his door, and I was promptly admitted. I had barely exchanged greetings with him when we were interrupted by the entrance of one of the force, who, taking the chief aside, made some communication in a low tone, which I was unable to hear. The chief answered him, however, with less circumspection.

"I believe you've made a valuable capture, Barton," he said, in a tone that implied great satisfaction; "as soon as the prisoner arrives bring him in here where we will not be disturbed."

As soon as the door had closed on Barton he turned to me.

"Wharton," he exclaimed, "I believe we have at last apprehended the man who is responsible for the Neville affair."

"What's that?" I cried; "I thought the newspapers stated that the Nevilles had died from natural causes, and that the murder theory had no foundation—that it had, in fact, been thoroughly exploded. They even said that the police and your department had dropped the case and accepted the doctor's statement that they had died a natural death, although they were unable to agree wholly upon the cause for the same."

"You are quite right about the newspapers," said the chief, dryly; "they did make that statement; but sometimes they fail to read the minds, or to discover the inner workings, of this department. Duroch and myself were not so easily satisfied, even after the verdict rendered by the honorable M.D's. So we have been investigating quietly, so quietly that none of our own force even knew we were still working on the case."

The chief paused, handed me a cigar, and lighted one for himself, and then resumed meditatively:

"This has been a very strange and mysterious affair from the first. The Nevilles, as you know, are considered very respectable people, and their wealth enables them to mingle with the best society, and to get all the enjoyments possible from life. Of late years the doctor has not followed his profession, except to attend his friends, or else to relieve the poor and suffering waifs of humanity who were without means to procure the services of any other physician.

"His wife was also a kind woman, charitable and gentle hearted, who still retained a goodly share of that beauty which in her youth was most remarkable. When they first came here they were a fine-looking couple, he being about twenty-eight or thirty, and she four or five years his junior. She was at that time the most idolized woman in society; she was a little above the medium height, with a well-rounded form, and moving with the ease and grace of a queen. Her dark, glossy hair formed a crowning contrast for her fair face and tinted cheeks. Her teeth were like pearls, and shone through her lips, as they parted in frequent smiles, which were ever ready for her friends and admirers. If that did not captivate them the roguish look from her dark eyes, which usually accompanied the smile, would, for she was a finished coquette.

"Nearly all the men were in love with her and envied the doctor, who kept watch over her flirtations, for he was a little jealous of her, but so effectively concealed this weakness that only a close observer could notice it.

NEARLY ALL THE MEN WERE IN LOVE WITH HER.

"The first few years of their life here they were the gayest couple in society, in fact its very pulse. They attended all the receptions and grand functions, and gave more balls and parties than any others of their set. But as they grew older they quieted down, as most people do, and, leaving the gay and giddy whirl for the younger ones, took their place among the quiet and steady elders.

"Of late years they spent the greater portion of their time at home, while in the city, and seemed to enjoy each other's society so much as to be wholly satisfied therewith. They sometimes had small quarrels, it is true, as we have since learned, but what mated doves do not—and these never were heard outside their own household. Nearly twenty years they lived here thus, with nothing to disturb their course.

"Just about six months ago the doctor furnished all his servants with tickets for the theater; so that evening he and his wife were alone in the house—a thing that rarely happened. About nine-thirty or ten o'clock the doorbell rang, and the doctor, who opened the door, found a poorly-dressed youngster standing on the steps; and upon his cheeks, which were none too clean, were traces of tears.

"He brought the lad inside, who, as soon as he recovered sufficient breath, told the doctor, between sobs, that his mother was very ill and probably dying; and, being too poor to employ a physician, he had come to ask if Dr. Neville would not be good enough to go and see his mother. Investigation revealed the fact that they lived in a poor quarter of the city, nearly five miles away; and the lad claimed that he had run nearly every step of the distance.

HE BROUGHT THE LAD INSIDE.

"Neville did not wish to go and leave his wife alone in the house; but she insisted she was not afraid, and said the servants would soon be home to keep her company. So the doctor, with the boy, went out and hitched up the horse. After kissing his wife good night and cautioning her to keep the door locked until he or the servants returned, he drove off, with the lad as pilot.

"The servants returned home about a hour afterward, and found the front door unfastened. They took no especial notice of this, but locked it after they had entered the house. They all went directly to their rooms; but Mrs. Neville's maid after laying aside her wraps, came down to the drawing room—where she found her mistress lying upon the floor, apparently in a swoon. She called for help, and then, raising Mrs. Neville's head, tried the usual method adopted in case of a fainting spell. Her efforts proved of no avail. Her lady's arms and limbs were apparently becoming stiff and paralyzed. Being unable to find the doctor in the house, the servant called another physician, who arrived about twelve o'clock, and who, upon examination, told them that Mrs. Neville was dead.

"'Dead?' they exclaimed; 'she cannot be dead!' and with that they all burst into tears, for all the household were attached to her.

"The physician, by questioning the servants, learned of their having attended the theater, and particulars of finding their mistress upon their return; and that being unable to find Dr. Neville they had sent for him.

"Having learned all that he could from them, and there being nothing further that they could do, he drove them down here to my room and notified me, for he knew that I was an old friend of the family. I hastily dressed, and drove with him to the house.

"The servant who admitted us conducted me to where the body lay. It had been placed upon a couch in the same room where they found her. What a change had come over those once calm features! A look of horror was imprinted on her face, the muscles of which were pinched and drawn, as though she had suffered extreme pain before death relieved her; as I observed that her body had become stiff and rigid in so short a time. As the physician had said that death was caused by a severe spasm, I did not greatly wonder at this.

"As yet, no one knew what had become of Dr. Neville; and no information was received from him until five o'clock that morning, when he drove up to the house. He stopped, and after hitching his horse, came rapidly up the steps, and I met him at the door. As soon as he had recovered from his surprise at seeing me there at that early hour, he asked what had caused me to pay them a visit at such an unusual time.

"'Have you not heard?' I asked.

"'Heard? Heard what? Explain yourself. Has anything happened?'

"'Yes, doctor. And where have you been, that you do not know you no longer have a wife?'

"The old man staggered back, as though he had been struck a heavy blow, and passing his hand across his forehead, exclaimed: 'My God, man! what do you mean?'

"He soon learned, when I brought him into the room where she lay. Falling on his knees beside her, he called her by her name, and begged her to speak to him; and when he finally realized that she was no more, tears flowed fast, and his grief would have melted any heart.

"But let us draw a curtain here, and take up the story three months further on.

"The doctor had dismissed all his servants, except the housekeeper and her husband, who attended to the horses, and all the out-of-door work. One evening these two had obtained permission to spend the night at the home of the housekeeper's sister, who lived in a distant part of the city, and who was very ill. They did not return until eight o'clock the next morning, and on their arrival were surprised to find the h[illegible] still clos[illegible] night later, [illegible] they had [illegible] let themselves in. The housekeeper prepared breakfast, and then went to call her master.

"As she received no response to her repeated calls and knocking, she came downstairs and sent her husband up, but he met with no better success. Trying the door, he found it unlocked, and on entering discovered the room empty, and the bed undisturbed, showing that it had not been slept in that night. As the doctor, since his wife's death, had often slept in a chair in the drawing-room, the man went there to look for him.

"On entering he saw the doctor lying on the floor, in a cramped position; and on going to his side saw that he was dead. He immediately notified the police of the district, and sent word to me at the yard. I left an inspector in charge of my office, and, together with Barton, started for the house.

"When we arrived there we found the superintendent of that district with a few of the police already in charge. The superintendent and a sergeant were in the room with the body, which was still lying on the floor where it had been found. The limbs were slightly bent at the knees, the hands were clinched, and on the back of the right hand was a slight scratch which might have been made with a pin. But the hand was swollen, and the flesh around the wound was of a purple tinge. Upon his face was that same awful look I had noticed upon his wife's.

"The superintendent said he did not know whether there had been foul play or not; and to help him decide he had sent for several physicians to come and look at the body. Aside from the slight wound on his hand, there was no indication of such, and no other suspicious circumstances, except the recent sudden death of his wife, to suggest it.

PASSING OF THE HORSE.

The Days of Our Equine Friend Rapidly Nearing an End.

The wonderful development of natural forces, as applied to the uses of man, that is going on so rapidly and relentlessly about us, causes many changes in the economy of civilization. In no direction perhaps is this more manifest than in the displacement of the horse. Any careful observer will note the quiet but great change that has taken place during the last few years, in relation to the practical uses of this animal—so long the ever necessary servant of man. It is clearly apparent that the day of the horse is about at an end.

For some time to come a comparatively few may be used for convenience or as a luxury, but eventually, like the candle which we now and then see, he will practically pass out of sight. Evidences of this may be seen upon every hand. We hear the owners of livery stables bitterly complaining of the great falling off in their business. This is especially true in the country, where formerly the young men were wont to take their best girls out for a drive, or went in parties by themselves to favorite resorts.

Now all this is changed. Bicycle parties are the popular feature everywhere. In Chicago recently there were 3,000 wheelmen in parade line, and it is estimated that in that city alone there are fully 100,000 cycle riders. Multiply this fact by the country at large and one can gain some idea of the present use of the bicycle as a means of transportation. Some may say that the present bicycle boom is but a passing craze. Any bicycle rider who has felt the exhilarating and health giving results of cycle exercise will soon dispose of such a supposition. No, the cycle will stay. Progression is the law and events do not move backward. Still greater improvements are in store for the wheel and a more extended use will follow.

The electric car has forever banished the horse car, even in the smaller towns of remote civilization. Many private teams that were formerly kept for family use have been disposed of by their owners, some through timidity in consequence of the great danger in private driving among the electric cars and bicycles and many because of the advantages from the numerous trolley and cable lines, or the preference of the younger members of the family for a wheel over a horse.—Hardware.

THE OLDEST BOOK ON RECORD.

A Volume In the Paris Library Which Antedates Christianity Thirty Centuries.

The Charleston News and Courier calls attention to the fact that probably the oldest book in the world is the Papyrus Prisse, one of the treasured possessions of the great National library in Paris.

This document was found by Prisse in a tomb in Thebes, which contained also a mummy of the first Theban dynasty. This circumstance alone shows that the book certainly dates back 25 centuries before Christ, and an examination shows that it really belongs to a much earlier age—namely, the time of King Assa. The title reads, "Injunctions of the Prefect Ptah-Hotep, Who Lived In the Time of Assa, the King of the North and the South."

Chronology places this Assa at about 3350 B. C., and to this age it would then seem that this book belongs. It is divided into 44 chapters and is written in hieratic rhythmic language. It directs its words to the higher classes and contains for these a series of maxims and sayings. It advises those in authority to show in all their doings the characteristics of a perfect man.

The ideal of the high official should be wisdom and science, and these guides he should heed. He is further not to abuse his power, is to be modest and moderate, for only in this way can he secure the good opinion of future generations. The author tells us that he had grown to be 110 years of age and had attained to all the honors and favors which Egyptian royalty could bestow.

Harry J. Lawson and Bicycles.

Mr. Harry J. Lawson, at a dinner given to him in recognition of his claim to be considered the inventor of the modern rear driving safety bicycle, and, therefore, a revolutionizer of cycle construction, mentioned the interesting fact that a careful estimate places the annual output of these machines at over 1,000,000 and the money spent upon them at over £10,000,000. There can be no question that the present popularity of cycling is due to the far greater ease and speed with which modern improvements, such as the introduction of the chain gear, enable them to be propelled.

Only a few years ago it would have seemed impossible to do 300 miles between one midnight and another, but 400 miles in that space of time have come to be considered no very extraordinary feat for a good rider, and a Frenchman, M. Huret, has done the amazing distance of 515 miles within that time. At first there was a disposition in English cycling circles to throw doubts upon the genuineness of this stupendous record, but impartial inquiries on the spot seem to leave no doubt that the feat was honestly accomplished. Bicycling News now acknowledges that the figure is correct, and adds a complimen to the sportsmanlike character of French cyclists.—London News.

A SPECIALIST'S VIEWS.

Obscure Ailments that Affect Humanity.

An Eminent Specialist's Idea on the Kidneys, and Their Uses. How They Purify the Blood and Keep Us in Health.

Curing the Kidneys Makes Us Well When We Are Sick.

We are often sick and don't know what is the matter with us.

It is probably our kidneys.

We lose our strength and ambition, suffer from headache, dizziness, sallow complexion, nervousness, etc.

We need new blood.

We don't get it, because our kidneys are sick.

If we cured our kidneys we would get new blood, new health, new strength, because it is our kidneys that purify our blood.

Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills will cure the kidneys.

They contain a concentrated extract of the Asparagus found in no other medicine or prescription, and made only under a special process by the Hobb's Medicine Co.

This extract of Asparagus is what makes Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills so successful.

A well known physician, Dr. William Watson Hinish, made a careful and thorough test of Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills in his practice. Here is his report of the results:—

WILLIAM WATSON HINISH, M.D.
926 Chicago Opera House Block.
Chicago, July 20, 1895.

Hobb's Medicine Co.,

Gentlemen:—It affords me unqualified pleasure to report that after having at your solicitation tried the Sparagus Kidney Pills which you have recently introduced to the profession, I am entirely satisfied with the results obtained.

As is well known, the kidneys are the principal excretory organs of the body, and I have long been satisfied that many of the obscure ailments which afflict hamanity are traceable to kidneys which fail to properly perform their functions.

Until now I have tried, and used with varying degrees of success, all the different remedies which are alleged to have a specific action upon the kidneys, but have never found anything that was entirely satisfactory until I began the use of Sparagus Kidney Pills.

I think you are to be congratulated upon having been able to produce a combination of remedies which have such a happy effect, and I take pleasure in recommending your pills to my brother practitioners, who, I am sure, will find in them a remedy that will fully meet the indications presented in all diseases of the kidneys, as well as in all diseases which owe their origin to, or which depend upon, an unhealthy condition or action of the kidneys. Yours, very truly,

W. W. Hinish.

Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills will cure all kidney diseases and all diseases of the blood.

Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Congestion, etc., Rheumatism, Gout, Anæmia, etc., can all be cured by Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills.

A few doses will relieve. But that is not all. A few boxes will cure.

And the best of it is that the cure will be permanent.

Sold by all druggists or mailed, prepaid, for 50 cents a box.

An interesting pamphlet mailed free on request. Address Hobb's Medicine Co., Chicago or San Francisco.

are doing all the business. Our stock is the largest, prices are the lowest and terms the easiest in the city. Just give it a passing thought that you can get an antique oak bedroom suit, 8 pieces, for $15, $20, $25 and $30, including a woven wire bed spring and a mixed mattress. No house in the city offers such inducements.

And then to think again that you can get tapestry Brussels carpet for 50, 60, and 70 cents a yard, made and laid with paper, which is a saving of 15c per yard. Where is there a house in the city that will offer such bargains?

And then imagine and wonder how we can afford to give away a moquette rug or parlor table with a parlor suit for $20, $30, $40 or $50.

Some of our competitors say that our ads are too much alike, and that this ad. is old. Well, we will admit it, but as long as it does the business and saves the people money we will continue to run it.

THE HIGH SCHOOL GAMES.

DAILY PRESS MEDAL CAPTURED BY GEORGE PROCTOR SMITH.

Had a Close Competitor in Young Richardson—A Record Broken—Summaries of All the Events—The Officials.

Ninety-nine was the winning class at the field day of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association held at the Crescent Oval yesterday afternoon, and George Proctor Smith, a member of that class, was the winner of The Daily Press medal and the all round championship He scored 31½ points, and was the victor in five events. Herbert L. Richardson, of '6 was his nearest competitor, scoring 27 points

The contest between the two was very exciting. At the start, Richardson showed up in fine style winning the first two events, but the lack of training told on him. while Smith was in a very good condition, barring a strained neck. Smith and Richardson met first in the hundred yard dash and Richardson came out ahead by a foot. Lederer and Dolliver tied for third place.

In the third mile bicycle race. Richardson won by about ten yards. Smith got the best of Richardson in the two hundred and twenty-yards dash and finished first without much trouble.

Runyon rode in his old time form in the one-mile handicap, but was hard pushed by Hillman who showed that he is a rider of no mean ability. Richardson took another first in the high jump, his big handicap giving him the victory. Carroll, the scratch man, jumped in splendid form, except in his last jump.

The three-legged race was another neck and neck contest, but the crack '99 team won by a trifle. The record of fifteen seconds, made by Fish and Cornwell last year. was broken by two fifths of a second. Another record went in the pole vault when Smith cleared the bar at eight feet, six inches, breaking Cornwell's record of eight feet, four inches. V. F. Green astonished his friends and himself by vaulting seven feet, three inches, without any practice.

The closest finish of the day was in the four hundred and forty yard run, when Richardson won from Smith by three inches. Many called it a dead heat. Hillman gave Runyon a tight finish in the two-mile bicycle race and succeeded in outsprinting Green.

The running broad jump was a cinch for Smith, as Walter Serrell, the scratch man, was satisfied with second place.

The class relay race was not run, as '96 was the only class that had a team in the field.

Ninety-nine wins the clase trophy, scoring sixty-seven points to the forty-six scored by '96. The teams of '97 and '98 did not contest.

The nearest contestants for The Daily Press medal to Smith and Richardson were Walter Serrell, eleven points; Carroll Runyon, eleven points; Lindley Hillman, nine points, and Wilbur F. Cornwell, six and a-half points.

Webster Littell turned up with his pacewakers and everything all ready for his attempt at the record, but the wind was blowing a gale from the north and the trial was postponed until some less windy day.

Owing to the fact of the games being held in the middle of the week instead of Saturday, the list of officials had to be almost entirely changed. Those officiating were:

Referee—John C. Whiting.

Judges—D. A. McPhie, Webster Littell and W. Kirby Dwight.

Timers—T. A. Cuming, Charles Noble and Fred P. Taylor.

Starters—Volney F. Green and Elwood Sebring.

AN EVENING NUPTIAL EVENT.

The Ceremony Performed in Mt. Olive Baptist Church.

The Mt. Olive Baptist church was the scene last evening of a pretty wedding. The contracting parties were Miss Agnes Crawley, of this city, and Archie Jones, of New York.

The ceremony was performed at 8:30 by Rev. P. S. Gibson, pastor of the church, during which music was rendered on the organ.

The maid of honor was Miss Belle Flanagan and the best man Joseph Bolden, both of this city.

The bride wore a gown of white flowered silk, with tulle veil looped with lilies of the valley, and carried a bouquet of white roses, while the maid of honor was gowned in white silk, trimmed with duchesse lace and carried pink roses. Immediately after the ceremony the bridal party were taken to the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. George Randolph, on West Front street, where she gave a reception to the couple and their friends.

During the evening a supper was served.

The bride and groom were the recipients of many valuable presents. They left the city on the 11:25 train for Harlem, where the groom has furnished a suite of rooms which will be their future home.

The ushers at the church were Fred White, Wm. Burden. Geo. Anderson, of this city, and J. Murray, of Bridgeport, Conn.

Growing Interest in Reform Club.

A good-sized audience gathered at Reform Hall last evening and enjoyed an excellent programme of piano and violin music, rendered by Martin Korff, Mrs. Vodemeyer and the Misses Vodemeyer. Each number was well received, and there were many encores. Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the entertainment. It is the intention of the members of the club to make these weekly meetings very interesting, and last night was no exception to the rule.

Miss Lucy King, formerly of Alfred, Allegany county, New York State, and who for a year past has been in the employ of the American Seventh Day Tract Society, whose headquarters are in the Babcock building in this city, will be united in marriage on Wednesday, October 23rd, at her home in Alfred, to Alvord B. Clarke, the superintendent of the Celadon Terra-Cotta Works, of that place.

May Consolidate the Two Positions.

A rumor is current that the work of the night ticket agent and night telegraph operator at the North Avenue station is to be consoidated, the operator to do the work of both employes.

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chambertain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family has need of it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once and you will never regret it. Members of the County Executive Committee Also Selected — Organizations in the Four Different City Wards.

The First and Fourth ward Republican primaries were held last evening in the Republican Association rooms. Ex-City Judge W. R. Codington called the First ward primary to order at eight o'clock and was made permanent chairman. R. F. R Huntsman was unanimously chosen secretary. The latter then read the call of the meeting which was to elect eight delegates to the county convention to be held in Elizabeth, Tuesday, October 22d, and also to elect two members of the county executive committee.

A fire alarm was sent in from box 15, last evening, but the department was given no chance to show its efficiency. A curtain in the residence of John Case on Church street, near Third, caught fire from a candle and was consumed. It was put out by those in the house before any more damage was done. Officer Mattox saw the fire through a window, and hearing the screams of "fire," sent in an alarm.

THE BROOK CLEANED OUT.

ARTICLES OF VARIOUS KINDS AND USES UNEARTHED.

A Large Amount of Refuse Found on the Borough Side—A Tricycle in Good State of Perservation—Channel Clear.

Green brook received its long needed cleaning yesterday by a gang of Street Commissioner Meeker's men, as was exclusively announced in yesterday's Press. The work was begun at French's dam and was continued as far as Cadmus' pond. The gravel bars were cut out and the weeds, grass, trees and logs removed, giving the water a clear passage. The worst spot was under the Somerset street bridge, where, on the borough side, there was a large pile of refuse vegetables. The brook was found to be a regular dumping ground. There were enough old shoes there to supply a small army, while articles of every conceivable kind were found throughout its length. A pair of shears were discovered, snugly hidden among the stones. A number of toy cap pistols were found, while for tools, a cooper's adz and a coal chisel, both in fair condition, were discovered. The men also fished up a coil of wire over two hundred feet long and several old tennis rackets with the gut rotted out. But the find of the day was a child's tricycle, not at all injured by its bath, which one of the men took home to his children. The brook is now in a good condition and the water has a free passage way.

SLATER ESTATE SETTLED.

A. D. Thompson Buys a Livery Stable on Which They Had a Claim.

Some time ago Reed & Coddington brought suit in the Court of Chancery for the executors in the estate of Wm. H. Slater for foreclosure proceedings on two mortgages against William J. O'Brien, of Jersey City, and yesterday at the sheriff's office in Jersey City the sale took place to satisfy the claims, amounting to $3,000.

Lawyer Coddington was present and bid in the property, consisting of a livery stable, house and lot and vacant land, for $3,300 for A. D. Thompson, of this city. The proceeds were sufficient to satisfy the claim.

In Orphans court at Elizabeth this morning, Judge Coddington appeared and gave a final accounting of the Slater estate, which was passed upon by the court, and on application of Reed & Coddington they were allowed $713.32 for counsel fees and commissions.

TWO NARROW ESCAPES.

Chief Doane's Rig Almost Runs Into a Boy—Harness Broke Afterwards.

When Chief Doane's wagon started for his house last night as the fire alarm blew, there was a very close escape to a smashup. The wagon rounded the corner from North avenue into Park at full speed. It passed about a foot from the curb and into that space little William Sweeney rode on his wheel. He just grazed the hub of the wagon and was knocked onto the sidewalk. He was not injured, however.

After Driver Woodland had met the Chief and was on his way over Washington street to the fire, the two men had a narrow escape from an accident that might have proved more disastrous to them than did the one on Central avenue a short time ago. They were driving at fair speed when, as they reached Third street, the wagon plunged into a hole in the street and the rebound almost precipitated them from their seats. The sudden jar snapped a piece of the harness and the shafts dropped loose from the horse to the ground. Before the horse could get away, though, Driver Woodland hauled him up and after a time repaired the break.

MARTINE SPEAKS OF GRIGGS.

The Farmer Orator Refers to the Vacillating Record of Griggs.

There was a rousing Democratic ratification meeting in the Lafayette Wigwam, Jersey City, last night, under the auspices of the Lafayette Democratic club. Dr. Mortimer Tompson, chairman, introduced J. E. Martine, of this city, as first speaker. Mr. Martine attacked the Republican Legislature for repealing the Werts Election law and for the passage of the Personal Registration act. He said the law would prevent thousands of workmen from voting, as they could not find time to register.

"Griggs, the Republican candidate for Governor," said Mr. Martine, "does not know where is at. In Monmouth he is the immaculate candidate that stands for prohibition. When he strikes Newark he visits the realms of Bachus and pats the brewer on the back. In Hudson he takes his beer, and in Camden he drinks water, and this is the man who asks your support."

Mr. Martine spoke of Griggs' record on the labor and race-track questions and made many allusions to his interest in water syndicates.

WHEELMEN TO ENTER POLITICS.

Will Probably Prepare to Enter the Campaign in the Municipal Election.

The wheelmen of this city are considering seriously the idea of entering politics this fall in the city election. They are advocates of certain rights and principles which they claim are denied them, and they think the best way to solve all problems regarding the riding of a wheel is to take a hand in politics. A meeting of all the wheelmen in this city and vicinity will be called immediately after the November election with a view to organizing for the December election.

The vote of the wheelmen in this locality would be a strong one if united and they will probably assert their influence in a substantial way at the polls.

TEN YEARS OF GOOD WORK.

ANNIVERSARY OF TRINITY REFORMED CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR SOCIETY.

A Good Suggestion Made by E. E. Anthony that Associate Members Be Induced to Join the Church, the Same as Last Year.

Ten years can make a vast difference in a Christian Endeavor Society, as was shown at the tenth anniversary of the society of Trinity Reformed church last evening, comparing the large and enthusiastic gathering with the little band of consecrated workers who first gathered in October, 1885. The exercises were held in the church and a goodly number of the members and their friends were in attendance. The meeting was presided over by W. A. Crawford, the president of the society, while Horace J. Martin led the singing. The programme was arranged by a committee consisting of E. E. Anthony and W. A. Crawford, while H. W. Marshall, E. S. Garretson and J. A. Love, made very efficient ushers.

After an opening service of song and a few words of welcome by President Crawford, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, the pastor, read a selection of Scripture and made a short prayer. A male quartette, composed of E. E. Runyon, L. S. Bond, L. R. [illegible] and F. S. Cutter, next rendered a very pleasing selection. E. E. Anthony, one of the charter members, gave a brief history of the society. In a few well-chosen words he sketched the changes of the last ten years and concluded by saying: "Last year we brought all the associate members into the church and then had to get a new stock; let us do the same this year." The secretary's report was then read by the secretary, Miss Ella Gardner, and showed a never increasing growth of both senior and junior societies. There was also much work to tell of.

Edgar Sheppard read his report as treasurer, and after a well rendered solo by Miss Etta Krymer, Rev. F. B. Everett, of Trenton, president of the Christian Endeavor State Board of Evangelism, was introduced and made the address of the evening. Rev. Mr. Everett is a very young looking man, but his listeners forgot all about his looks as they listened to his address, which was full of practical hints and of that enthusiasm which has made the Christian Endeavor society so well known. He cautioned his listeners about being Christians all the week instead of only on Sunday and warned them to be careful of all their actions, as the rest of the world was watching closely for something to criticise. "Too much organization" he said, "is another fault found with our society. Too much work is given to the committees instead of being done by the whole society so that the members will only work when serving on a committee assigned to a special duty. I believe in directing our effort along specific lines. We are all specialists today. Find the work that your society is best capable of doing, conform and concentrate your ideas on something that conforms with our surroundings. The Junior Local Union, of Trenton, has done special work among the firemen, while the coast societies work among the life saving crews." He then spoke of the evangelistic work to be done in this State, only forty per cent of whose inhabitants are members of the church.

After another selection by the male quartette, the meeting closed with a hymn and the benediction.

Most of the audience then adjourned to the lecture room where ice cream and cake were served and a social time was enjoyed. There was a very amusing recitation by Miss Mary A. Lucky given in her customary excellent manner.

AGAINST THE MEASURE

Lambeth Quadrilateral Is Scattered to the Winds.

Episcopal Convention Declares the Question of Christian Unity Outside the Pale of Consideration of the Church — Intensely Exciting Scenes at the Close of the Debate.

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 18.—It was a signal victory that was won last evening by the conservative element in the house of deputies of the Episcopal convention. By a vote that was close so far as the clericals were concerned, but decisive on the side of the laymen, the Lambeth quadrilateral, which has been discussed in every aspect by the church on both sides of the Atlantic during the past three years, and which has proven a sore subject of contention between the narrow and broad church parties of the American church, was scattered to the winds, and the question of Christian unity was declared by the result as being outside the pale of consideration of the church.

Minority Died Hard

The ballot which was taken at 6 o'clock amidst more evidence of suppressed excitement than has been manifested at any previous session of the convention was the culmination of a brilliant debate, in which the parliamentarians, tacticians and orators of the body exhausted all their arts in the effort to win votes. The minority, which up to a late hour in the debate had calculated on a bare majority in its favor, died hard. The scene was intensely dramatic during the closing speech of Dr. Huntington of New York, as with outstretched arm and quivering forefinger, and every fibre of his frame trembling with excitement, he fairly hurled at the majority the exclamation: "You may defeat this measure, but you cannot kill it; no, you cannot kill it; it is written in the book of God."

The Final Vote.

This was the final vote on Dr. Huntington's report, the minority document having been withdrawn to enable a square vote on a square issue: Clericals—Aye, 19; nay, 23; divided, 81. Laymen—Aye, 15; nay, 27; divided, 3. Of the clericals the dioceses of California, Indiana, Iowa, Georgia, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Pittsburg, southern Ohio and western Michigan voted with Dr. Huntington. New York, Ohio, South Carolina and Massachusetts were divided. Of the lay vote Massachusetts and Pennsylvania were divided, and New York, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Maryland and southern Ohio were among the dioceses in support of the proposition.

TWO VESSELS OVERDUE.

Feared That the Lord Spencer and Achilles Have Been Lost.

San Francisco, Oct. 18.—English underwriters have fears that the British ship Lord Spencer, which left this port for Queenstown 190 days ago, has been lost. McClune and wife and the crew of the wrecked American ship Arabia. They were landed at Montevideo and the Achilles sailed from that port July 1, and that was the last heard from her.

A Mexican guide accompanied them. The guide returned to-day and reports that they met a party of Yaqui Indian braves 100 miles south of here, and that the Indians fired upon the Americans, killing both men. The guide claims that he was kept a prisoner for two days and was then released, after being told never to revisit the country. The guide is being held here until his story can be investigated. He is suspected of having murdered and robbed the Americans.

Incendiaries Again at Work at Portland, Pa.—Residents Alarmed.

Easton, Pa., Oct. 18.—Another attempt at incendiarism occurred at Portland, this county, Wednesday night, when an effort was made to burn the large planing mill of Wise Brothers. The fire was discovered about 11 o'clock, when a general alarm was sounded by the church bells, to which the whole town responded and extinguished the flames by the aid of a bucket brigade. A week ago an attempt was made to burn Weller's glass factory by using waste saturated with coal oil. A few weeks prior to this Jones' block was destroyed. The town is without fire protection, and the residents are greatly alarmed.

HAS MADE NO PROMISES

Gov. Clarke Is Still Against the Prize Fight.

Hot Springs Officials Failed To Convince Him That the New Articles of Agreement Helped the Situation—Generally Believed That He Intends To Declare Martial Law.

Hot Springs, Ark., Oct. 18.—Gov. Clarke took his departure for Little Rock yesterday, being accompanied as far as Malvern by a United Press correspondent from this city. The governor talked freely relative to the present aspect of affairs here regarding the Corbett-Fitzsimmons contest. He was asked whether or not the press dispatches correctly represented his position. He replied that he was not responsible for the reports, and that he found nothing during his visit to the Springs to cause him to change his mind about the contemplated prize fight.

Has Made No Promises.

"Is it a fact, governor, that you have promised the citizens' committee that you would let the local authorities cope with the matter, and that under no circumstances would you call out the militia of the state to suppress the fight if the Florida Athletic club insisted on going on with it?" "There is no foundation for such rumors," replied the governor. "The dispatches that have appeared in the press attributing these promises to me are incorrect. I made no such assertions either privately or publicly, and I regret very much that they have been allowed to appear in print."

His Views Not Modified.

"Have your views in regard to the contest been modified in any way?" "They have not. I came over to Hot Springs to see if there was not some common ground that we could find to stand upon, but after thoroughly investigating the matter, I could find none whatever. I entertain exactly the same views that I did prior to my visit and cannot see how I can permit anything savoring of a prize fight to come off on Arkansas territory. I would like to help the citizens of Hot Springs in anything that would be a benefit to them, but there is nothing about a prize fight that would accrue to the benefit of any community."

Troops Are Now in Readiness.

"Did you promise the citizens' committee that in any event you would not call upon the state militia to invade Garland county for the purpose of suppressing the fight?" "I made no such promises, nor anything like them. The fact is that the military of the state are now holding themselves in readiness to respond to a call from me at any time. I am engaged in marshaling my forces for any contingency that may arise."

Could Not Hoodwink Him.

"It is generally understood that the citizens' committee convinced you that there was a vast difference between a prize fight and the contest that is now proposed to be brought off under revised articles of agreement? Is such the case?" "That is not the fact. The committee tried to impress me, but failed to do so. They also gave me the five ounce gloves to look at. At first glance no one who is not posted on these matters would think for a moment that the men could possibly hurt each other with them, but I happened to know that they were five ounce gloves that Corbett and Sullivan fought with and that a majority of the prize fights of the present day are fought with.

Could See No Distinction.

"Mr. Arlin, or some one else in the committee room, admitted that these were the gloves that Corbett and Fitzsimmons were to fight to a finish with on October 31 if they were not prevented from doing so. Under the circumstances I could see no distinction between a prize fight to a finish and a glove contest for twenty-five rounds. Every one knows that this fight would not last through twenty-five rounds; that either Corbett would whip Fitzsimmons in less than twenty five rounds or Fitzsimmons would whip Corbett. Taking this view of the matter I could not see the difference. I see by the dispatches this morning that Fitzsimmons declares he will not go into a limited round contest with Corbett. He refused to do so once before and the probabilities are that such a contest could not be pulled off were I to consent. Fitzsimmons has nothing to gain by meeting Corbett in a contest where there is a doubt of gaining a decision."

The Governor Is Firm.

The governor talked pleasantly but firmly, and the impression he left was that he meant every word he said, and that unless something intervenes to prevent him from so doing he will declare martial law.

CORBETT ARRESTED.

First Move in the Scheme To Balk the Opponents of the Fight.

Hot Springs, Ark., Oct. 18.—A line of action seems to have been agreed upon in the Corbett-Fitzsimmons matter. Last evening Prosecuting Attorney Teague had a warrant issued for the arrest of James J. Corbett on the charge of conspiring to commit a breach of the peace by entering into an agreement to do bodily harm to one Robert Fitzsimmons. The warrant was placed in the hands of Sheriff Houpt, who went to Spring Lake, Corbett's headquarters, to serve the papers and bring Corbett before Justice of the Peace Kirk. The sheriff succeeded in reaching Spring Lake and in serving the warrant, but, as he arrived there at a late hour, it was decided that Corbett should give a bond for his appearance in court to-day. It is rumored that Justice Kirk will place Corbett under bonds to keep the peace, the sum to be $10,000. This bond Corbett will decline to give, when he will be incarcerated in the Garland county jail. His attorneys will then apply to chancery judge Leland Leatherman for a writ of habeas corpus. In the event the writ is granted Corbett will be liberated, and the officials, who are opposed to the bringing-off of the contest, will be at their rope's end so far as the law is concerned. A writ of habeas corpus cannot be suspended in this state except by the general assembly in regular session.

BEAUTY IS POWER.

Perfection of Form, Feature, and Mind Render Women All-powerful.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Yet blended with those perfections must be perfect health. Women are today stronger in their character, better in their nature, truer in their love, warmer in their affections, than they ever were. But most women do not know themselves; and often when their influence is doing the most good, break down. They drift gradually and unconsciously into that tempestuous sea of woman's diseases. Then they should remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restores natural cheerfulness, destroys despondency, cures leucorrhœa, — the great forerunner of serious womb trouble, — relieves backache, strengthens the muscles of the womb, and restores it to its normal condition, regulates menstruations, removes inflammation, ulceration, and tumors of the womb, etc.

It is a remedy of a woman for women. Millions of women owe the health they enjoy, and the influence they exert, to Mrs. Pinkham; and the success of her Vegetable Compound has never been equalled in the field of medicine for the relief and cure of all kinds of female complaints. So say the druggists.

Here is another one of thousands who speaks that others may know the truth:—

"For five years I suffered with falling of the womb, and all the dreadful aches and pains that accompany the disease. I tried several doctors and different medicines, until I lost all faith in everything. I had not tried your Compound. I watched your advertisements from day to day, and each day became more hopeful. At last I resolved to try it. I have taken seven bottles, and have gained forty pounds. My pains have all left me, and I am a well woman. I do all my own work, and can walk two miles without feeling tired. Your Compound has been worth its weight in gold to me. I cannot praise it enough." MATILDA EHNAM, Columbia, Lancaster Co., Pa.

THE ACT SUSTAINED

Decision in Pennsylvania Superior Judges Case.

Supreme Court Reverses the Decision of the Dauphin County Court and Declares the Act Creating the New Court Constitutional—Two Dissenting Opinions.

Pittsburg, Oct. 18.—The supreme court of Pennsylvania sitting here has reversed the recent decision of Judge Simonton of Dauphin county and declared the act creating the superior court of the state to be constitutional. The opinion sustaining the new court act was handed down by Justice Dean. Chief Justice Sterrett and Associate Justice Williams dissented, however. In his opinion Justice Dean decided that but six of the candidates can be voted for by an elector. Among other things Justice Dean says the courts are without authority to revise the work of the state legislature so long as that work is in strict harmony with the constitution.

Constitution Quoted.

He recited Section 1 of Article 5 of the constitution which provides: "The judicial power of this commonwealth shall be vested in a supreme court, in courts of common pleas, courts of oyer and terminer and general jail delivery courts of quarter sessions of the peace, orphans' courts, magistrates' courts and in such other courts as the general assembly may from time to time establish." Under the authority of this last specification, "such other courts as the general assembly may from time to time establish" the superior court was created. Nothing is said in the article as to how judges of such courts when established shall be elected. Section 15 of the same article clearly applies to the election of district judges of the common pleas, for they are to be elected by the qualified electors of the respective districts over which they are to preside, while the jurisdiction of the superior court judges is limited by no district boundaries. The manner of electing supreme court judges is also prescribed in the constitution, but being silent in the judiciary article as to the method of electing the members of the superior court we turn to Section 1, Article XII., which declares:

Method of Election Prescribed.

"All officers whose selection is not provided for in this constitution shall be elected or appointed, as may be directed by law." And so in pursuance to the authority to create courts in Section 1 of Article V., the court is established, and by the authority of Section 1, Article XII. the manner of election is prescribed.

Dissenting Opinions.

Briefly stated, the dissenting opinion of Justice Williams, which is concurred in by Chief Justice Sterrett, is that the legislature is powerless to deny any qualified voter the privilege of voting at all elections for all elective officers if said voter desires to exercise that power.

History of the Dispute.

The court subject to the controversy was created by the last legislature. It is composed of seven judges, six republicans and one democrat, who were appointed by the governor to serve until their successors were elected at the general elections in November. Each party recently nominated six candidates for the new bench with a view of giving the minority party representation. The arrangement of the ticket providing for an election of the judges, named after the passage of the act, by the governor provoked the legal dispute.

Senator Quay Pleased.

Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 18.—When Senator Quay and his son arrived here last night the news that greeted them was that the state supreme court had reversed the decision of the Dauphin county court in the superior court case, and decided for six judges. The senator seemed pleased to know that the matter had been settled.

New York, Oct. 18.—While the volunteer firemen were escorting the New York Veteran Firemen's association on their return trip from New England last night, Charles Cook, aged 60, of Brooklyn, one of the volunteers, fell dead at the corner of Fifth avenue and Fourteenth street. It is thought that heart disease was the cause.

MRS. WALLER TALKS

She Declares Her Husband Is Unjustly Imprisoned.

Has Evidence of His Innocence Which She Will Present to the State Department at Washington. Praises Ambassador Eustis for His Efforts for Her Husband's Release.

New York, Oct. 18.—Mrs. Waller, wife of ex-consul J. L. Waller, now confined in prison in France, who arrived with her three daughters and young son yesterday on the Dutch steamer Amsterdam, is still at the Clarendon hotel this morning. She expects to leave for Washington to-day to consult the state department regarding her husband's case. When seen by a reporter at the Clarendon she said:

Praise for Ambassador Eustis.

"There is one thing I would like to say at the outset. Ambassador Eustis has been harshly criticised for not aiding us as much as he might have done. There is no truth in that report. Ambassador Eustis did everything in his power for us. He is even now treating my husband with the utmost consideration. The whole trouble lay with Robert Campbell, my husband's predecessor. He promised me to cable the authorities at Washington asking for their assistance, but instead of doing so he wrote, thus causing me an unnecessary delay of nearly two months.

Has Evidence of His Innocence.

"I shall go to Washington at once and there try to make arrangements for my husband's release. He is most unjustly imprisoned. The charge was that he committed treason in selling the Hovas with arms, and that in return for so doing he received a grant of 225 square miles in the southwestern part of the island of Madagascar. As a matter of fact, he received that grant fully three months before, and I have now in my possession the necessary documentary evidence to prove it. I cannot make the evidence public as yet, but I shall submit it to the proper authorities at Washington, and will rely upon them to accomplish my husband's release.

Fears He May Die in Prison.

"It must be done very quickly, though, for my husband is in very bad health, and should he continue in confinement I fear he would not live a year." Mrs. Waller is evidently much distressed over her husband's predicament. She looked far from well this morning, and it was only with an effort that she made the above statement of her intentions in regard to accomplishing the release of her husband from prison.

RUSSIA'S TERMS.

Wants Several Advantages Before She Becomes Bulgaria's Friend.

Sofia, Oct. 18.—The Sobroeoda, which was the personal organ of the late ex-Prime Minister Stambuloff, announces on authority that Russia's conditions for reconciliation with Bulgaria are the abdication of Prince Ferdinand in favor of his infant son Boris, that the latter become a member of the church of Russia, and that a Russian be nominated as minister of war of Bulgaria.

ENGAGES A TENDER.

Indications That Valkyrie Will Be Raced Next Summer.

Bridgeport, Conn., Oct. 18.—Superintendent Connolly of the Bridgeport Steamboat company said last night that the syndicate representing the English racer Valkyrie had secured the refusal of the propeller City of Bridgeport, used as a tender to the Valkyrie at the last international yacht race, for next summer. This would indicate further races in America.

J. E. MARTINE,

If there is one thing worse than being a woman, it is the trying not to be one.—Iota.

There is one thing worse still, the trying to look like a man.—Evening Sun.

Friends of pugilism in Chicago threaten to stop college football playing because of the crusade made against prize fights in that city and elsewhere.

In the Fourth ward last night a Democrat was elected by the Republicans as a delegate to their county convention. The Daily Press furnishes this much information and now let the G. O. P. leaders pick out the man.

Verily, the "Reform" government of New York city is quite a farce. Wednesday night Mayor Strong, at a public meeting at Walhalla hall, was lashing Tammany Hall, and Street Commissioner Waring was seated on the platform smiling his approval of the Mayor's speech, and all the while guilty of having over eighty per cent. of Tammany men under his employ in the street cleaning department.

The accident to Mrs. Rosetta yesterday demonstrated that what Rev. Cornelius Schenck had to say some time ago about the immediate adoption of fenders on the city trolley cars was an opportune and practical suggestion. Luckily, the accident of yesterday was not a fatal one, but the very fact of its occurring proves that the fender is as much of a necessity now as it will be when the extensions of the street railway are made.

R. V. Lindabury spoke in Jersey City last night and made the following arraignment of Candidate Griggs' position on race-track legislation:

In 1887 the most infamous race-track bill ever enacted was passed, with Senator Griggs in his seat dodging the bill, which later the Supreme Court killed, or it would have debauched the entire State. When Senator Griggs dodged the vote he had a retainer from the Associated Race-Track Association in his pocket, and the retainer sealed his lips when honor called on him to vote. I agree with my friend, Judge Garretson, that as a lawyer Mr. Griggs had a right to take a retainer and act as counsel, but he owed a higher duty than that to his State when he was in his seat in the Senate. He is the man who is going about the State asking Democrats to vote against Chancellor McGill on the race-track issue.

The payment of a five percent. dividend to the New Jersey State Agricultural Society stockholders emphasizes the fact that the Waverly Fair is a money-making institution, and that with attention to its possibilities in that direction, it can be made even more profitable. The increased convenience of access to the grounds which has come with the completion and operation of the Newark and Elizabeth Electric Railroad will make them more available for all sorts of open-air sports and exhibitions, and the directors have shrewdly decided to put the property in condition to profit by this advantage.—Newark News.

CHANGE OF TIME.

The 7:58 Express to Leave Five Minutes Earlier Next Monday.

Commencing next Monday the express train on the Central Railroad which leaves the North Avenue station at 7:58 will be scheduled to leave five minutes earlier, or at 7:53, arriving in New York at 8:47. This change has been made at the solicitation of a large number of Plainfield commuters who were frequently unable to get to their place of business by 9 o'clock, owing to being a minute or two late in catching the right ferry boat to land them at Liberty street in time. This change of schedule will make the connections easier and the Central's patrons in this city are greatly pleased with Mr. Baldwin's recognition of their requests for a change in the time of this express train. It is just such little favors as these towards their customers that makes the Central services so satisfactory and popular.

THE INVINCIBLE PARKS.

Elizabeth Whist Players Go Home With Defeat.

A team from the Elizabeth Whist Club came to this city last night to attempt to win from the crack four of the Park Club whisters the silver trophy of the New Jersey Whist Club, but when the almost unbroken record of victories of the Plainfielders are considered it seems almost superflous to add that the Elizabethians returned empty-handed.

The contest was a challenged one and playing was commenced at eight o'clock and continued until eleven o'clock, when the score showed the Park Club were the winners. The Park Club team was composed of Messrs. Rogers, McCutchen, Townsend and Howell.

At the conclusion of the playing Steward Jones served light refreshments to the whisters.

Junior Y. M. C. A. Athletics.

The events for the Junior Athletic meet tomorrow will be: One hundred yards dash; one-third mile bicycle; standing broad jump; two hundred and twenty yards dash, handicap; one mile bicycle, handicap, open; one hundred yards dash, handicap, open. The last three events are open to boys under fifteen. Entry fee, ten cents. Admission to grounds ten cents. Entries close at 1 p. m. Saturday. Games begin at 2:30 p. m.

Carried Through Italy.

Messrs. Hall and W. E. Gibbs, of Fanwood, entertained a large and cultured audience last night in the Fanwood clubhouse with an illustrated lecture on Italy. The entertainment was for the benefit of the fire company and was a great success. The scenes of Naples, Rome and Venice were exceptionally good. There were also some excellent views of Spain. After the entertainment a dance followed that was an enjoyable feature of the affair.

Another Surprise.

A pleasant surprise party was given to Samuel Vail of the Postal Telegraph office last evening. The time was passed in a social way and at ten o'clock refreshments were served. Those present were: The Misses Meier, Eva and Mamie Jones, Mamie Kyle, Giles, Ethel Southard, and Frank McIntyre, Edward and William Jones, Harry Hook and Jos. Rafferty. Many presents were received by Mr. Vail from his friends.

Too Fast Company.

Wm. Carman and W. Sisty, of the Dunellen Gun Club, went to Elizabeth yesterday to represent the club and incidentally to have some sport at the traps at live birds. The result was that Carman shot seven out of ten and Sisty ten straight. The company seemed a trifle fast for them and they did not face the traps for the twenty five bird race which followed.

Sentence Suspended on Martoni.

The two Italians, James Martoni and son, who were arrested on the charge of keeping a disorderly house, came up before Judge Coddington yesterday afternoon. Walter L. Hetfield, their counsel, pleaded non vult, and asked for a suspension of sentence which request was granted.

Johnson's Guilt Doubtful.

The conviction of Jacob S. Johnson, who is in jail in Somerville awaiting trial for the murder of Annie Rogers, of Newark, now seems very doubtful to those familiar with the details of the case. The chain of evidence deduced against Preacher Johnson at first seemed conclusive, and he was promptly indicted. Subsequently, however, an entirely different chain of circumstantial evidence was brought to light by which it would seem practically impossible that he would have committed the crime for which he is to stand trial. The counsel for the defence claim that they are prepared to show that the crime was not committed by Johnson.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces, such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

NOT LIKELY TO SUE.

Mrs. Rosetta Was Mostly to Blame for the Accident.

Mrs. Rosetta, who was injured yesterday by a trolley car on Watchung avenue, suffered intensely last night. This morning Drs. Jenkins and Fritts called and prescribed to alleviate her pain. As yet the seriousness of her injuries cannot be determined. It was reported that Mrs. Rosetta would probably bring an action against the railway, but when a Press reporter made enquiries at the residence this morning a member of the family said that no suit would be brought, because Mrs. Rosetta was negligent and careless in trying to cross the track without first looking to see if a car was approaching, and especially so when she is so deaf.

PUNTS AND KICKS.

A despatch from Elizabeth to the Y. M. C. A. football team reads: "Can not play you Saturday, 19th."

The Y. M. C. A. team is ready now to secure dates with other teams and games are to be arranged with the Orange Y. M. C. A., Pingry's School, Rutger's Prep. and Stevens' Prep. if possible.

The Y. M. C. A. football team met for practice last evening in the Crescent Cycle Academy. Most of the regular team was present while several new candidates showed up. Most of the time was spent in practicing the signals. The first game in the league was to be played Saturday between Plainfield and Westfield at Westfield.

A Westfield Wedding.

The marriage of Miss Alice Fairbairn to Thomas Allen Worth, both of Westfield, took place yesterday afternoon at 5:30, at the home of bride's brother, Robert Fairbairn, at Westfield. There was a very large number of guests present, including Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rushmore, Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Timpson and Mr. and Mrs. James H. Hallock, of this city.

Pleasantly Surprised.

A pleasant surprise was arranged and given by about thirty little friends of Miss Mamie Thatcher at her home on West Seventh street last evening. The little hostess was completely surprised, but proved herself equal to the occasion. The time was pleasantly spent playing games and other amusements, after which a bountiful collation was served.

Bad Fire at Garwood.

The house, barns and outbuildings belonging to a Mr. Bunnell, of Garwood, were totally destroyed by fire last night about 8:40. The origin of the fire is unknown, but is thought to be incendiary.

THEATRICAL.

A combination of pretty girls, catchy music, funny situations and beautiful costumes is what the patrons of Music Hall may expect to see next Monday evening, when "Cupid's Chariot" wheels up in front of its capacious doors, and mirth, fun and laughter fall out only to enter the little side door and entertain those inside. Let us watch them as they step down; first the pretty girls, then the comedians, and last but not least, the king of fun makers, George Thatcher, with his XXth Century Minstrels, also the world's best ballad singer, Mr. Raymon Moore, with his company of comedians and singers, who have been secured as a special feature, and will appear at every performance to charm the ear with their delicious melodies. A wheel within a wheel is what the bystanders remark when they see Mr. Wm. Ritchie with his wheel, but when he appears as the "Tramp Cyclist" their enthusiasm knows no bounds. This, together with the bicycle race, are two of the most startling features, as from the time the curtain rises until its fall, the audience is kept in a constant state of hilarity.

BEN'S BID.

"Why don't you raise chickens for the market?" suggested Hiram Bassett, the village storekeeper, to Ben Singer.

Ben was 14 years old. His mother had died a short time before. His father was a carpenter by trade, but had been crippled by rheumatism so that he could not work.

Ben started a chicken farm at once.

Slowly the flock of chickens grew. The first days of summer saw him with 70 young chickens, some of them able to scratch for themselves.

Only a few of them were lost. A prowling 'possum got several before Ben trapped the marauder. Cold and rains killed off a few more. But the 1st of September came, and more than 60 chickens were the boy's.

Ben planned to sell 30 or 40 in the early autumn and to keep the remainder till the next summer to stock his farm with afresh. He intended to go into it then on a bigger scale, and he hoped to realize enough from his sales to keep him through the winter with the part of his flock he retained.

Then one day in September as he and his father sat in the doorway of the cottage Ben noticed a couple of tears trickle down his father's face. He jumped up and threw his arms around his father's neck.

Presently Mr. Singer unclasped the boy's hands and looked him in the face. "Ben," he said, "I'm afraid we're in for hard times yet."

"What do you mean, dad?" asked Ben.

"The house is only rented," said Mr. Singer slowly. "They can't take that, but they can take all our furniture and everything else."

"Why, they belong to us!" exclaimed Ben.

"So they do, Ben, but the law gives another man the right to sell them and take the money they bring if we owe him money and can't pay it. There is some one to whom I owe money, a man I borrowed from when your mother was sick. I owe him $100.

"He was here to see me about it the other day, and I tried to get him to wait. But he says he's tired of waiting, and the sheriff'll come and sell us out."

Ben worried over what he had heard all night long, but he could find no way out of their difficulty.

The next day he took ten of his biggest chickens to the village store. He had already arranged with Mr. Bassett to have them sent to a commission merchant at Waynesboro and sold.

After he had delivered the chickens and Mr. Bassett had promised to get him the money for them as quickly as possible the idea struck the boy of asking the storekeeper about a sheriff's sale. "Mr. Bassett," he said, "how does a sheriff sell you out?"

Ben asked several questions before he left. Then he walked slowly home, and all the while in his mind he was turning over a dimly defined project which had been suggested to him by what he had heard.

A week later Ben received the money for his chickens, $3.80. He was a proud boy, and he would have shown his satisfaction more if it had not been for the impending trouble which made his father so miserable that he could not leave his bed.

On a Monday in the early part of the next month the sheriff, in pursuance of formal notice, arrived at the house to make a sale to satisfy Mr. Singer's creditor. Quite a crowd had gathered about the cottage and there was not one of those present who did not sympathize with the carpenter and his son. The sheriff mounted a box in the yard and began a description of the goods to be sold.

It was a pitiful array, after all. A few tools, a miscellaneous assortment of cheap furniture, a kitchen stove, with some cooking utensils and china and some linen and blankets.

But one item in the lot—the chickens—the sheriff counted on as his drawing card. Half a hundred of fine hens and marketable chickens were cooped in a pear by pen, and upon the value of these the county officer dwelt at length. Then, when he thought he had the crowd sufficiently aroused, he named a starting figure in default of an actual bid.

"Sixty dollars for this choice lot of chickens and household goods?" he cried.

There was no response. He repeated the announcement, then dropped the figures to $50. Still no one spoke.

But the crowd was dumb. No one felt inclined to buy out the crippled carpenter and his son.

The sheriff tried again and again, dropping the figure lower and lower. He did not specially like the job, for he had been told about the case by some of the village people, but he had a duty to perform, and he knew he must get as much out of the sale as he could.

Mr. Singer's creditor evidently had no representative on the ground, and even the low prices were not taken up with.

The sheriff dropped his offer now $1 at a time, but apparently in vain. It looked as if the sale would come to nothing.

Nine, eight, seven, six, five, four! Not a response came from those about.

Three dollars! The sheriff was smiling at the ridiculous offer and was just about to name $2 and $1 in quick succession, hoping for no reply, when a boyish voice close at hand answered:

"I bid $3."

The officer looked down on the speaker and saw Ben. The boy held up three $1 notes in his hand. The sheriff smiled. More than one man in the crowd felt like cheering the bidder. But the officer knew that he could not accept the offer at once.

"Three dollars I am bid!" he announced. "Who bids four?"

Every one was silent, and $3 was the one bid offered, and after one expostulation the sheriff took the offer.

The chicken farm was saved, and the chicken farm proved a success. A year later, when Mr. Singer was once more working steadily and his rheumatism was gone, his creditor was paid in full the amount borrowed from him, and the proceeds from Ben's chicken farm did not a little to make up the sum required.—Exchange.

Queer Wells In Illinois.

Near Augusta, Ills., are two peculiar wells, each of which deserves special mention in a department devoted to accounts of things out of the ordinary. The first is a "bottomless well"—one which was sunk down until the immense running underground river was struck. The second is a well in which the water remains frozen in winter and summer. These two wonders, each of which may properly be referred to as "combined natural and artificial curiosities," are located at a distance of about a mile and a half apart. The frozen well is only about ten feet in depth, that of the other not stated.—Peoria Herald.

THE SPIRIT OF MILITARISM.

Questions That Are of Interest to All Deep Thinking Men.

If Mr. Spencer were now to rewrite the "Principles of Sociology," there can be no doubt that he would find in the United States an illustration scarcely less striking. Most of what he tells us of the changes in England is a matter of history here. That the immediate result of the late war of rebellion was a tendency of the military officialism to take the place of civil officialism no one will deny, and, though it may perhaps not be said that we have military heads of all the various departments, still the disposition to fill all administrative offices with military chieftains, so strong immediately after the war, was in the same line—the result being "a style of administration which asserts authority more and regards individual claims less." At the same time the revival of the predatory spirit in regard to external affairs has been clearly discernible here, too, for although the sin of aggressive warfare on weaker or barbarous nations cannot be laid at the door of our government the constant cry for coast defenses and for the strengthening and increasing of army and navy are clear indications of the same spirit.

But what chiefly must strike us as familiar facts are these: The spirit of sanitary dictation and the usurpation of exclusive privileges by certain professions (prominent among them the medical); poor law, and, we may add, tramp law, administration in various parts of the Union; the demand for municipal distribution of water, gas and coal, as well as for governmental ownership of railroads and telegraphs; the ever increasing influence of "a coercive philanthropy" invoking state power to improve people's conduct, etc.—in short, the strong impetus imparted to the socialistic tendency of modern times is nothing but that same military spirit clamoring for the right of the state, or the commonwealth, if you please, to regulate the private affairs of the citizen in every department of life.—A. B. Ronne in Popular Science Monthly.

THE PARADISE OF TOTS.

A Lesson Is Taught About Babies to Other Countries by Japan.

Japan has been called "the paradise of babies." In many ways it seems that the Japanese treat their children more wisely than the more sophisticated but really less civilized nations of the west. The babies are born polite. They seem to inherit manners. There is in all Japan nothing corresponding to our city hoodlum or to the gamin of Paris. The Japanese child, even of the poorest parents, has plenty of pure air, frequent new toys and the love and attention of both parents. As a natural result, when he grows up, he treats his old parents with the utmost filial respect. No man with children feels uneasy in Japan because he has no money laid up for his old age.

The Japanese child is better tempered than the American, largely because he never has meat to eat. His food is light and simple and his digestion unimpaired by pasty pie crusts and heavy meat. The politeness of the Japs is strong testimony to the theory of the vegetarians that meat eating brutalizes one. Yet that the Japanese who never tasted meat in their lives are both strong and plucky the Chinese are now well prepared to testify.

Mr. Lafcadio Hearn, after teaching in a large Jap school for two years, says, "I have never had personal knowledge of any serious quarrel between students and have never even heard of a fight between my pupils, and I have taught some 800 young men and boys." He had never seen "a man strike another or a woman bullied or a child slapped." Yet the Japanese, with their perfect courtesy and sunny kindness, have been from time immemorial a nation of warriors, always ready to avenge insults in blood.—Philadelphia Press.

Got His Deserts.

A poor little girl was peddling apples in a railway station. A train was about starting, and almost at the last moment a tall, ruffianly passenger stepped off the car steps and called for 15 cents' worth of the apples. The girl counted them out, the man took them, and then, as he moved toward the car, began feeling in his pocket as if for the money. The change was not forthcoming, he was on the steps, the train began to move, the girl ran eagerly after it, and there stood the man on the platform laughing at her.

By good luck, the mayor of the city happened to be among the bystanders—a war veteran, with a tender heart and a contempt for all meanness. He ran at once to the superintendent's office and said:

"I'll give you $100 to stop that train and have it backed into the station."

The offer was promptly accepted, a telegram was dispatched, and very soon the player of the joke found himself in the hands of the police. He paid the girl her 15 cents, of course, and offered to pay her a good deal more, but the officers were inexorable, and to the gratification of the lookers on he was marched off to jail.—Youth's Companion.

Not Familiar With Blessings.

There is a musical association in one of our suburban towns which, contrary to the general run of such bodies, found itself recently with a surplus of cash on hand. The members accordingly determined to give themselves a dinner and invite their wives. When they were assembled at the table, they stood rather awkwardly behind their chairs until the president, who seemed also embarrassed, finally called on one of the members in this wise, "Brother Waters, will you please ask a blessing?" This was something that in all his varied experience Brother Waters never had done. He drew a long breath, rolled his eyes once more in despair and in a tone in which triumph and uneasiness were blended said, "Go." They went.—Boston Herald.

Not Inherited.

"Yes," remarked a youth to his tailor, "it's not a bad thing for you to have me among your patrons, you know."

"Perhaps not," was the rather doubtful response.

"My family name, being so well known in the community, is quite—ah—quite an advertisement for you. My forefathers, as you are doubtless aware, were early settlers."

"Yes, I've heard so. But I must say, sir, that in that respect you don't seem to take after them in the least."—Chicago Record.

A Much Divided Village.

The municipal geographical curiosity of the United States is the little village of Grifton, N. C., which lays claim to more divisions than any other town, large or small, in the world. It is located in two counties, three townships, two congressional districts and two senatorial and two judicial districts.—St. Louis Republic.

THE NEVILLE AFFAIR.

BY FRANK H. MARSH.

(Copyright, 1895, by Irving Bacheller.)

CHAPTER II.

"It was the second day after that the doctors finally agreed death had been caused by a severe spasm, similar to that which had killed Mrs. Neville; and that the scratch upon his hand, although it had the appearance of being an irritating one, was insufficient to cause death. And so, you see, that is the reason the superintendent's undeveloped murder theory was dropped.

"Barton first gave voice to my suspicions by saying that the hand looked as if it had been poisoned; and that the doctors had at first thought the same. Barton, who had at one time served in the army, doing duty in India, said that both the doctor and his wife looked to him as many of the victims of snake bites whom he had seen out there. So he, Duroch and myself secretly set to work investigating.

"Close inquiry revealed many minor facts unknown to us; such as the door being unfastened when the servants returned and found Mrs. Neville dead, or dying. Another bit of evidence was the visit of a suspicious looking foreigner, who had called to see the doctor the day before his death, but had not found him at home. This same man, the housekeeper remembered, had passed them in the street a few blocks from the house, as they returned from the theater, the night of Mrs. Neville's death. We found, further, that since the doctor's death, this same stranger had been in a hospital sick with a fever; where in his delirium, he talked of revenge on 'Ralph' somebody, and on 'Alice;' but, having recovered before we traced him there, he had been discharged, and so was lost to us for the time being.

"Barton and Duroch, who have been hunting this man ever since, have at last found him, and—"

My friend lifted his head and listened for a moment. Then he said:

"That carriage, which has just stopped, must contain Duroch and his prisoner."

And so it proved. The door soon opened and Barton and Duroch entered, and between them walked the prisoner, with manacles upon his wrists. He was a tall man, six feet if an inch, with broad shoulders, which looked curiously out of place on his wasted frame. His limbs seemed too weak to carry him, and he leaned heavily upon the arms of his conductors. His clothing, once of fine material, was worn and shabby, and hung loosely upon him. His face was one not soon forgotten, it being dark and swarthy, as one accustomed to all sorts of weather, and to tropical suns. The cheeks were sunken and gave to the cheek bones a prominence they were not wont to have; his eyes were dark, and the heavy black eyebrows gave them a severe appearance. From beneath his slouched hat could be seen straggling dark locks of hair that matched his eyebrows.

AND BETWEEN THEM WALKED THE PRISONER.

Upon entering the room he was seized with a violent fit of coughing, which left him weaker than before. As he dropped into a chair he asked for a little brandy, and my friend brought a bottle and poured some for him. He drank this, and seemed to gain strength. Then, in a low voice, he said:

"I know that you suspect me of causing the death of Dr. Neville; and I also know you have no proof that I did, and that you are working this case hypothetically. But as I have only a short time to live—consumption has me in its clutches, and my late fever has strengthened its hold—I may as well tell you my story, and thereby save you a great deal of trouble. So if you will pour me another glass of that brandy, I will begin."

This was the story that he told:

"The sun shone brightly on that beautiful May day twenty-five years ago when, in the little town of R——, in Illinois, the wedding bells rang as Robert Hart and his fair young bride went from the village church to their future home. She was the belle of the village, who, having just passed her nineteenth birthday, had linked her future—for better or for worse—to that of Robert Hart.

"Some of the village gossips shook their heads and said: 'She would be sorry that she had married him, for he was not the one to settle down very long and attend to home duties. When he left school had he not thrown away his father's offer to study medicine under him and succeed to his practice when he was so longer able to attend to it himself? And did he not start out for those wild lands in the west, which were overrun with ruffians and desperadoes, whose chief pleasures were gambling and murder? He had stayed out there five years, and no knowing how many crimes might be laid at his door, for he was always reckless and daring. Probably the wealth he had brought home with him when he came a year ago, and which he said was the [illegible] had received for his gold [illegible] might have belonged to some [illegible] speculator whom he had murdered.'

[illegible] for all this talk of the gossips, [illegible] and his wife lived together two happy years, with no darkening cloud on their horizon, when his health began to fail. The hardships and exposures to which he had been subjected while in the gold fields and among the mountains had at last begun to tell on him.

"That winter he spent most of his time in bed, with his patient and faithful wife to nurse him; and it was trying on her, who had been accustomed only to pleasures and gay society, to be obliged to stay close at home and wait on a grumbling sick man, whom none could please. And so he lingered through the winter until warm weather came again, when he was able to sit up more and take short walks by leaning on his wife's shoulder, and finally to walk short distances by himself.

"The doctor then told him that if he wished to pass through another winter he had better take an ocean voyage and visit some tropical country for a couple of years. So it was decided that he should try the ocean and the tropics.

"The day soon came when, with his luggage packed, he bade his friends good-by. His wife was only to accompany him to the coast; for he would not consent to her being exposed to the dangers of an ocean voyage, which in those days was more hazardous than now. Ralph Bertie, a trusted friend, who had studied medicine with his father in his stead, was to accompany them and see Alice safe home again.

"They arrived in New Orleans safely, and there Robert met Alf Dutton, a young Englishman, who was going to leave for India in about three weeks to serve as assistant surgeon in the British army. They soon became fast friends; and as Dutton gave him a cordial invitation to accompany him to India Robert finally concluded to go, as by so doing he would have a friend and companion on his voyage.

"The time passed rapidly and the day for their departure had arrived. It was a beautiful day, a day never to be forgotten by Robert. The hot rays of the sun would have made it very uncomfortable had it not been for the cool breeze stirring. About ten o'clock the last farewells were said, as they all stood upon the deck of the ship which was soon to hoist anchor and bear away on its long course. The final embrace was given and Robert's wife stepped over the side as the last line was cast off, and the voyage was begun. As long as he could see her she was standing in the same spot, waving her handkerchief as a last token of adieu.

"The voyage was an unusually long and tedious one, and many severe storms were encountered in the vicinity of the Cape of Good Hope. On two occasions it seemed as though the ship was to go to the bottom; but they weathered the storms, and Bombay was reached in six months, or a little more, from the time they left New Orleans.

"India was Robert's home for more than two years, and he spent his time there wholly either hunting or lounging. About ten months after his arrival he received a letter from his wife, which she had written a few months after his departure, and from it he learned of his father's death. That was the first letter he had ever received from his wife. It was also the last.

"Only one adventure that befell him there will I mention, and that is one he will never forget.

"He and Alf lived in the same bungalow. One evening they, in company with several officers, had been sitting outside, where they had been exchanging stories. About nine o'clock Alf went inside to light a lamp so that they might play cards. Robert, who wished to refill his pipe, also entered; and going to their sleeping room reached for his coat, in which was his tobacco. He had thrown his coat on his bed in the early part of the evening. He had taken hold of the garment when there was a hiss, a swish of a body quickly cutting the air, and by the pain in his arm near the shoulder, he knew that he had aroused a sleeping serpent.

"His cry of alarm quickly brought Alf, who had by this time struck a light, and by its rays he saw the serpent's body rising from its rusty brown coil, thus bringing into view its yellowish-white belly, above which, moving to and fro, was the nasty head of a cobra, with the sides and back of its neck dilated, as customary when angry.

"With a cry of rage Robert snatched the pistol from the table and fired at its head with unerring aim. But the death of the snake did not lessen the peril of Robert, whose blood seemed now to be on fire, while the veins in his forehead stood out like huge cords. The noise made by firing the pistol had drawn a crowd of soldiers and natives to the bungalow.

"Robert was almost crazed, and his whole body seemed as though it was being consumed by some internal fire. They forced him into a chair, while Alf dispatched one of the soldiers to the storeroom for a flask of whisky. Having torn the shirt from the injured shoulder, he took a scalpel and while the soldiers held the other in the chair cut a piece of flesh away at the wound, and immediately applying his lips to the gash thus made began to draw out as much of the poison as was possible in this way. As the soldier was returning with the whisky an old native stopped him and made him put a handful of cayenne in it.

"When the whisky was handed him Robert took the flask and drank it all down without stopping. He declared it felt cooling, and he held to this after he recovered, although the soldier who had brought it, and who tasted it after it had been dosed, affirmed that it was fiery enough to set the bungalow on fire. Alf anointed the wound with olive oil and then bandaged it. Next, picking two of the stoutest natives, he bade them take hold of Robert and make him run with them.

" 'Keep him trotting, boys, you rascals,' he said; 'for I will shoot the first one of you that allows him to stop.'

"After they had kept him running for two hours he was allowed a few minutes' rest, and then again kept going for another hour, at the end of which time he was almost exhausted. After feeling his pulse Alf had him put to bed, where he soon fell asleep and did not wake until the next afternoon. But when he did get up he was as well as ever—barring a sore arm.

"Robert's snake, and its mate, which one of the soldiers had killed that morning, were lying at the back of the bungalow; and the first task was to extract this venom from the sack at the base of the fang where the fluid was secreted and seal it in a small phial, to be kept as a memento of his narrow escape from death.

"Shortly after this he left India, taking passage on a vessel returning to England. Thence he sailed to New York, from which place the remainder of the journey home was made overland.

"And what a home-coming it was! Home! He no longer had a home. His father's old servants told him the sad truth. His trusted friend, Ralph Bertie, had destroyed his paradise. The wife he had loved so well had proven false. Naught had he now but shattered hopes. For days he wandered through the house like one in a dream, going from room to room, and at times mournfully calling: 'Alice!' but no Alice came to answer him."

(To Be Concluded.)

PERHAPS THIS MAY HELP YOU.

"My food does me no good," you say. Then it does you harm. There is no halting place between these extremes. Digested food alone gives health and strength. Undigested food sours, or ferments in the stomach and becomes a poison to the whole body. It causes headache, heart palpitation, liver and kidney trouble, distress after eating, pains in the chest and sides, and the tired, languid, heavy feeling we hear so much about. When the digestion goes wrong every function of the body goes wrong. Yes, and the mind, too. Men fail in business and die poor for no other reason than this—they are weakened, dulled and stupefied by dyspepsia. The lives of a host of women are blighted in the same way. You may be one of this miserable multitude. The writer of these lines was one of your number a short time ago. I tried dozens of things to get cured; just as you have done, no doubt. The thing which at last succeeded with me may succeed with you. It is a discovery of those wise and good people—the Shakers, of Mt. Lebanon, N. Y.—called the Shaker Digestive Cordial. It is not a purgative, which at best gives only transient relief. It is in itself a digested food and also a corrector of the digestive function. You can eat and digest your food while taking this cordial. It helps you at once and soon makes the stomach vigorous and healthy. It is not like any other so-called dyspepsia cures. It is prepared by the Shakers principally from herbs cultivated by them. They do not ask us to spend a dollar for a bottle while we are in the dark as to its virtues. They take the risk themselves. Almost any druggist will sell you a trial bottle for 10c, so you can see whether it is what they say—and adapted to your case. And isn't even the mere chance of a cure worth that much?

TWO LITTLE WORDS.

Two little words that trembled on my tongue,
And still those syllables remain unspoken;
Two souls that fate in one accord had strung,
Could we the cruel silence but have broken;
Two little words, on which our futures hung,
And yet we parted and betrayed no token.

Two little words, to utter which I'd striven,
But still those syllables remain unspoken.
We'd but to taste the bliss so freely given,
Could we the cruel silence but have broken;
Two words, that might have made this earth a heaven,
And yet we parted and betrayed no token.

My vain regret my hours of peace deprives,
For still those syllables remain unspoken;
That joy were ours that life from love derives,
Could we the cruel silence but have broken.
Two little words that might have linked two lives,
And yet we parted and betrayed no token.
—William A. Bowron in Chambers' Journal.

KIDNAPED BY A TARPON.

The Adventure of a Small Boy Who Went Fishing In a Louisiana Bayou.

The little son of the agent of the Southern Pacific company, stationed at Bayou des Allemands, had an adventure one day while fishing for the gay and ever biting catfish. The little fellow was out in the river in a flat bottomed boat, and while handling his line suddenly became aware that something out of the ordinary was at the other end of it. The line, which he was holding rather slackly, became apparently alive, and in a moment was whizzing through his fingers as if Old Nick himself was on the hook. The boy endeavored to stay its outward flight, but to no purpose, and he had the satisfaction of seeing the end reached in quick order. Fortunately for the remainder of the story, the end was securely fastened to the boat, and as the line tautened out the little craft began a series of maneuvers on the surface of the river, and the boy, becoming alarmed at the unusual occurence, yelled for assistance.

The craft went on with the flood. In the one end the boy on the other a powerful something or another, which, content with giving a sample of its skill as a head on propeller, kept its bulk hidden beneath the water. And still the boy kept on yelling and the boat a-going, until several men on the bank of the bayou, hearing the cries, embarked in a skiff, and, armed with a steel harpoon—they had been there before—started for the boy and the boat and the something another, still under the water, but occasionally breaking the surface as if it wanted to fly. When the rescuers reached the flying craft, one of them seized the tautened fish line, sententiously remarking, "Grande ecaille," began to shorten in, and in about five minutes of hard work had brought the capture alongside, where it began cavorting and plunging, throwing the water in clouds. Another of the men, seizing the harpoon, watched an opportunity, and in a few minutes more darted the steel into the gleaming sides of the fish, for such it was.

When the bank was reached, the capture was taken ashore. It proved to be a splendid specimen of the tarpon, and measured over 6 feet in length, its scales being larger than a silver dollar, and gleaming with a silver luster and flecked with a multitude of other colors.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

are doing all the business. Our stock is the largest, prices are the lowest and terms the easiest in the city. Just give it a passing thought that you can get an antique oak bedroom suit, 8 pieces, for $15. $20, $25 and $30, including a woven wire bed spring and a mixed mattress. No house in the city offers such inducements.

And then to think again that you can get tapestry Brussels carpet for 50, 60, and 70 cents a yard, made and laid with paper, which is a saving of 15c per yard. Where is there a house in the city that will offer such bargains?

And then imagine and wonder how we can afford to give away a moquette rug or parlor table with a parlor suit for $20. $30, $40 or $50.

Some of our competitors say that our ads are too much alike and that this ad. is old. Well, we will admit it, but as long as it does the business and saves the people money we will continue to run it.

CHURCH WORKERS' REWARD.

HOPE CHAPEL PRESENTS MR. AND MRS. SQUIRES WITH TOKENS.

Short Addresses By a Number of the Older Members While the Younger Ones Were In Evidence With Costly Gifts.

In spite of the fact that The News, in their endeavor to be enterprising, prematurely announced the surprise reception given to Superintendent H. G Squires at Hope chapel, last evening, the affair was a complete success. Between 00 and 500 people gathered at the chapel and when Mr. and Mrs. Squires arrived they were greatly surprised to see so many present They were escorted to the front seats and the pastor, Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, took charge of the programme. In his usual happy manner, he spoke a few words of welcome, after which he called on S. R. Struthers.

Mr. Struthers said that like the leaders of Bible times Mr. Squires had been chosen by the Lord to lead the people of Hope Chapel, and that it was at his suggestion that the name of Hope was given. He spoke of the vast amount of good that had been done at the chapel and all through the blessings of God on the Superintendent who had been led to choose wise assistants in the work. Amos Andrews was introduced and related in an interesting manner a short history of the chapel from its birth to the present time. How they used to meet in a small building when the membership was small and how he was accustomed to wade through mud in getting to the chapel.

Benjamin Hand who was closely identified with the chapel work for the first three years gave an interesting talk of his experience during the early part of the chapel's history. A change was then made in the programme, and Mr. Newell introduced Miss Firstbrook who rendered a pleasing piano solo.

Following this F. H. Andrews was called upon and related several amusing stories, and at the close said that the teachers and scholars of the Sunday-school wanted to give Mr. Squires something as a token of their esteem for his faithfulness. He then on behalf of the members presented him with a handsome silves water set complete, with this inscription on the tray: "Henry C. Squires, from the teachers and scholars of Hope chapel, October 18th, 1895."

Mr. Squires was completely overcome and for a minute words failed to express his thoughts. Finally, he said that his wife had insisted on his coming to the chapel, but he was not able to tell why she was so anxious. Continuing, he said in part:

I have been greatly touched with the remarks this evening, and I thank God for what He has done. There is no place that I love more than Hope chapel. Everybody finds a hearty welcome here, no matter how rich or poor. I trust God may continue His blessings, and I thank you all very much for this evidence of your love and affection. All joined in singing "Blest Be the Tie that Binds," after which Mrs. S. R. Struthers was asked to say a few words, which she did in a very amusing manner.

At the close of her remarks she presented Mrs. Squires with a beautiful marble clock, which was gracefully accepted. Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards was introduced and said that he supposed he would have have to talk about Mr. Squires because the rest had done so. He said that where man and wife had lived many years together they often grew to resemble each other and he thought that this was the case with Mr. Squires and Mr. Newell, because they had been associated together for a long time.

Following Dr. Richard's remarks Fred Wharton, on behalf of the Young Men's League, presented Mrs. Squires with a bouquet of choice roses. Everybody was then invited to another room where long tables were spread with excellant refreshments. The balance of the evening was given up to a genuine social time. The women who had charge of the refreshments were Mrs. S. R. Struthers, Mrs. Page, Mrs. Canfield, Mrs. McComas, Mrs. Higgins, Mrs. Sweeney, Mrs. Stewart. Mrs. Amos Andrews, and Mrs. Joseph Randolph.

Go and See Her.

Perhaps you don't know May Smith Robbins who comes to Music Hall next Thursday. There are people on earth whom one don't care to know, but they don't stand in May Smith Robbins' French button boots. Managers Rich & Maeder know a good thing when they see it and they propose to intoduce to the citizens of this city a soubrette star who can do more singing and dancing to the square inch than has been seen here in many a moon. Come and see her and you'll take off your hat.

CONVERSED ON VARIED SUBJECTS.

A Pleasant Time Enjoyed by Grace M. E. Church People.

The women of the Grace M. E. church have always been famous for their hospitality, and at the sociable af the Women's Home Missionary Society held at the home of the president, Mrs. A. A. Taft, of Westervelt avenue, last evening, they did not lose their reputation. Quite a number of the congregation turned out for the sociable, and all those who did spent a most enjoyable evening.

The programme opened with a very interesting talk by Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll. A paper on the work of the deaconesses of the church was next read by Mrs. E P. Stevens. Then followed a conversation party. Dainty little cards with the list of subjects were given to each of those present, the subjects on which were as follows: Weather. Home Missionary Work, Last Book Read, Flowers and Window Gardening, Fashions, How Shall We Improve Our Society? Bicycles and Walking, Vacation Trips, Work Which Should Be Done at Home, and Pets. This new kind of entertainment proved a great succes, and formed a very pleasing feature of the evening.

The committee in charge consisted of Mrs. A. A. Taft, Mrs. Edward A. Vermeule, Mrs. Shepherd, Mrs. E. Winkler and Mrs. Henry Voehl.

FRIENDS IN NEED.

Daniel Manley's Benefit a Big Financial Success.

The benefit given by the Pond Tool Social Club to Daniel Manley in T. A. B. Hall last evening was a great success. Mr. Manley is very ill at his home and has suffered considerably, but the substantial way in which his friends assisted him last night will be a great consolation to him.

It is believed that fully $175 will be realized for Mr. Manley.

The officers of the club are Samuel Flynn, president; Edward Coffee, secretary; Daniel Crowley, treasurer; and the committee of arrangements S. Langdon, C. Reagan, S. Stewart, D. Keefe and D. Morning. Samuel Flynn and D. Keefe were the efficient floor managers. Dancing to the latest variations from O'Reilly's orchestra was kept up till a late hour when all departed for home feeling satisfied that a worthy brother would be much relieved.

WORK OF THE EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Rev. Dr. Barnes Makes a Short Address on That Subject.

The Epworth League of the First M. E. church held a meeting last evening under the charge of the entertainment committee. Rev. Dr. C. R. Barnes gave a short talk on the duties of the Epworth League members and several of the committees. He also spoke on how to pass a social evening. Miss Ida Angleman next gave a reading entitled "A Dream." "The Elder Lamb's Donation" was read by Miss Gertrude Sharp, and the programme conclued with the reading of the poem "Love in Baxter Street" by Robert W. Davies, who led the meeting.

Another Branch to the Central.

Sylvanus Ayers, Jr., one of Bound Brook's foremost citizens, has succeed in convincing the Central Railroad Company that a branch of their road to Chimney Rock would prove profitable. The road will be built at once. The stone quarries will furnish freight sufficient enough to almost pay the running expenses of the new road,

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chambertain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family has need of it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once and you will never regret it. For sale by Reynold's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

THE FIRST CHORAL.

Max Bruch's "Arminius" and "Midsummer Night's Dream" to be Rendered.

The Choral Society will meet for its first rehearsal on Monday evening in the Y. M. C. A. hall, when the chorus will begin the study of Max Bruch's "Arminius" and Mendelssohn's "Mid summer Night's Dream" which works are to be given at the first concert of the season on Thursday evening, December 19th. Miss Gertrude Stein, of New York will be the contralto soloist and Max Heinrich of Boston, the baritone. The latter is unquestionably the finest baritone in the United States and it will be a rare treat to Plainfielders to hear him.

In the rendition of "Midsummer Night's Dream," there will be reading, probably by George Riddle, of New York, besides the solo and orchestral work. There is no doubt but that the concert will be the finest ever rendered in this city.

SMASHED THREE FINGERS.

A Children's Quarrel Ends With a Serious Accident.

Two little East Fourth street boys had a fight all of their own yesterday which resulted in serious injury to one of them. John Varden and Clarence Angleman quarreled over some little matter and Johnny, the largest of the two, chased his opponent all over until at last young Clarence picked up a stone.

"I double dare you to throw it," cried Johnny, and it was thrown, but missed him. A second was sent with no better aim, but the last, a stone almost as large as Johnny's head, caught Johnny on the hand, smashing three fingers.

WHO WROTE THE EDITORIAL?

EDITOR RUNYON THE LAUGHING STOCK OF THE COUNTRY CLUB.

Permits the Use of His Columns to Injure Mr. Peterson's Reputation As a Caterer—A Contemptible Dirty Trick.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—In Wednesday's issue of the Plainfield Courier-News the following so-called "editorial" appeared:

Elizabeth is to have a Country Club, like our own Union County Club. One of the first requisites in a successful club is a steward who knows better than to serve sandwiches and sardines after ice-cream. Come up to Plainfield and get points.

I would not have noticed the "editorial," if my attention had not been called to it by several members of the Union County Country Club, who declared it a blow aimed at me directly in order to destroy my reputation as a caterer. Since a certain party has threatened to run me out of the club, simply because I did my duty in trying to preserve the dignity of the club, I have taken up the gauntlet thrown to me by the author or perpetrator of this infamous article.

The fact of the matter is that at the last summer dance, held on September 16th at the Casino, I made a contract with the committee to furnish lemonade, consomme, with small rolls and ice cream, and cakes, but as several gentlemen expressed their desire of having more substantial refreshment than ice cream and cake, I put up gratis four large plates of sandwiches fit to be placed on any royal table. Amongst them, I admit, were small pieces of bread covered with French sardines. But the fact that nothing but the empty plates remained was evidence enough that these sandwiches were highly appreciated. The only fault that anyone could find with me would have been that I neglected to put up a sign "These sandwiches must not be eaten after the ice cream." I am certainly not to blame if the author of the article gorged himself with ice cream and then partook too freely of the sardine sandwiches.

My reputation as a caterer has been established for the last ten years in New York city and also at the Union League Club, of Jersey City, where I have been manager for over two years. I have references from General P. F. Wanser, Mayor of Jersey City, and Hon. Thomas McEwan, jr., member of Congress and secretary of the Union League Club, in which these gentlemen express themselves as knowing me to be a most competent caterer.

It is astonishing to me that the editor of the Courier assumes the responsibility of the article, which is without doubt written to injure me in my business, thereby shielding the real author, whose sole motive is revenge, and depriving me of the opportunity to invite the author to call on me for points on "How to Behave as a Gentleman, Especially at a Club House!"

Very respectfully,
Henry E. Peterson,
Manager of the Union County Country Club.

BROKE TWO RIBS.

William Addis Sr., Falls Into a Scuttle Hole in the Bank Building.

William Addis, Sr., who has the contract for the plumbing work on the First National Bank building, narrowly escaped fatal injury Thursday while working on the top floor of the building. In moving about on the floor he slipped through the scuttle hole, but caught himself before going all the way down. A workman nearby saw the difficulty and assisted him. Mr. Addis received several bruises, and thought it advisable to consult Dr. Hedges. The latter found that two small ribs were broken. Although Mr. Addis feels very sore over his shaking up, nothing serious is expected to result. If he had not caught himself he would have fallen through the building a distance of over fourteen feet, and would probably have been badly injured.

FRAZEE HEIRS WIN.

W. A. Coddington Was Successful and Obtained the Order from the Chancellor.

Several months ago Lillie A. Keepers brought suit against Theodore R. Munn and others in the Court of Chancery through her counsel, McCarter, Williamson & McCarter, of Newark. The heirs of the late Eleanor L. Frazee, of Plainfield, were made defendants and they employed Reed & Coddington to look after their interests in the case. There was considerable property involved in the law suit and on Tuesday last William A. Coddington appeared before Chancellor McGill, in the Chancery Chambers, at Trenton, and was successful in obtaining an order from the Chancellor for the payment of the money due his clients. Yesterday a check was received for a handsome sum made payable to the order of Reed & Coddington and now their clients will receive the amount due them.

LAND OF THE RISING SUN.

REV. FRANK S. DOBBINS TALKS OF THE EASTERN COUNTRIES.

Japan Compares Favorably With Other Countries in the Matter of Civilization. But Not So China—Customs of Natives.

The next best thing to going anywhere is to see a picture of it, and as most of Plainfield cannot visit China and Japan, the Rev. Frank S. Dobbins in his lecture on "The Celestial Empire, the Land of the Rising Sun," brought a large and interesting audience as near as possible to those countries last night in the First Baptist church, with the aid of numerous views and a stereopticon managed by Walter H. Freeman and Charles E. Vail, of the Plainfield Camera Club.

Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes opened the service by reading a selection of Scripture from the screen and then offering prayer. He then introduced Mr. Dobbins, a returned missionary from Japan. A few views of China were first shown, and then the women of the country were illustrated.

"These are the new women," he said, as he pointed out their costumes which were like those of a man. He then told of the Chinese widows and the awful life they live after the death of their husbands. The fearful deformity of the Chinese woman's feet was spoken of and illustrated. The home life of the Chinaman next came in view, and the great aversion of the Chinese for water was described.

"It is not the common people of China that dislike the missionaries; it is the mandarins that hate the Christians because they bring to the common people the light, who then refuse to be ruled so absolutely. They tell the people that the Christians want to get their children into their schools to make oil out of their bodies and send it to America. The Emperor of China owned up that it was the corruption of his officials which accounted for his defeat." The pictures of some of the horrible figures of the heathen gods, the most repulsive of which was Buddha, were shown.

"The priests of Buddha are a great power against the missionaries," said Rev. Mr. Dobbins.

He discussed the other religion of China, the worship of Confucious, and told of the way in which his workers had spread it abroad.

"When they are converted," he said, "they make splendid missionaries."

A number of photographs of the workers in China were shown on the screen, and he said of them: "They are winning their way against all those great odds until now there are 40,000 Christians in China. Many of the missionaries were driven out by the riots, but they will all go back, they'll risk their lives in the work of their Saviour. But they don't all escape. But we are not deterred by all that," continued the returned missionary, who then summoned up his remarks on China.

The second part of the lecture was devoted to Japan and other Asiatic countries. "I will take you first to the Japanese home," said the lecturer. "Some think that they would like to live like the natives, but there are difficulties in the way to a foreigner, especially in the line of eating and sleeping. They sleep on a pillow that looks like a log with a sausage on top."

He next told of the household gods of Japan. After a number of views of street life and church life, he told of the various industries in old Japan and the great improvements made recently.

"The earth has shrunk," he exclaimed, "Japan and China are not as far away today as Ohio was seventy years ago."

Speaking of the married life he said: "It is not wedlock, it is padlock, for the wife is merely a high rank of servant."

In concluding about Japan he said: "In the last war Japan showed that she is in line with the other civilized nations and that Christianity has obtained a firm grasp on her. There is still needed greater work to keep up the progress of civilization."

He ended with a brief sketch of the work in India, on the Congo and in the southern Asiatic countries.

H. E. Rider and J. C. Manning will erect to houses at the corner of Belvidere and Putnam avenues.

Every mother should know that croup can be prevented. The first symptom of true croup is hoarseness. This is followed by a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given freely as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the cough has developed it will prevent the attack. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds' pharmacy corner Park and North avenues.

PRIDE OF THE NAVY

The Indiana Is a Great Battleship.

Made Average Speed of 15.61 Knots in Her Official Trial Trip and Her Builders Will Earn a Premium of $50,000 and Possibly $75,000—A Triumph of American Machinery.

Boston, Oct. 19.—In her official trial trip between Cape Ann and Boone island, a distance of 31 knots, the battleship Indiana made an average speed of 15.61 knots for four hours. This is 61-100 knots above the speed required by the government, and as there was a premium of $25,000 for every quarter knot made over 15 the Cramps will receive $50,000 as a bonus in excess of the contract price offered. This may be increased to $75,000 when the tidal observations are worked out, as the allowance for tidal obstructions will probably give the ship 15.75 knots. The very satisfactory speedd eveloped by the Indiana is secondary to the wonderful way in which the machinery worked.

Perfect Day and Sea.

With their usual luck the Cramps had a day that was perfect for a trial trip. The atmosphere was brilliantly clear and the breeze that was blowing only had weight enough to crest the sea with little whitecaps. The run to Cape Ann consumed two hours, and on the way there the big boilers were bottling up steam for a dash across the line. Forced draught was turned on an hour before the starting point was reached. The can buoys that staked the course were further marked by a government boat anchored at each one.

Speed on First Leg Disappointing.

At 10 o'clock the Indiana approached the starting line. The red flag that indicates that a trial is on was run to her masthead and one short whistle was answered by the Dallas, and at 10:03:13 1-2 Capt. Bradford cried "mark" and the Indiana was off. The run to Boone island was made against the tide and consumed two hours, two minutes and seven seconds. The average speed for the thirty-one knots was at the rate of 15:24 knots per hour. The speed made to Boone island was disappointing, but it was expected, and the expectation was fulfilled, that the ship would do better on the way back. In making the turn ten minutes were consumed, and the Indiana passed the Fern at 12:24:01 1-2.

All Hands Straining Every Nerve.

The speed of the ship was noticeably greater. Under the able superintendency of Walter S. Cramp, the engineers and firemen were straining every nerve. The engines were revolving faster and faster, and the immense hull was quivering and vibrating with rapid pulsations. The first leg was reeled off at an average speed of 15.99; the second at 16.12; the third at 15.85; the fourth at 15.70, and the last stakeboat was left astern at a speed of 16.30 knots. It was 2:20:21 when the trial was over, just one hour, fifty-five minutes and thirty-five seconds from Boone island, and a total of three hours, fifty-eight minutes and twenty-eight seconds. A gain of eight minutes on the westward run was made and the average speed was 15.99. This brought the average for the four hours up to 15.61, a comfortable excess over the contract speed of 15 knots.

Triumph of American Machinery.

A remarkable circumstance was the speed made between the two last stakeboats. It proved that the Indiana was able to do better, after her machinery had been driven at high pressure for a considerable time, than when the engines were first put under forced draught. This is in marked contrast to the performance of English battleships of the Royal Sovereign class. The English have never succeeded in getting much better than sixteen knots out of their first-class battleships, and when they have attained this speed it has been at the expense of ruined machinery. The Indiana's machinery is a triumph of American construction. The engineer officers of the trial board were surprised at the wonderful performance of the engines.

Answered Her Helm Promptly.

The ship was turned in a circle of 400 yards, or 200 less than it took to turn the cruiser New York, and she answered her helm with great promptness. The vessel left last night for Philadelphia and will probably arrive there to-morrow afternoon. It is expected that the Indiana will go into commission some time about the first of next month.

WALLER TAKEN TO GARD.

His Health Was Failing in the Clairvaux Prison.

Paris, Oct. 19.—The negotiations in the case of ex-Consul John L. Waller are still proceeding. The climate at Clairvaux was proving detrimental to the health of the prisoner, and he has therefore been removed to the prison at Gard, Department of Nimes, where it is thought the air will prove more beneficial to him.

Found Dead in His Office.

Washington, Oct. 19.—Stenographer George Flint, who recently came to this city from Mount Vernon, O., was found dead in his office in the Fendall building yesterday afternoon. Mr. Flint was 65 years of age and an Englishman by birth. Death evidently resulted from apoplexy.

Bath Soldiers' Home Crowded.

Bath, N. Y., Oct. 19.—At roll call at the State Soldiers' home yesterday there were 1,060 present and 400 out on furlough. This is a larger number than the home can accommodate, and further applications for admission will have to be refused.

Turned Over to Massachusetts.

Washington, Oct. 19.—The navy department has turned over the receiving ship Minnesota, which has done service at the New York navy yard for years and which was a sister ship of the Merrimac of historic fame, to the state of Massachusetts for use of its naval militia.

Baltimore, Oct. 19.—The convention of the National Association of Building Inspectors adjourned after electing officers and selecting Buffalo, N. Y., as the place for the next convention.

RUSSIA AND KOREA.

Reported Action at St. Petersburg To Secure Korean Independence.

Paris, Oct. 19.—A dispatch to the Eclair from St. Petersburg, says that an exchange of communications has occurred between the Russian government and the Japanese minister at St. Petersburg with reference to the recent disorders at Seoul, the capital of Korea, and that the Japanese minister assured the Russian government that the culprits would be punished. Russia is reported to have replied that she would be forced, in consequence of the riots, to take the steps considered necessary to preserve order, and to make the Korean government independent of foreign interference. The dispatch also says: "As to the course proposed Russia will do her duty, whatever is entailed, without stopping to inquire whether other powers like it or do not like it. She will never abandon Korea, and will protect her against all encroachments."

Japan's Position.

Washington, Oct. 19.—Minister Kurino of Japan, speaking to-day of the situation in Korea, said: "Japan has no purpose whatever in establishing a protectorate over Korea. This can be stated with absolute positiveness. The treaty of Shimonoseki signed by Japan and China recognized the complete independence of Korea, and Japan has fully complied with the letter and spirit of the treaty. The Japanese soldiers now in Korea are there for police purpose only."

AMERICAN CROOKS.

Three Men Arrested in Belgium for a Big Jewelry Robbery.

Bruges, Belgium, Oct. 19.—On Sept 21 last a robbery of jewelry and notes, in all amounting in value to 100,000 francs, was perpetrated in Ostend, the victims being a well known firm of jewelers. Yesterday three Americans named Russell, Killoran and Henry Anderson, were arrested here on suspicion of being the men who committed the robbery. A woman, supposed to be Anderson's mistress, was also arrested. It is said that under the name of Anna James she is well known to the English police. The jewelry stolen was contained in boxes, which were, after their contents had been removed, apparently thrown into the sea, as they were subsequently found on the beach, where they had been washed up by the tides. The police refuse to state what evidence they have to connect the prisoners with the crime, but claim to know that the men are American "crooks."

Probably Ludlow Jail Fugitives.

New York, Oct. 19.—The police officials here are inclined to believe that the three men arrested at Bruges, Belgium, for a jewelry robbery are the three post-office robbers, Killoran, Allen and Russell, who escaped from Ludlow street jail on July 4.

TWO NEW GUNBOATS.

The Nashville and Wilmington To Be Launched To-day.

Newport, News, Va., Oct. 19.—Two additions to the new navy will be floated from the ways of the Newport News Shipbuilding company to-day, one to be christened the Nashville by Miss Eva Thompson in place of Miss Gould, daughter of the mayor of Tennessee's capital, whose brother was accidently killed yesterday, and the other, the Wilmington, by Miss Gray, daughter of Delaware's senior senator. Secretary Herbert and a number of distinguished persons will attend the ceremonies as guests of the contractors on a chartered steamer which left Washington last night.

BRAZIL STICKS TO SPAIN.

Denied That She Has Granted Belligerent Rights to the Rebels.

Washington, Oct. 19.—Senor De Lome, Spanish minister, is in receipt of an official dispatch from Madrid to the effect that the report that Brazil had declared in favor of granting belligerent rights to the Cuban insurgents is absolutely false. On the contrary, the Brazilian government has given, in the past three days, all kinds of facilities for the embarkation of more than 300 Spaniards who have volunteered to go to Cuba to fight the rebels.

OBSTACLE TO REFORM.

Lord Rosebery's Views Concerning the House of Lords.

London, Oct 19.—Lord Rosebery, in a speech delivered at the opening of the new Liberal club at Scarborough, said that to his mind the primary obstacle to all reform and the greatest danger to the stability of the state lies in the present constitution of the house of lords, and that if the nation had realized that fact the result of the recent general election would have been very different.

O. J. TILLSON DEAD.

He Was One of the Most Extensive Fruit Growers Along the Hudson.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Oct. 19.—Oliver J. Tillson, of Highland, died in that village yesterday, aged 63. His death was caused by a stroke of paralysis. The deceased was one of the best known men in Ulster county. He was associated with Jay Gould in publishing a map of Ulster county in 1833 and was one of the most extensive fruit growers along the Hudson river.

ITALY STORM SWEPT.

People Killed and Property Destroyed.

Already Fifteen Deaths Have Been Recorded and More Will Probably Be Heard Of—Heavy Losses by Drowning of Cattle—Shipping Suffered Severely.

Rome, Oct. 19.—Severe storms along the Italian coasts and in the interior have caused a number of fatalities and done much damage to property. Already fifteen deaths have been recorded, and it is likely that more will be reported. There have been heavy losses sustained by the drowning of cattle, and the general damage to property has been immense. Dispatches from places along the coast state that shipping has suffered severely. At Leghorn several vessels dragged their anchors and were carried by the heavy sea and wind high up on the beach. Twelve fishing boats were wrecked at Ancona and four at Giulianova. The water undermined the foundations of a church at Avellino and caused the building to collapse. It is feared that later reports will add greatly to the amount of damage done.

DENVER'S VISITORS.

Festival of the Slaves of the Silver Serpent Captures the City.

Denver, Oct. 19.—Upon the sloping surface of the half mile bicycle track at City park fully 50,000 people stood for three hours yesterday afternoon watching with delight the Ute and Santa Clara Indians in their games, races and dances. In the centre of the great oval, excited by the applause from the spectators, the Utes gave their famous war dances with all the intensity possible. The squaws and pappooses also participated. The Pueblo Indians attracted the greatest amount of attention because of their more picturesque attire. They closed their entertainment by giving several pony races. The down town streets were made noisy from noon until night by the antics of several thousand people en masque, who held the streets almost to the exclusion of traffic. In the morning there was a band contest in front of the grand stand, miners' drill for prizes in the City park and a parade of the city fire department. Last night the mysterious order of the Slaves of the Silver Serpent gave a parade under thousands of colored incandescent lights on Sixteenth street. Several thousand dollars had been expended by the order on their floats, and the scene was brilliant. The festival of Mountain and Plain closed at a late hour by a reception in the Brown Palace hotel by the officers of the Silver Serpent order and a ball participated in by the Slaves and invited guests.

NEARLY 100 INDICTED.

Wholesale War on Camden Saloon-Keepers.

Camden, N. J., Oct. 19.—Nearly 100 indictments against Camden saloon-keepers for selling liquor on Sunday were found by the grand jury on evidence furnished by the Women's Christian Temperance union. The jury finished its work last evening and filed into court, presenting 108 additional bills. These with eighty-five previously found make a total of 193 for the term. Of the 108, prosecutor Jenkins says, between eighty and 100 are against saloonkeepers. They will probably be arrested to-day and required to furnish bail for trial. Just who they are it was impossible to learn, but it is said that some surprises will follow the arrests. The indictments were found for violations of the state laws against Sunday selling. During the past summer the police department was active in making Sunday raids of saloons, and a large number were caught in the drag-net. The proprietors almost invariably pleaded guilty and promptly paid the fifty dollars fine for violation of the excise ordinances. One of the saloonkeepers in the northern part of the city twice paid the fine and, it is said, he is one of those indicted.

THE PRIZE FIGHT FARCE.

Further Efforts To Circumvent Gov. Clarke's Opposition.

Hot Springs, Ark., Oct. 19.—Further efforts were made yesterday in the habeas corpus farce to circumvent Gov. Clarke in his opposition to the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight. Corbett was taken by the sheriff before Justice of the Peace Kirk on a charge of conspiring to commit a breach of the peace by doing bodily harm to one Robert Fitzsimmons. He was then taken before Judge Leatherman, who, before the case was finished, granted permission to Corbett to go to Little Rock, in charge of a deputy, to fill an engagement at a theatre.

Coughs, * Consumption.

The greatest cause of terror of the present day, formerly considered hopeless, is now conceded by the best physicians as curable under proper conditions. Its cause—a depleted condition of the system; a mal-assimilation of food; a wasting away of the tissues; an impoverishment of the blood. The result—a diseased condition of all the organs of the body; a formation of eating ulcers; and the result death from collapse or hemorrhage. But the cure is that greatest concentration into the least possible bulk of the vital elements of lean, raw beef. It is absorbed and nourishes with the least possible effort on the part of the stomach. It creates new tissue, enriches the blood, makes flesh, and by strengthening the great vital centres of the body enables them to perform their functions in a natural manner, and dispel disease. Thousands owe their life to its use.

England Plans To Fortify Venezuelan Frontier.

The Dispute Between the Two Countries Assumes a Grave Aspect—The United States Not To Be Consulted in the Matter—All Moves Will Be Made in London.

London, Oct. 19.—Sir Charles Cameron Lees, governor of British Guiana, has been summoned to London to confer with Mr. Chamberlain upon Venezuelan affairs. The St. James Gazette makes some important and sensational statements regarding Venezuela, which seem to show that the dispute between that republic and Great Britain has assumed a grave aspect. "We are now enabled to give the tenor of a remarkable dispatch in which is outlined the imperial policy toward the colonies," says the newspaper. "The document is of importance inasmuch as it was followed by cabled instructions from Mr. Chamberlain to the governor of British Guiana to obtain without delay a vote for the provision of two Maxim guns, one of which is to be stationed at Uruan or elsewhere along the frontier where the Venezuelans may attempt to cross

By Force if Necessary.

"The mere fact that Mr. Chamberlain cabled instructions for the defense of the frontier in this manner is positive proof that the imperial government will not tolerate a repetition of the Uruan incident, and that it intends to hold the frontier within the Schomburgh line, by force if necessary. In this dispatch Mr. Chamberlain advocates, especially, fostering gold mining and urges the cutting of a road from the upper Barima river to Cuyuni, pointing out its importance from a military point of view, as it would enable the goverment to keep more closely in touch with the frontier and repel attempts of Venezuelan aggression, adding that, in view of the possible early and rapid expansion of gold mining, it will be necessary to provide adequately for the protection of the northwest district, and recommending an increase in the number of military police as well as the erection of barracks on the frontier."

WE ARE NOT IN IT.

United States Not To Be Consulted in the Matter.

Washington, Oct. 19.—At the British embassy there was much interest evinced in the action of Minister Chamberlain on the Venezuelan boundary question, as announced by the St. James Gazette. The embassy was without official advices, however, and it was thought that all steps in South and Central American questions would be taken in London, executed at the point directed, and not communicated to the British diplomatic representatives in the United States. It has been evident to diplomats here for some time that the British foreign office does not recognize the United States as a factor in the question. Among the leading diplomats it is considered as settled that the British government will insist that any arbitration will not, under any circumstances, embrace the tract on the British Guiana side of the Schomburgh line.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

Defined in a Communication to England on the Venezuelan Question.

London, Oct. 19.—It has just been ascertained on high authority that the memorandum in regard to Venezuelan affairs presented by Ambassador Bayard to the British foreign office in August last embodies for the first time in diplomatic correspondence a definition of the Monroe doctrine and an assertion that the United States regarded the acquisition of territory by European powers on the American continent as a menace to republican institutions which would not be encouraged by the American people. It is understood that to this communication no reply beyond a formal acknowledgment has yet been given, but that a more detailed reply has been promised at an early date.

SCHOENHOLZ GETS 48 YEARS.

Practically a Life Sentence for the New York Firebug.

New York, Oct. 19.—Morris Schoenholz, who was convicted of arson in the first degree on last Tuesday, was sentenced by Judge Fitzgerald in the court of general sessions yesterday to forty-eight years in the state prison. During the course of the judge's charge the man broke down and had to be carried from the court room. The judge said: "This defendant, after what, by his counsel, is admitted to have been a fair trial, has been convicted of arson in the first degree, second offense. There is evidence to clearly establish the fact that he committed the same act within a short time in two other places. As to whether he is the arch-conspirator of the gang of firebugs which has been operating in this city there is some doubt. But he is entitled to no consideration. I believe that if I gave him the minimum sentence of forty years I would practically be committing him for life."

Sentenced to Prison for Life.

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 19.—Daniel F. Early, the brakeman who murdered Lyman M. Fenn in the switch yard of the New Haven road here last April by shooting, pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree in the superior court yesterday. Judge Prentice sentenced Early to state prison for life.

Effendi Dies in Prison.

London, Oct. 19.—A dispatch from Constantinople says that Izzet Effendi, the Moslem lawyer who was recently imprisoned on the charge of being the author of the placards that were posted about the city in favor of the Armenians, died in prison Monday last.

Efforts for a Pardon for Elliott.

Columbus, O., Oct. 19.—The state board of pardons has referred the application for the pardon of W. J. Elliott to L. A. Keons, a member, to investigate and report at a meeting to be held Jan. 15, 1896.

Cyclonic Disturbances Off Cuba.

Havana, Oct. 19.—Cyclonic disturbances are reported along the western part of Cuba, with a tendency to reach Havana and the coast of Florida.

TO CRIPPLE SPAIN'S REVENUE.

Cuban Rebels Will Try To Prevent Sugar Cane Grinding.

Key West, Fla., Oct. 19.—According to private advices received in this city, Gens. Gomez and Maceo are preparing to begin active operations in the Las Villas district. They have with them 5,000 well-equipped men. It is their object to prevent the grinding of sugar cane, thereby crippling the government in its revenue. The farmers in the district have asked the government for protection against the insurgents, saying that unless such protection is given them it will be impossible to gather the crops. Information has been received in Havana that the Cubans have completely destroyed Guantanamo. On Oct. 9 the passenger train that left Los Minos station was blown from the track near Puerto Principe. The rails for 150 feet were torn up, the locomotive badly damaged, and the guard car in which were seventy-five soldiers under the command of a lieutenant, was blown about fifty feet, completely demolishing it. According to the Spanish newspapers, no one was seriously injured.

EVIDENCE AGAINST HOLMES.

Philadelphia Officials Preparing for the Accused Murderer's Trial.

Philadelphia, Oct. 19.—Detective Geyer returned last night from his trip to Indianapolis, Toronto and Boston for witnesses and evidence in the trial of Holmes for the murder of Pietzel which is to come up Oct. 28. He has notified a number of persons to be ready to come here when summoned, and has brought back some important bits of testimony. Perhaps the most important is a mysterious letter which had been torn into fragments and afterwards pieced together again. Detective Geyer has this letter pasted on a large sheet of paper and submitted it to Mr. Barlow, the assistant of the district attorney. It is said to be of a highly important nature and a valuable discovery.

FOR GALLANTRY IN THE WAR.

A Medal of Honor Awarded to William G. Whitney.

Washington, Oct. 19.—By the direction of the president a medal of honor has been presented to William G. Whitney, late captain of company "B," Eleventh Michigan Volunteer infantry, for distinguished gallantry in action at Chickamaugua, Ga., Sept. 30, 1863. This officer at the time the enemy was about to make a charge, went outside the union temporary works and at great exposure to himself cut off the cartridge boxes of the confederate dead and wounded and brought them within the union lines, where the ammunition secured was used with good effect in again repulsing the attacking force. Capt. Whitney at present lives at Allen, Mich.

ANOTHER GOLD EXPORT.

The Treasury Reserve Now Down to $92,840,058.

Washington, Oct. 19.—The withdrawal of $400,000 in gold at New York yesterday for export to Buenos Ayres, Argentine republic, reduces the gold reserve to $92,840,058. It has been several weeks since the gold export movement ceased and the resumption yesterday, while not unexpected, is unwelcome. It is believed, however, that it does not presage another onslaught on the gold reserve to any great extent.

A Baltimore Pastor Celebrates an Interesting Event in His Career.

President Democratic Association.

The Hudson County Board of Freeholders have adopted a resolution providing that employes of the county who fail to pay their debts, be discharged.

The determination of some of the Plainfield bicyclists to enter the municipal campaign as a political factor, will not, it is feared, prove a howling success. Most men are bicyclists for the exercise and sport there is in it, and when it comes to politics they are either Democrats or Republicans.

The Consolidated Society of Oranges which has for its avowed object the consolidation of all the Oranges into one city, has opened its campaign for the season and has a bill which will be introduced in the Legislature early in the session. It is probable that the decision will be made contingent on a favorable vote of the people in the municipalities affected. The sentiment in favor of such a consolidation is growing rapidly.

Her subject is divided as follows: The woman of the past, present and future, heredity and environment, invalidism the result of wrong environment rather than heredity, self-knowledge, health in advanced years due to early education.

Game Law Inconsistencies.

One of the inconsistencies of the present game law is the fact of the fall flight of woodcock is now on and moving south. The law prohibits the killing of them until October 26th.

A Democrat's Faith.

Farmer Martine evidently has faith in the Democratic candidate for Governor. It is observed that he has posted the lithograph of McGill on his new building on Ninth street.

CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR.

Vermont's Great Statesman Recommends Dr. Greene's Nervura To All.

He Says Dr. Greene's Nervura is a Wonderful Medicine---It Surely Cures the Weak, Tired and Nervous.

HON. T. S. MCGINNISS.

Hon. T. S. McGinniss of Jericho, Vt., the war horse of the Democratic party, is Vermont's silver-tongued orator, and always and ever commands the attention and respect of the people. He ran at the last election as the people's candidate for governor. Such is the high standing of the man, who, out of his own experience, advises you to use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy to be cured.

"We have used Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy in our family," he says, "and think highly of it. We could plainly see that it had the desired effect upon Mrs. McGinniss, and firmly believe that could we have persuaded her to use the medicine, it would have cured her entirely from her extremely nervous condition, but she was greatly benefited as it was.

"We have used it in our family with good results, and have recommended it to our friends, and know of many who have used Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy with the best results. I do not hesitate to recommend the medicine to all. It is a wonderful medicine."

It must indeed be a great and good medicine which can call out such strong words in its praise as this recommendation of this honored statesman, for all to use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy to be cured. But it is a fact that doctors, statesmen scholars preachers, druggists and the people everywhere, unite with one voice in pronouncing this grand medicine the greatest curer of disease ever known. The weak, the feeble, the nervous, the run-down and debilitated, the sufferers from poor blood, rheumatism, dyspepsia, kidney and liver diseases, all are restored to health and strength by its marvelous curative powers.

It is not a patent medicine, but the prescription of the most successful living specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th street, New York City. He has the largest practice in the world, and this grand medical discovery is the result of his vast experience. The great reputation of Dr. Greene is a guarantee that his medicine will cure, and the fact that he can be consulted by anyone at any time, free of charge, personally or by letter, gives absolute assurance of the beneficial action of this wonderful medicine.

Y., says that he always keeps Dr. King's New Discovery in the house and his family has always found the very best results follow its use; that he would not be without it, if procurable. G. A. Dykeman Druggist, Catskill, N. Y., says that Dr. King's New Discovery is undoubtedly the best cough remedy: that he has used it in his family for eight years, and it has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. Why not try a remedy so long tried and tested. Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c. and $1.00.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

THEATRICAL.

A visit to "Florida on Wheels" will be a revelation to most people, and all who see it come away impressed with the idea that Florida is a better and greater State than they had any idea of. The Florida Rolling Exposition is doing a great thing in bringing Florida into notice and advertising the great advantages of the land of orange groves, fruit and flowers. W.S. Webb, in charge, is a member of the Florida Daily Times-Union, of Jacksonville.—York, Pa., Dispatch. At Central railroad depot Wednesday and Thursday of next week.

A delightful performance, consisting of the choicest features of farce comedy and minstrelsy, is what the theatre-goers of our city may expect next Monday evening, when "Cupid's Chariot," presented by Raymon Moore's comedians and singers, makes its first appearance at Music Hall. The company comes highly endorsed by press and public, and will no doubt be one of the best and most novel attractions of the season. These are the days of theatrical splendor, when scenic environment, gorgeousness of costuming, and magnificence of appointments figure as prominent factors to success, and the management which overlooks these essentials finds, sooner or later, that the eye of the theatre goer of today must be satisfied and pleased with the sage intelligence as meet his sense of humor and feeling of interest. The plot of "Cupid's Chariot" is based upon an entirely new subject, and deals with the much talked-of bicycle craze. The piece is full of up-to-date comedy, plenty of pretty girls, funny comedians, new music and novel specialties.

Webster's Brain.

Bill Nye remarks that Daniel Webster's brain was not only large, but it was in good order all the time. You may not have as large a brain as Daniel but you can keep it in order all the time. One of the essentials to this condition is unimpaired sight, for without a good clear eye you cannot have a good clear brain, and no man can tell if his eye is as it should be without an optical test. This is freely and reliably assured you at Colliers', 103 Park avenue.

Taken into Custody by a Rude Policeman Who Hailed Him with a Shrill, Annoying Whistle—Was Not Coasting, Because That Would Be Rude.

New York, Oct. 19.—The Duke of Marlborough, who was arrested yesterday afternoon for coasting on a bicycle in Central park, is very indignant over what he terms an "awful outrage." When he was taken to the station house he told the sergeant in charge that he was unaware of the existence of any ordinance against coasting and that he regretted the occurrence. The sergeant, after a sharp warning, allowed the duke to go. He returned to the Plaza hotel immediately after he was released. The news of his arrest quickly spread among his acquaintances, a score or more of whom called to offer their condolences and to apologize for the police. The duke, however, refused to receive anybody, and sent his secretary, Mr. Morris, downstairs to the hotel office to say that his grace was engaged, and could not be interrupted under any circumstance.

Will Not Sue for Damages.

"I know the details of the whole affair," said Mr. Morris, "and it was a gross outrage, and his grace so considers it. He told me the story when he returned to the hotel. He was very much annoyed over the incident, but he does not contemplate taking any measures against the policeman who was so rude as to arrest him. His grace was riding along at an average rate of speed, when a policeman came galloping along, rudely blowing a shrill, annoying whistle. His grace, of course, didn't know what the whistling meant, but continued along until he was halted.

The Rude Policeman.

"'You are violating the rules,' said the policeman, 'and will have to go to the station.' 'I'll go anywhere,' said the duke, 'for I supposed that anyone who chose to do so could ride in the park.' 'It is a violation of the park ordinances,' said the policeman, 'to either coast or ride faster than eight miles an hour.' The duke accompanied the rude policeman to the sub-station at McGown's pass, where he made himself known, and was allowed to go. The policeman who made the arrest apologized."

It's Rude To Coast.

Mr. Morris added that the duke had been riding only for a few months, and was not at all expert. He did not think that the duke was proficient enough in the use of the wheel to coast. Besides, it was rude. Yesterday afternoon's experience is not the first the duke has had with American policemen. A week or so ago a coach containing a coaching party, among whom was the duke, was bowling along through Wappinger's Falls when one of the horses cast a shoe. A stop was made before a blacksmith's shop, and the usual country crowd collected to gaze at the unusual sight of a gay coaching party. The duke and the future duchess descended from the coach and started for a walk, during which they wandered into a country residence and onto the lawn, when the gruff voice of a country constable reached them. The duke was warned that he and his fiance were trespassing, and he was much put out by the incident, but Miss Vanderbilt was not at all disturbed.

FIERCE PRAIRIE FIRES.

A Little Child Left Alone by Its Mother Perishes.

Rothsay, Minn., Oct. 19.—This region has been swept the last two days by the greatest prairie fire ever known in this section of the Red river valley. The conflagration has already destroyed property to the value of $50,000. Several houses, barns and graneries have gone up in smoke, besides several thousand tons of hay. Yesterday, when the fire reached the farm house of Henry Timberlake, Mrs. Timberlake left her boy of four years and went to untie some horses which were in danger. While she was gone the child was surrounded by the flames and perished. Last night snow began to fall, and it is believed the fire will be put out. The flames were set by sparks from railroad engines.

REBEL CAMP CAPTURED.

Another Government Victory Reported via Madrid.

Madrid, Oct. 19.—A dispatch to the Imparcial from Havana says that the governor of the Sagua district has captured an insurgent camp near Carboneras. Six rebels were killed and a number of horses and a quantity of arms, ammunition and hospital and other stores fell into the hands of the government troops.

Fort Wayne's Celebration.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Oct. 19.—Yesterday was Governor's day at the Fort Wayne celebration, and it was devoted entirely to military displays. In the morning Gov. Matthews reviewed the visiting and local militia, and the afternoon was occupied by two sham battles. The celebration closed last evening in a blaze of pyrotechnical splendor.

Big Fire at New Orleans.

New Orleans, Oct. 19.—A disastrous fire occurred here about 6 o'clock last evening. All the buildings fronting the river on the square between Elysian Fields street and Isplanade avenue were burned, including Rice Mill B., formerly known as Perseverance Rice mill, which was entirely destroyed. Loss about $300,000.

Gen. S. A. Duncan Drops Dead.

Englewood, N. J., Oct. 19.—Gen. Samuel A. Duncan, one of the wealthiest residents of this place and a well-known New York lawyer, dropped dead last evening. Heart disease was presumably the cause. Gen. Duncan was 55 years of age.

THE NEVILLE AFFAIR.

BY FRANK H. MARSH.

(Copyright, 1895, by Irving Bacheller.)

CHAPTER III.

"At last, shaking off the spell that seemed to bind him, he took a solemn oath that both his false friend and faithless wife should feel his vengeance. He sold his beautiful home and converted everything that he possibly could into money. Then he began his wanderings, traveling over nearly the whole of America and Europe. Eighteen years he searched, without finding a trace of them. His money was nearly spent, his health shattered and he was but a sad wreck of his former self.

"It was by the merest accident that he finally saw her, whom he once called wife. She was alighting from a carriage, and he saw her enter the home of Dr. Neville, whom he recognized, although he had greatly changed, as his false friend, Ralph Bertie.

"Securing lodging a few squares away, he began watching the house, ready to take advantage of the first opportunity that would present itself and enable him to make sure of both his intended victims. He watched them at night, for had they seen him too often in the daytime they might have recognized him. At the expiration of a three-weeks' vigil he saw all the servants leave the house on the night of their visit to the theater. His time had arrived, and he was about to step up to the door and gain admittance when a boy ran up and rang the bell. The doctor took the boy inside and left the door unlatched. So he ascended the steps and quietly entered, unheard and unseen.

"He secreted himself until after the doctor and the boy had departed; then, issuing from his place of concealment, he entered the room where Mrs. Neville was seated. Upon his entrance she rose and demanded to know who he was.

"'So you do not remember me?' he said; 'look closer and see if you cannot recognize the husband you have so shamefully wronged?'

"A hunted look came into her eyes as she stood speechless, gazing into his face. Then, with a cry of despair, she sank to the floor and covered her face with her hands to shut out the sight of him she had deserted. As she remained crouched there he drew a delicate stiletto, and, raising her arm, drove it a couple of inches into her armpit. She did not move for several minutes, during which time he stood silently watching her. Then, with a cry of pain, she sprang to her feet and faced him. Her face was flushed and her eyes glittered; the veins on her forehead stood out like huge cords, while the cords and muscles of her neck seemed straining to burst through her delicate skin.

"With a mocking smile upon his face he told her that the little instrument with which he had pricked her was covered with a deadly poison, the venom of an Indian cobra, and that no earthly power could save her from its deadly effects. A look of horror came into her face, and, reeling, she fell to the floor. He, fearing that some of the household might return, stole out into the night.

"He had selected the armpit as the place to make the puncture, as a wound there was less likely to be discovered than on a more exposed portion of the body. From the papers next day he learned that no suspicion of a crime had been aroused.

"Again he resumed his vigil. Nearly three months passed before he was at last able to meet the doctor in his house. He had seen the housekeeper and her husband leave and take an omnibus for a distant part of the city. Walking boldly up the steps, he rang the bell, telling the doctor when he came to the door that he was troubled by severe pains near the heart and wished him to prescribe for him. Dr. Neville asked him in and closed the door after he had entered. Taking him into one of the rooms, he told him to be seated while he made an examination.

"'I prefer to stand, while in your presence, Ralph Bertie,' was the astonishing reply of the stranger.

"'Who the devil are you, that calls me by that name?' demanded the amazed doctor.

"'Devil' is well said, doctor, for you will find that I am a devil. Driven to devilish deeds by your own devilishness; and my name is Robert Hart. Do you know me? Ah! I see that you do, you shrinking coward; but you do not seem very much pleased by the recognition. You cannot imagine how much pleasure it gives me, though, as I have hunted you for eighteen years, just for the pleasure of this meeting. I will now discharge the debt I owe you.'

"Drawing the same stiletto he had used upon the woman, he made a stroke at the shaking wretch, who threw up his hands and warded off the blow, receiving a scratch on the back of the hand in so doing. Seeing this, his enemy stepped back and returned the stiletto to his pocket, much to the doctor's surprise, for he expected another attack.

"Robert stood with his arms folded while he told the doctor that he had introduced himself to Alice in much the same way just before she passed into death's shadows. 'You are traveling the same route she took, for that scratch is as deadly as the venom of a cobra can make it, and I suppose you know what that means, doctor?'

"With a cry of rage the doctor sprang at his throat, but Robert jumped aside and tripped him, and, springing upon his back, held him to the floor until the poison had rendered him helpless. Then he stood and watched his death agonies until they had ceased, when he left the house and returned to his room.

"The next day found him too ill to move, and in two days more he had been taken to the hospital, where the fever kept him a captive until two weeks ago, when he was discharged. He was now without money or friends, and wandered aimlessly about the city until two officers arrested him. The rest you know. For I, gentlemen, am Robert Hart, whose story you have just heard. Do with me as you will. I have nothing more to live for. My vow has been fulfilled and death will soon claim me."

This was the story the prisoner told, broken into very often by violent fits of coughing; and it would not have taken an expert to have told that he was in the last stages of consumption.

When he had finished his story he drew from his pocket a stiletto and a small vial containing a few drops of some colorless liquid. Placing them on the table, he said: "This stiletto is the instrument which killed Ralph Bertie and Alice; and the vial still contains a few drops of the venom used upon it."

The stiletto was a small affair, the delicate blade being about five inches long and no larger at the hilt than a darning needle. On close inspection a coating of some transparent substance could be noticed upon it, this being the venom into which it had been dipped. The handle was of pearl and covered with delicate carvings, curiously wrought.

After he had been placed in the strong room with which the house was provided the chief said to me:

"I don't know what to think of this affair; for, if this man is taken into court and his story is told, it will be a sweet morsel of scandal for those who were not friendly to the doctor."

As I was departing he cautioned me not to mention what I had heard until he had seen me again.

The next day as I was looking over a newspaper a short item caught my eye, to the effect that a suspicious character whom the chief of the secret service had apprehended and had confined in his strong room the evening before had ruptured a blood vessel during a violent attack of coughing and died before a doctor could be summoned.

The chief paid me a visit that evening and told me that the prisoner had indeed died as was stated—summoned to appear before a higher court than any here on earth. He had examined his arm after he had died and found the scar left from the wound made by the Englishman's scalpel, which corroborated the story of his snake experience.

As the chief and the Nevilles had been fast friends, he asked me not to divulge what the dead man had disclosed the night before, and as Barton and Duroch were also thus instructed the facts of the case were never published.

The old chief, who died shortly before I left London, told me on his deathbed that he had always felt as though he had done wrong in withholding the truth of this affair so long, and asked me to make it known after he had passed away.

This I have now done. And to some who remember the principals it will, no doubt, be a great surprise.

MUNYON

Makes Permanent Cures Where Physicians Fail.

Mr. O'Neil Was Said to Be Incurable.

Mr. Thomas O'Neil, fireman at Sailor's Snug Harbor, Staten Island, says: "Last fall I was laid up with sciatic rheumatism. I was treated by four doctors with every remedy known to medical science, even electricity, but they finally gave me up saying my leg would always be paralyzed. At this time I was urged to try Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. Its effect was wonderful. I found entire relief from pain after a few doses, and by continuing the pellets, was completely cured."

A Specific for Each Disease.

Professor Munyon puts up a separate remedy for every disease. His Rheumatism Cure never fails to relieve rheumatism in from one to three hours and cures in a few days. His Catarrh Cure is guaranteed to cure catarrh, healing the afflicted parts and restoring them to health. His Dyspepsia Cure speedily cures all forms of stomach trouble. His Cold Cure never fails to cure the most severe cold in a few hours. The Munyon Remedies are sold at all druggists, mostly at 25c a bottle.

Personal letters to Prof. Munyon, 1505 Arch st., Philadelphia, Pa., answered with free medical advice for any disease.

FILTERING OUT RHEUMATISM

Rheumatism is in the Blood.

It is Caused by a Poison Which Can Be Filtered Out.

The Kidneys are Our Natural Filters, and Keep Our Blood Pure. When They Are Sick We Get Rheumatism, etc. The Way to Cure Our Kidneys.

Though you may know what disease you have, perhaps you don't know what causes it.

Rheumatism is a blood disease.

It gives you pain in your muscles, but this is caused by the poison in your blood.

To cure rheumatism you must purify your blood.

People used to think because the muscles were sore, that they could cure rheumatism by rubbing the muscles with liniment, but all the liniment in the world will not cure rheumatism.

Nothing will do it but filtering the blood.

When the kidneys are well, they filter the blood and keep it pure and healthy. They filter out all the waste matter, the poison, the uric acid, and throw it out of the system.

When they are sick, they don't.

When they are sick, you get Rheumatism, or perhaps Gout, Anaemia, Pale Sallow Complexion, Headache, Neuralgia, Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Pain in the back, Sleeplessness, and a long train of similiar troubles.

When your kidneys are sick, you should take Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills. They will cure your kidneys When your kidneys are once well, everything else will be well.

Well kidneys purify your blood as it ought to be purified. They make it fresh and clear and healthy.

Pure blood makes a clear, rosy complexion, bright eyes, glossy hair, red lips, clear brain, happy thoughts.

The healthier your kidneys, the purer your blood.

Asparagus is a plant which has a very strong healing and tonic action on the kidneys. It is one of the chief ingredients of Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills.

Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills are perfectly harmless, purely vegetable, pleasant to take, and will cure when other prescriptions or medicines have failed.

There is no reason why you should stay sick. If you want to get well you can. All you have to do is cure your kidneys. This can be done with Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills.

A box of Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills should be kept in the house, for you don't know how soon you may need them.

A few doses will relieve. Pain in the back, in the joints, in the muscles, will all go after a few doses of Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills.

A few boxes will cure. When your kidneys are well, nothing will bring back your disease again, but carelessness.

Overwork, worry, excesses, overeating, will make your kidneys sick again, will back your Rheumatism, Gout, Kidney Troubles, etc.

But otherwise, once gone, they will stay away. Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills cure thoroughly.

They renew your kidneys, your blood and your health.

For sale by all druggists, or by mail, prepaid, for 50 cents a box. Valuable medical pamphlet sent free on request by Hobb's Medicine Co., Chicago or San Francisco.

POETRY FOR THE WHITE HOUSE.

Five Verses of Rhyme on the Three Little Cleveland Maids.

Some time ago a Plainfield man made a fishing rod which he presented to President Cleveland, and now a Plainfield woman has written a piece of poetry concerning the three little Cleveland tots and sent it to Mrs. Cleveland, upon the receipt of which the White House mistress replied in a pleasing little note to the authoress such as only a woman can write. The poetess is Miss C. Moran, of 631 South Second street, and the verses follow:

Three little maids in the white house,
Three little maids at play.
Laughing, singing, frolicing,
All the live-long day.
Calling for papa Grover,
Laughing aloud with glee.
As they tumble over
When climbing upon his knee.
The loveliest little maidens,
All in this broad fair land,
Is Ruth, Esther and Marion,
A famous little band.
When Grover goes out fishing,
They feel so sad and lone,
And ask their beautiful mamma,
Why papa don't stay home.
And papa Grover feels so proud,
That it does him annoy,
When he recollects the papers say,
That Grover wants a boy.

TWO KINDS OF INK USED.

The Discovery Leads the Freeholders to Refer the Bids.

There was a row at Nelson's Hotel, in New Market, yesterday afternoon, when bids were opened for macadamizing a six-mile road from Dunellen to Stelton, involving an expenditure of $3,000. The last of the eight bids read was that of H. S. Wilson, of Dunellen, who has built several roads for Middlesex county. He offered to do the work for seven cents a square yard.

After the reading of the last bid some one in the rear of the room offered to bet $100 that it had not been read as presented. After a wrangle the bids were submitted for inspection. It was found that in the bid of H. S. Wilson the word "seventy" had been written over some other figure, possibly eighty-four cents, and the writing was in different ink from the other part of the proposal. This created a sensation. The awarding of the contract was left over for the whole Board of Freeholders.

NAGGING HABIT NOT A VICE

Simply Nervous Weakness---Use Paine's Celery Compound.

Nagging is a disease, says an eminent physician in the last North American Review. "It is often," says Dr. Edson, "the result of a diseased condition or of strains on the strength."

It is the nervous men and women who most readily fall into that unfortunate class, and anything that does away with nervous weakness will cure the depression, irritability and the nagging habit that so often accompanies a run-down nervous condition.

Persons who lead an active life need something to invigorate their nerves and to give them fresh, ruddy blood. It is the rebellious nerves overtaxed by domestic duties, added to the constant living in the vitiated atmosphere of indoors that reduces the nervous strength of so many women.

Prof. Edward E. Phelps, M. D., LL. D., presented to his profession the results of accurate investigations in the medical laboratory. His formula for recruiting worn-out nervous tissues and building up the nerve centres when exhusted, this remarkable formula now known the world over as Paine's celery compound, has become familiar to every medical practitioner and family physician.

"Break-down and nervous prostration come," say these physicians, "unless the great nerve centres are promptly fed upon proper nutritive material."

Paine's celery compound is the one great nerve-feeder and nerve restorative. By its means all the functions of the body receive a fresh supply of nerve food. It encourages the body to manufacture an abundant supply of this indispensable vital force, without which there can be no health, strength nor happiness in living. From the lack of nerve force men and women are driven to despondency, melancholia, insanity and suicide.

Thousands of letters like the following from Mrs. Lizzie Arnott of Mansfield, Ohio, are received by the proprietors of Paine's celery compound every month in the year:

"I have used two bottles of Paine's celery compound for nervousness, and have found great relief from its use. It is truly a wonderful remedy. I am better and am using no more medicine now."

Just give it a passing thought that you can get an antique oak bedroom suit, 8 pieces, for $15. $20, $25 and $30, including a woven wire bed spring and a mixed mattress. No house in the city offers such inducements.

And then to think again that you can get tapestry Brussels carpet for 50, 60, and 70 cents a yard, made and laid with paper, which is a saving of 15c per yard. Where is there a house in the city that will offer such bargains?

And then imagine and wonder how we can afford to give away a moquette rug or parlor table with a parlor suit for $20, $30, $40 or $50.

Some of our competitors say that our ads are too much sameness and that this ad. is old. Well, we will admit it, but as long as it does the business and saves the people money we will continue to run it.

GUESTS OF FARMER JAMES.

MR. MARTINE AND HIS FRIENDS HAVE A GLORIOUS, GOOD TIME.

Democrats and Republicans Were There as Friends of the Farmer Orator, Who Treated Them Royally—The Features.

Farmer Jim Martine and his friends had a time of it Saturday afternoon in the orchard of Cedar Brook farm. It is superflous to say what the Farmer Orator's politics is, because every one who has ears to hear and has ever heard the name of Jim Martine knows that he is an unterrified Democrat. But not so all his friends, though it is not the fault of his persuasive arguments that it is thus, but rather what some philosphers might term the eternal fitness of things—that is, if there were no Republicans the Democrats wouldn't have a chance to talk.

But Saturday afternoon a large number of Democrats and Republicans relegated their political complexion to the innermost part of their souls and remembered only that they were friends and guests of Farmer Jim. And what a host was he. He was here, there, everywhere and all over at the same time, grasping the hand of every one who walked, rode or wheeled, and making all feel that he was a royal good fellow.

Not in a long time has there been such a representative gathering of Union county citizens in Plainfield as there was at this event of Saturday. There were people there who held office, who had held office and who wanted to hold office. There was but little politics talked of outside of now and then two Democrats or two Republicans causally remarking in a confiding manner to one another that the chances were good for their particular ticket to win. The only thing that could possibly be construed as savoring of politics was the fact that a lithograph of Chancellor McGill greeted the vision of the visitor as he entered the orchard, and small cards with the proverbial crowing and victorious rooster, with the following inscription printed thereon were distributed about:

HURRAH FOR M'GILL!
PLAINFIELD, N. J.:
Jim Martine's Orchard, October 19, 1895.

Nearly every man on the grounds wore one of these little cards stuck in the band of his hat or pinned on his coat. Editor McBride, of The Elizabeth Journal, doubtless expressed the sentiment of nearly all the Republicans present with reference to the propriety and consistency of hurrahing for McGill when he remarked that when "I am among the Romans I do as the Romans do."

The weather was perfect, not too chilly nor too warm, but just about right.

The principal sport was the shooting of live pigeons, and several crates of these birds were provided by Mr. Martine for the men of steady muscle and good aim.

The refreshments were plenty—both of a solid and liquid nature. On the end of the first table sat seven and a half gallons of what the Farmer Orator termed as "invigorating liquids," while arrayed along the tables extending towards the other end of the orchard were sandwiches, cookies, crackers, bologna, pickles, cheese, and, as the auction bills say, other articles too numerous to mention. Over a sizzling fire a big tin boiler of coffee provided a thirst quencher and invigorator for those who cared not for the other liquids. A barrel of oysters were also consumed, while a sawbuck supported a half barrel of amber-colored fluid that the producer finds necessary to buy a stamp for from Uncle Sam. But all these things were there to be eaten and all one had to do was to help themselves.

About four o'clock a wagon was drawn out into an open space and Mr. Martine, whose duty it was to act as master of ceremonies was surrounded by a few of his friends and lifted bodily into the wagon, as was also all the other speakers. Mr. Martine's extreme modesty led him to cover his face with his hands, but finally he broke forth and gave his distinguished audience such an eloquent address that they were spellbound. He said that he was sorry a local paper had termed the affair a political gathering, for it had been the farthest thought from his mind. It was a gathering of his friends, both Republicans and Democrats, and he hoped that no feelings of partisanship would enter. He spoke of his allegiance to his party and was sorry that all present were not of the same faith. His hearty words of welcome were felt by everyone.

Editor C. C. McBride, of the Elizabeth Journal, was the next one to be placed on the platform, and said among other things, that he was glad that this was not a political gathering, but a meeting of friends. Continuing, he said, that he counted Mr. Martine one of his warmest personal friends, and had the highest regard and respect for him. There would be no better Republican than he, if he would only come into the fold. He hoped that in the future his party would treat him better and place him in a position where they would hear from him. He concluded in speaking in high terms of Mr. Martine's hospitality and thanked him for his kindness.

Mr. Martine then introduced Editor Thomas Lane, of Summit, by saying that he had lost his bashfulness two weeks ago when he asked a winsome young lady for her hand and secured it, a lovely Kentucky blue grass belle. He also said that he had been fortunate to come out of a law suit and and only pay six cents damages. Mr. Lane was warm in his praise of Mr. Martine's hospitality.

J. J. Matthews, of Elizabeth, came next and also testified to the warm open-heartedness of the host.

Fred Marsh was with much difficulty placed in the wagon. He said that he was interested in the shooting and was losing money every minute he was staying away from the traps.

Hon. T. M. Kelly, of Elizabeth, Judge Green of Westfield, Alford B. Cook, of Rahway and W. O'Brien, of Morristown, followed, and all spoke of Mr. Martine's generous treatment and everyone was glad that it was not a political gathering, and hoped that James would not forget them next year.

George R. Nichol, of Scotch Plains, spoke and was warmly encored.

TWO CULPRITS IN CITY COURT

THE JUDGE WAS LENIENT AND SUSPENDED SENTENCE ON BOTH.

Pat Kane Made a Plea That He Has a Big Family to Support, But Notwithstanding He Blew in Half of His Wages Saturday.

The regular Monday morning harvest at the city court was unusually small this morning. There were only two to come before Judge Coddington and they were both ordinary drunks. The first was Patrick Kane who began a woeful story of a large family that he had to support.

"What do you mean" demanded the Judge. "by going off and spending your money to get drunk on rum when you have a large family to support."

And then he gave Kane such a raking over that he will not forget for awhile.

"I won't do it again," he whined "if you'll let me go this time."

"How many times have you been arrested?" asked the Judge

"About three or four times," mumbled the prisoner.

The Judge next inquired after the state of Kane's finances and learned that he had blown in half of his week's earnings on Saturday evening He ordered him to turn the rest over to Captain Grant who was to see it safely in the hands of the wife and ask her to report any refusal to support her. Sentence was then suspended.

John Bruner was the other culprit, a German whose little command of English had been half frightened out of him when brought into the presence of the Judge. He had been arrested by Officer Saunders for being helplessly drunk.

"Do you plead guilty to the charge of being drunk?" said the Judge.

"A-a a little bit, not much," came from the prisoner.

He was then asked how many times he had been arrested.

"Ich been, Ich been—only once," he answered in a most appealing tone, and the judge took pity on his terror and suspended sentence.

FLIM-FLAMMED BY A ROOM-MATE.

A Dilapidated Suit of Clothes Left in Exchange for Valuable Articles.

A very clever theft was committed at Anderson's boarding house on Somerset street, Saturday afternoon.

A man going by the name of William recently came to Plainfield from New York and secured a position with Horace J. Martin, the blacksmith. He secured lodging at Anderson's place and was put in a room with a man named Connolly, the two sleeping together.

Saturday afternoon both happened to be idle and they lounged about their room. Connolly feeling a little tired reclined on the bed and took a nap. Just previous to his taking a snooze William offered him a drink from a bottle, which he accepted, and which he afterward learned belonged to him. When he awoke he found that his room-mate had skipped, taking a new suit of clothes, a valuable gold watch and $3 in money, leaving an old suit of clothes in the room.

Connolly did not speak of it till late yesterday and little hopes of capturing the thief are entertained. He was in town, however, yesterday, but left toward night for parts unknown.

JOHNSON'S TRIAL POSTPONED.

An Important Witness In the Somerville Murder Case Missing.

In court at Somerville this morning Jacob Johnson, the colored evangelist, who is charged with the murder of Annie Rogers, also colored, at Somerville some time ago, was arraigned for trial before Judge McGee. He was represented by Meehan & Steele, of Somerville, who asked that an adjournment to January 6th be taken on account of an important witness of the defence being in Chicago. The counsel stated that they did not wish to proceed with the trial until this person could be brought to Somerville to testify. The court granted the adjournment.

But for the strong wind from the northwest, Saturday would have been an ideal day for the athletic sports of the Junior Y. M. C. A., although it grew rather cool as the afternoon advanced. FARMER CLARK SHOOTS.

And He Put Buckshot in the Village Cobbler's Leg.

For some time past Farmer Ben Clark, of Scotch Plains, has been missing the product of his corn field with great regularity, but whether it was a two or four-legged robber he has been at a loss to determine. The particular field in which the raids were made on was located in the rear of the James T. Lyons estate on Park avenue, and in this field last night Mr. Clark kept a watch as soon as dusk commenced to fall.

He carried a shot gun, and at 7:30 came upon the crouching figure of a man in among the shocks husking corn, and with his bag almost filled to the top. He called upon him to cease his nefarious operation, but the individual did not show much disposition to do this, so Clark leveled his gun at the man and gave him a charge of buckshot in his leg, at the same time remarking that he would shoot him dead if he didn't quit.

The man quit and Clark proceeded over to where he had been husking and found that he was George Stillger, the village cobbler. He confiscated the bag of corn and took it to the hotel, and this morning threatened to have Stillger arrested if he did not settle for the corn that he had missed, which amounts to several bushels. Though Stillger was not seriously injured by the charge of buckshot, he is compelled to walk with a limp today.

FOR THE BUILDING FUND.

A Large Sum Received and the Tea Was a Complete Sucess.

The spacious parlors at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Matthews, of Grove street, were crowded Saturday afternoon with those who went there to attend the tea given by the Guild of the Church of the Redeemer. The guests were received by the following reception committee, Rev. Dr. Jocelyn Johnstone, Mrs. Charles Matthews, Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Mrs. Emile Woltmann, Miss Kate Embury, Mrs. George P. Dupee, Mrs. Frank Browne and Mrs. Samuel Townsend.

The tea room was most artisticly decorated and here presiding over a very prettily arranged table were Miss Bessie Day and Miss Davis, while Miss Alice Barlow, Miss Daisy Elsburg, Miss Brown, Miss Helen Phillips and Miss Alice Thompson, served the tea and chocolate.

The table of fancy articles was under the charge of Miss Woltmann, Miss Stevens, Miss Lizzie Hasbrock, Miss Emily Thompson, Miss Phillips and Miss Pond, and the candy and cake booth was looked after by Miss Grace Brown, Miss Horne, Miss E. DeKlyn, Miss Mary Embury and Miss Barlow.

The tea was a great success socially as the attendance was much larger than was expected. The financial part was especially pleasing as, about $200 was received which goes toward the building fund.

TOM COLTAR USED A KNIFE.

WM. CASEY WAS HIS HOST, BUT THAT MADE NO DIFFERENCE.

Coltar Imbibed Too Much and Then Refused to Go Home—Cut His Friend on the Head—Held for the Grand Jury.

On complaint of William Casey, a resident of Manson place, Justice William Newcorn issued a warrant on Saturday for the arrest of a man named Thomas Coltar. The charge was assault and battery.

The facts are on Friday night Mr. Casey had a social gathering at his home and among the guests was Coltar, who had lingered too long over the flowing bowl and in consequence became rather noisy.

Casey finally told him that he had better go home and get to bed as he had to work the next day and would probably feel better. He then took hold of Coltar and escorted him to the front piazza. Coltar was obstinate and refused to go. Casey insisted on his going. Suddenly the former took a knife from his pocket and cut Casey severely about the head. He then skipped.

Casey went to Dr. Hedges and had several stitches taken in the cut.

Sergeant Kiely was notified to capture Coltar and finally succeeded in finding him at the Pond Machine Tool Works where he worked. He was locked up and yesterday morning had a hearing before Justice Newcorn. Coltar pleaded guilty to the charge and was placed under $200 bonds to await the action of the grand jury. Bail was furnished by his friend, Thomas Lyons.

SUING FOR BOARD OF HORSES.

The Plaintiff Claims to Have Received No Pay and the Defendant Vice Versa.

The case of Stryker against Brock, on contract, came up in Justice Crosley's court this morning. Lawyer Walter Hetfield represented Mr. Brock and Lawyer Roselle, of Marlboro, represented Mr. Stryker, of the latter place.

It appears that Mr. Brock took a horse and colt to Mr. Strykers' place previous to his going to Europe and wanted the latter to pasture them till his return. A verbal contract was made, but Mr. Stryker claimed that the board for the colt had not been paid, while Brock claimed it had. In consequence he brought suit for the money. The case was tried before the following jury: P. A. VanArsdale, P. Hansen, C. Frank French, Jacob Voehl, Julius Stahl, J. M. Smalley, L. E. Barkalew, W. A. Wilson, H. Chamberlain, F. S. McGann, Isiah Coriell and H. C. Reynolds.

The case was given to the jury at about 1:30 this afternoon and they returned in five minutes with a verdict for the plaintiff for the full amount, $83.75.

An Overhead Crossing.

Work was begun this morning by a large force of men to depress Main street in Bound Brook underneath the Central Railroad and the Lehigh Railroad Company's tracks. STRIKES AND LOCKOUTS

Annual Report of the U. S. Labor Commissioner.

Valuable Statistics Bearing Upon the Problem of Capital and Labor —Number of Industrial Disturbances, Their Cost and the Persons Involved.

Washington, Oct. 21.—The relations of capital to labor, so far as these apply to strikes and lockouts, during the past seven and one-half years, are exhaustively treated in the annual report of Col. Carroll D. Wright, the commissioner of labor, which is made public to-day. The report shows that during the foregoing period Illinois had the largest number of establishments affected, both by strikes and lockouts, there having been 10,060 of the former and 1,193 of the latter. New York came second on the list with 9,540 of establishments involved in strikes and 723 in lockouts, and Pennsylvania third with 8,219 strikes and 490 lockouts.

Strikes and Lockouts.

The industries most affected by strikes during the seven and one-half years included in the report, were the building trades with 20,785 establishments involved, coal and coke with 5,958, clothing with 3,041, tobacco with 2,506, food preparations with 2,398, stone quarries and cutting with 1,993, metals and metallics goods with 1,834, transportation with 1,327, printing and publishing with 808, boots and shoes with 607, furniture with 459, wooden goods with 409 and brick with 406 establishments, while those most affected by lockouts were the building trades with 1,900, stone quarrying and cutting with 489, clothing with 431, brewing with 150, boots and shoes with 130, metals and metallic goods with 128, and transportation with 112 establishments involved.

Number of Employes Involved.

The total number of employes involved or thrown out of employment during the period covered by the report was 2,391,203. Lockouts were ordered in 3,853 establishments, having 274,657 employes before the lockouts, of which 205,867 were thrown out of employment in consequence thereof. These establishments secured 27,465 new employes after the lockouts, 16,300 of which were brought from other places.

An Interesting Feature.

An interesting feature of the report is the tabular statements showing the states in which the majority of the strikes and lockouts were located. These were five in number and were respectively, Illinois, Massachusetts, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania. The strikes in this quintet of commonwealths were about 70 per cent. of the whole number of establishments in the United States affected by strikes, while the lockouts were about 76 per cent. of all those throughout the country. The report shows that these five states contained 51 per cent. of all the manufacturing establishments and employed 56 per cent. of the capital invested in the mechanical industries of the country, taking the census of 1890 as the basis of computation.

Cost of Strikes.

The report shows that out of a total of 20,488 strikes for the entire country more than 56 per cent. occurred in 26 cities. The total wage loss to the employes during the foregoing period in these 26 cities was in round numbers $35,000,000, while the loss to employers was something less than $29,000,000. The number of lock-outs as compared with the strikes for the same period was small in the aggregate, but the losses incurred were enormously increased. The total was 244 lock-outs with a loss of wages to the employes of $12,000,000, while that of the employers was nearly half that sum.

Successes and Failures.

For the period covered by the report out of the 46,853 establishments affected by strikes, success in their demands was gained by the emyloyes in 20,397; partial success was gained in 4,775 establishments and failure followed in 21,687 establishments. Out of the 3,853 establishments having lock-outs, 1,883 succeeded in gaining their demands, 331 partially succeeded and 1,558 failed.

Causes of Strikes.

The leading cause for strikes was for an increase of wages, and these represent 25 per cent. of the whole number. Thirteen per cent. were for reduction of hours, 8 per cent. were against reduction of wages, 7 per cent. were sympathetic, 6 per cent. were for increase of wages and reduction of hours, 4 per cent. were against employment of non-union men and 3 per cent. for a recognition of the union. The remainder of the strikes are attributed to a number of other causes of no especial general interest.

Death of Susan B. Clark.

Middletown, Conn., Oct. 21.—Word was received here last night that Susan B. Clark of this place, state regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution, is dead at Atlanta. Miss Clark left for Atlanta on Monday of last week and was suffering from a cold at the time. It is thought that death was the result of trouble superinduced by the cold. Miss Clark was 65 years old and was one of the best known ladies in the state.

YOUNG MACKAY'S DEATH.

Duke of Aosta Had Refused the Pony Which He Rode.

London, Oct. 21.—A dispatch to the Chronicle from Paris says that the Duke of Aosta had refused the pony which John W. Mackay, jr., rode on Friday and which threw him with fatal results. It is supposed that Mr. Mackay had a sudden attack of congestion of the brain. It has been learned that in addition to a fractured skull Mr. Mackay had one of his legs broken by the fall. He was thrown with great force against the trunk of a tree, striking between his eyes. Both of his eyes were crushed. The first reports that he was rendered unconscious, remaining so until his death, prove to have been erroneous. It is now stated that after the accident he remained conscious for three hours and that he recognized his friends, Messrs. Lynch and Digby, by their voices and pressed their hands. He had repeated collapses before he expired.

His Face Terribly Disfigured.

After death his face presented such a terrible appearance that Mr. Lynch went to Paris and dissuaded Clarence Mackay from going to Mange to see the body. Mrs. Mackay, who had started on Friday on a tour of Normandie, was informed of the accident by telegraph and she at once started on her return to Paris. The body arrived last evening and was at once transferred from the railway station to the Mackay residence, where it was placed in the Chapelle Ardente that had been prepared for it. The family was present. Many wreaths were received from friends of the family. The body will be embalmed.

EXODUS FROM ROCHESTER.

Striking Garment Workers Leaving the City To-day

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 21.—Final preparations for the migration of the striking garment workers were completed yesterday at the headquarters of the local branch of the local union. This morning the men will meet at their hall and proceed to a special car attached to a regular train on the Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg railroad. The delegation occupying this car is to go to New York, Boston, Baltimore and other places in the east. Another lot of the men will board an Erie train in the afternoon bound for Chicago. Special preparations have been made with the railroad companies for transporting the men and there will be brothers of the Garment Makers' union to meet them at their journey's end. The men are in the best of spirits over the thought that they are going to shake the dust of Rochester from their shoes and hope to make the manufacturers come to their terms before they come back. There are about one hundred men in all and they comprise the best mechanics at the clothing business in the city. By their departure it is expected to cripple the clothing business in this city to a great extent. This is positively the first delegation of strikers to leave the city and all reports to the contrary are groundless. Many strikers left the city early in the struggle, but they went singly and at their own expense.

FELL DEAD ON THE STREET.

Sudden Death of a Prominent New York Doctor.

New York, Oct. 21.—Dr. Harry Bell Conrad, a prominent physician of 74th street, accompanied by his wife, while walking along 86th street, near Clinton ark west, late Saturday night, suddenly stumbled and fell, dragging his wife to the sidewalk with him. The doctor was placed in a cab in an unconscious condition and hurriedly taken to Hotel Endicot, but he died in the hotel elevator. Three physicians worked over the already dead man hoping that he had not yet expired. Dr. Conrad leaves a widow and two grown sons. He was born in Philadelphia in 1852. He graduated from the University of New York in 1877.

REGISTRATION IN BALTIMORE.

Big Increase and Both Parties Charge Gross Fraud.

Baltimore, Oct. 21.—There will be 114,254 voters privileged to cast their ballots in Baltimore city in November, some thirteen thousand more than ever heretofore. There were 35,075 newly registered this year, while 18,161 names were striken off, a net gain of 16,914. Of the total number registered 98,632 are whites and 15,622 colored. Both republicans and democrats charge gross fraud. In many districts the registration lists show enormous increases over the police census taken a few months ago.

CLAIM 800,000 ACRES.

Indiana Citizens Want Land in West Virginia and Kentucky.

Jeffersonville, Ind., Oct 21.—Through Judge John H. Stalsenburg, their attorney, Harry H. Hay of this city and six other heirs, Saturday filed suit for possession of 300,000 acres of land lying in West Virginia and Eastern Kentucky. Much of the land is said to be very valuable. They claim to inherit the land from an ancestor, Robert Luckett, who was for years a surveyor for the state of Virginia. He was paid by land grants in the name of the state.

BRIDGE JUMPER JEERED.

Speedy Prevented from Making a Plunge at Newark.

Newark, N. J., Oct. 21.—Kearney P. Speedy, who says he will spring from Brooklyn bridge this month, made an attempt to jump from the western abutment of the D., L. & W. railroad bridge over the Passaic river here yesterday, but was prevented by an engineer of the road. The draw had previously been turned off so that he could not reach the centre of the structure. Two thousand persons gathered on the docks and jeered Speedy as he was driven away by his manager.

Father Ariens' Jubilee.

Bridgeport, Conn., Oct. 21.—The golden jubilee of the Rev. Father Theodore Joseph Ariens was celebrated at the Park City theatre Saturday night. A tremendous crowd was present. The affair took the form of a rendition of "Lauda Zion" by a chorus of several hundred voices. The celebration is being continued to-day, and visiting priests, 100 in number, are present.

Death of J. O. Paige.

Bridgeport, Conn., Oct. 21.—John O. Paige, aged 68, father of ex-Speaker Allan W. Paige, died yesterday. He was county commissioner in 1880 and served four terms.

FIRED AT PEDESTRIANS

An Insane Man Holds the Police at Bay.

For Fifteen Hours He Marched Around a Room in His House and Occasionally Fired from the Window at Passers-by—At Last Captured and Manacled.

Chicago, Oct. 21.—Armed with a repeating rifle and a double action revolver G. S. Merwin defied the police and every one else for sixteen hours from 11 o'clock Saturday night until 3 yesterday afternoon. Mr. Merwin is a man who grew wealthy in the iron trade and retired some time ago. Saturday an infirmity of the mind which has been threatening for some time came upon him with renewed force and he locked himself in one of the rooms of his mansion at 35 Woodland park, where the sensational events of Sunday were enacted. It was 11.30 o'clock Saturday night when the man's insanity took a really violent form and he attacked his wife, who is in extremely delicate health. He ejected her from the rear door. Neighbors cared for her and sent word to the nearest police station. Lieutenant Bonfield, in command, with four officers, went at once to the house. They found all the doors locked and the windows fastened. They could see Merwin in one of the upper rooms marching backward and forward with the rifle over his shoulder.

Fired at a Pedestrian.

They thought best to leave him until morning and when day dawned they were astounded at seeing him approach the window overlooking the street and after raising the sash, take aim with his rifle and fire directly at a pedestrian across the street. Before the street could be cleared he had repeated the performance several times, but his aim was bad and no one was hit. A police officer was stationed at each end of the block and the way was barred to all foot passengers. The occupants of houses on the opposite side of the aristocratic park drew the curtains and shutters of their windows and closed their front doors and used their rear doors the remainder of the day.

Mattresses for Shields.

The question as to the method to be employed in securing the man without injuring him or permitting him to hurt any one was a hard one to solve. Every few minutes during the day the police would hear a shot from one of the weapons in the hands of the crazed man, but nothing could be done. Several years ago a similar case cost the life of one of the best policeman on the force, and Lieut. Bonfield did not care to risk a sacrifice of that kind. It was finally decided that an attempt to overcome him with fumes of sulphur might result successfully. Accordingly the heat was shut out of the rooms of the house and sulphur was burned in the furnace. A small amount did not have the desired effect and as they did not care to endanger the man's life the plan was abandoned. Finally it was arranged that an entry should be made to the room from two doors simultaneously. Two officers were to enter at each door. Each man had a small hair bed mattress for a shield.

Overcome and Manacled.

The plan worked perfectly, the crazed man not having an opportunity to fire before being overcome and manacled. He was then taken to the insane hospital. Mr. Merwin is 35 years old. About a year ago he was kicked on the head by a horse and it is known the injury affected his brain. The supposition is that the attack of Sunday was the result. After he was rescued Merwin talked incoherently about buying wheat at forty-eight cents per bushel. From this it is believed he has been either making or losing money in grain speculation.

GOV. CLARKE DETERMINED.

Advises Sports Not To Come to Arkansas To Be Disappointed.

Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 21.—The United Press reporter had an interview with Gov. Clarke at his home last evening. The governor talked very freely of the pending mill between Corbett and Fitzsimmons. He said: "I am unchanged in my position. There is no possibility of a fight between these men at Hot Springs. The idea of two or three hundred sports at Hot Springs being able to pull off a prize fight in Arkansas when the law says they can not do it, is preposterous in the extreme. Judge Leatherman's decision doesn't amount to anything. The word 'ruse' should have been usen instead of the word 'rule.' I was expecting Corbett would adopt some such ruse as his habeas corpus trial in order to bring the matter before the courts. Attorney General Kinsworthy left here for Hot Springs yesterday to get a complete transcript of the case and as soon as he returns, which will be to-night, I shall adopt measures that will quickly terminate the present suspense. I cannot say what I shall do, but you can say for me that the fight will not take place. I think it would be but fair for you to advise these people in the north and east not to come to Arkansas expecting to see the fight, because it will never come off in Arkansas."

Youn, Haughey Acquitted.

Indianapolis, Oct. 21.—Schuler Colfax Haughey, who has been on trial in the federal court since Tuesday for aiding and abetting his father to wreck the Indianapolis National bank, was acquitted here yesterday. Frank Coffin will be sentenced to-day or to-morrow and will at once apply for a writ of supersedeas from Judge Woods.

Memorial to Peter Turner.

New York, Oct. 21.—The bronze bust, a memorial of Peter Turner, through whose agency the first Catholic church on Long Island was built, was unveiled in the church yard of St. James' pro-cathedral in Jay street, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon.

Supposed Wife Murderer Arrested.

Woodsville, N. H., Oct 21.—Milo Grey, who arrested at East Putney, Vt., on suspicion of having murdered his wife in Randolph, N. H., several years ago, has been brought here.

Registration at Poughkeepsie.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Oct. 21.—The total registration in this city is 5,522, 400 less than last year.

"HELP!"

A WOMAN'S DESPAIRING CRY.

It is Heard. A Prominent Actress Escapes Great Danger.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

How startling is a woman's cry for help!

"What can I do? Where shall I go?" She knows not. This cry goes out today from every city, town, and hamlet in this country.

It comes from women who are suffering tortures of body and mind from some form of female complaint. Many, through natural modesty, do not consult physicians, for many dread their examinations. They know not where to seek for help.

This alarming condition of things is simply wrong. The peculiar ailments of women are curable, and in most cases very speedily. Lydia E. Pinkham's genius and liberality have given to every woman a sure and consistent means of relief.

No woman should suffer when she can obtain free advice. She can state her case fully to Mrs. Pinkham, woman to woman, without reserve, and the answer will come from one of her own sex. Be one of the vast army of women who write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., and preserve your health. "Only a woman can understand a woman's ills."

A prominent actress, in a letter to Mrs. Pinkham, says:—

"... You cannot imagine the fearful condition I was in when I first wrote to you. I was simply of no use to myself or any one else. I had worked hard, and my nervous system was shattered from womb trouble and travelling constantly. I ran the gauntlet of doctors' theories, till my health and money were rapidly vanishing. ... I'm all right now, and am gaining flesh daily. I follow your advice faithfully in everything. Thank you ten thousand times for what your knowledge and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have done for me."

HAVOC IN WIND AND FIRE.

Lives Lost and Farms Swept by Flames.

Arid Gales and Blistering Winds of New Mexico Transferred to the Northwest—Sand Storms and Dust Storms and Prairie Fires Causing Great Destruction.

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 21.—For the last two days the arid gales and blistering winds of Arizona and New Mexico seem to have been transferred to the northwest. The chief difference is that instead of the scorch of an equator sirocco, the icy blasts of the poles have held sway. This has been the general condition, not only in Minnesota, but in the Dakotas and Manitoba. Sand storms and dust storms have made the air a blinding, freezing scourge, accompanied as they have been by a low temperature that cannot ordinarily be expected before the latter part of November. The wind has reached and maintained for hours a velocity of fifty miles per hour and the alkali deposits of northern North Dakota and Manitoba and the sandy soil of South Dakota and Minnesota have armed and intensified the universal blizzard.

Prairies Burning.

More than one life and large amounts of farming property have been the forfeit of nature's angry mood. The winds have fanned smoldering wood fires into fresh blaze and fury, and started new conflagrations, particularly in the Red river valley and Manitoba, and the consequences in the way of loss to farmers have been fearful. Some of these prairie conflagrations have appeared in southwestern Minnesota and South Dakota, but the bulk of the disaster has fallen on both sides of the Red river valley, in Minnesota and North Dakota, and extending for many miles up into Manitoba. Locomotive sparks started three fires on the trip from Red Lake Falls to the crossing of the Fosston line at Tilden. Just east of this crossing the worst fire occurred. It swept north and great loss resulted. Another bad fire started in Kertsonville, eight miles east of Crookston.

Lives Lost; Property Destroyed.

Nearly all the country between Crookston and Maple lake north of the Fosston line has been fire swept and the loss will be heavy. In Manitoba, near Elm creek, two section men of the Canadian Pacific were burned to death. Houses, stables, live stock, grain stacks and hay have been consumed in all directions in the province and half a dozen people all told have lost their lives and a score more have been seriously burned and permanently maimed. It is estimated that a quarter of a million bushels of grain and nearly a million tons of hay have been destroyed.

INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT.

Hall Caine Meets With Encouragement at Ottawa.

New York, Oct. 21.—A special from Ottawa, Ont., says: Hall Caine, who came to Canada on behalf of British authors in the hope of inducing the government here to modify their copyright bill, has had several interviews with premier Mackenzie Bowell. He met Sir Charles Tupper Saturday and discussed the question of copyright with him. Instead of strong opposition, which had been spoken of as the feeling of Canadian authors and publishers against the British association stand, he has found the opposite to be the case. After interviews with Montreal publishers and author he found not a single instance where the Canadian act was upheld. The sentiment was found to be unanimously in the opposite direction. Since his first arrival in the capital he says, a number of authors have waited upon him and explained their position in the matter, which is also in a line with the opinions that he met with in Montreal.

DISCREDITS THE REPORT.

Minister de Lome Does Not Believe the Conde de Venadito Is Lost.

Washington, Oct. 21.—Senor E. Dupuy de Lome, the Spanish minister, when seen last evening said that he had not received any news as to the alleged loss of the crusier Conde de Venadito. He believes the report to be a second edition of a false rumor already officially denied. He is instantly informed in such cases and was one of the first to furnish the press with full details when the cruiser Sanchez Barcaiztegui was lost off Morro Castle, Havana.

376 WERE LOST.

Sinking of the Chinese Transport Kung-Pai.

London, Oct. 21.—The Daily Graphic to-day publishes a dispatch from Shanghai saying that there were 400 troops on board the transport Kung-Pai, on which vessel an explosion occurred on October 16, the transport sinking immediately thereafter Only twenty-four persons are reported to have been saved.

Sale of the A., T. & S. F.

Topeka, Kan., Oct. 21.—December 5 has been fixed for the sale of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad at public auction at the door of the court house in this city. Within six days from the above date the transfer will be accomplished and the great railway system will again be in operation as an independent system.

Counterfeiter Stein's Case.

Newark, N. J., Oct. 21.—Julius Stein, who was arrested several weeks ago on a charge of being one of a gang who made counterfeit coins, was indicted by the United States grand jury and the further preliminary hearing was dispensed with. Stein will probably be taken to Trenton to plead.

Sterling Shut Out.

STRIKE PROBABLY A FAILURE.

Indications Point to the Defeat of the Bituminous Coal Miners.

Phillipsburg, Pa., Oct. 21.—It now looks as if the strike ordered by the convention of bituminous miners held in Clearfield on October 15 will be, so far as the Beech Creek and Clearfield sections are concerned, a failure. The miners of the Osceola district, which comprises about twelve mines, have resolved not to suspend work and to take no notice of mass meetings held in that vicinity. In the Beech Creek region the miners employed in the eight mines also voted to continue at work. From the Cambria coal field the advices are that the miners in the vicinity of Patton, Hastings and Spangler will continue at work and from the Clearfield region, where the Berwind-White Coal Mining company has large interests, they are to the effect that there will be no suspension at any of the mines. At Morrisdale the miners decided to suspend work and remain idle until Thursday, and then, if the strike did not prove to be of a general character, to return to work. At Bloomington and Oshanter the miners are still on strike. Lancashire No. 2 is the only mine so far in the Beech Creek region that indorsed the action of the convention and decided to suspend this morning.

CHICAGO HOTEL FIRE.

Panic Stricken Guests Escape to the Street in Scant Attire.

Chicago, Oct. 21.—Fire in the storeroom on the Grand Union hotel yesterday caused a small panic in the hotel and drove the guests into Dearborn street in scant attire. The blaze had made some headway when discovered, and the corridors of the upper floors were filled with smoke when the hotel employes rushed through them sounding the alarm. Subsequent events proved there was no cause for alarm, and all of the seventy-five guests, save four women, got out by themselves. The four women were carried out by the firemen and hotel employes. The fire was confined to the third floor and the damage was principally from water. The building belongs to Chief Justice Fuller of the United States supreme court.

THEATRICAL.

A combination of pretty girls, beautiful music, clever comedians and elegant costumes is what the patrons of Music Hall may expect to see this evening when the biggest success of the season is presented. A musical comedy in three acts by Henry J. Sayers, entitled "Cupid's Chariot." The piece is written up to date, and is full of novelties and funny situations. One of the many features is a bicycle race which takes place in full view of the audience. The comedy has been so arranged as to introduce one hour of minstrelsy, and Manager Sayers has secured Geo. Thatcher with his XXth Century Minstrels, and combining these two attractions makes one of the strongest traveling companies on the road. The leading features of the company are those universal favorites, George Thatcher, "nuf ced," and the world's greatest ballad singer and composer, Raymon Moore, who will appear at every performance and render selections from his own pen. The piece is staged on an elaborate scale, and a first-class entertainment is assured.

—The steam roller is now at work on West Eighth street between Plainfield avenue and Division street. A gang of Street Commissioner Meeker's men are following it up to put on the finishing touches.

—Mrs. E. J. Geisinger and Miss Ada Eaton, are representing in this city the Palm Christi Co., manufacturers, hair and scalp preparations, sold through L. W. Randolph. The sales in Philadelphia last summer have been enormous.

—The memorial drinking fountain on West Second street, near New street, is now ready for the public and is being well patronized. It stands in front of the house where the young lady in whose memory it was erected was married and from where her funeral took place.

—Almost every town on the line of the Central Railroad was represented at the Livermore lecture. Several people came from Elizabeth. The lectures in this popular course are exciting widespread interest. The one on Forestry will doubtless be largely attended, as a special rate will be made to teachers and scholars by the Board of Education.

—The Elizabeth Mutual Telephone Company, which organized more than a year ago, but which was forced to dissolve because of a failure to deposit with the State Treasurer $10,000 as a guarantee of good faith, and which later did so and received a new charter from the City Council, have at last decided on the kind of instrument they will use, and it is expected will soon be in operation.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces, such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. PROGRESSIVE WOMEN.

A Society Organized to Discuss Parliamentary Rules.

A novel and promising club was organized this morning at the home of Miss C. R. Yates, on West Seventh street, the object of which is to study parliamentary rules.

The idea was brought forth by Miss Yates, as there are many women in Plainfield who are often called upon to conduct meetings and decide questions, and do not feel thoroughly capable from a strictly parliamentarian view. The club is composed entirely of women, and they will meet the first and fourth Thursdays in each month at ten o'clock, in the Y. M. C. A. hall. This morning the club elected the following officers:

President, Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson; Vice-President, Miss C. R. Yates; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Martin I. Cooley; Recording Secretary, Miss May Cahoone; Treasurer, Mrs. Carman Parse; Superintendent of Press, Mrs. S. K. Krom. The initiation fee is twenty-five cents and anyone can join by applying to the Executive Committee, which consists of the officers.

The club starts off with the following members: Mrs. Griffin, Mrs. J. W. Johnson, Mrs. S. A. Cahoone, Mrs. R. K. Case, Mrs. J. M. McNaughton, Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, Mrs. Carra Peck, Mrs. S. R. Krom, Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, Miss Grace Cooley, Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, Miss Mary Maire, Mrs. Carman Parse, Miss May Cahoone and Miss C. L. Yates. A short constitution and by-laws were adopted to govern the club. The members will take time in conducting the meetings in alphabetical order and Roberts' rules of order will be used. The next meeting will be held Thursday morning next at 10 o'clock in the Y.M.C.A. building and every member is urged to be present.

PUNTS AND KICKS.

Dunellen will have a team on the field this year but will not play in the league.

The Central New Jersey Football League is not dead after all, as Westfield intends to remain in the league as well as Plainfield. The first game between the two will be played next Saturday at Westfield. The next contest takes place at Plainfield on election day, November 5th. Should each team win a game a third will be arranged.

A tie in the morning and a victory in the afternoon was the very creditable record of the opening day, Saturday, of the Alis football eleven, of this city. The team, which averages about one hundred and ten pounds, met a Westfield team at Westfield in the morning, and although the home team outweighed the Plainfield boys, the visitors kept the ball in Westfield's territory most of the game. Neither team scored. In the afternoon a game was played on the Park avenue grounds with an eleven from Dunellen. During the first half, Dunellen made a safety and O. T. Waring made a touch-down, making the score 6 to 0 in Plainfield's favor. Harry Cuming made another touch-down in the second half, the score at the end being 10 to 0. Harry Cuming and J. V. Rittenhouse did most of the rushing, and made large gains behind good interference. Plainfield's goal was at no time in danger. Van R. Schuyler, of this city, played centre for Dunellen. The line up of the team both morning and afternoon was as follows: Left end, Orville T. Waring; left tackle, Lindley Hillman; left guard, Donald Stewart; centre, Walter Long; right guard, James Taylor; right tackle, Albert Erickson; right end, Albert Finch; quarter back, Willard Wadsworth; left half back, Harry Cuming; right half back, J. V. Rittenhouse; full back, Roy Phillips.

A MEN'S CLUB ORGANIZED.

The Men of St. Joseph's Church Unite to Form a Social Club.

A men's club was organized at St. Joseph's church yesterday afternoon under the title of the Holy Name Society. Seventy one names were enrolled as charter members in the club, which will be a social organization. There is some talk of making it a mutual benefit association.

The following officers were then elected: President, Thomas Neeley; Vice-president, L. H. McCollough; Secretary, Harry Watson; Treasurer, Richard Boice. The society will meet again on the third Sunday in November.

—The Spartan Literary and Athletic Society hold a meeting tomorrow evening at the home of Clifford Braider of Manning avenue.

INS AND OUTS.

Between now and spring steps should be taken by some of the base-ball enthusiasts to put a first-class baseball team in the field for Plainfield. A team properly managed would prove a success without a doubt. It could be arranged to have the team composed of Plainfield players with the exception of the battery, which could be semi-professional. Now, ye cranks, get together and give Plainfield a team for 1896, which will be a credit to the city, and don't let such towns as Dunellen, Somerville, Raritan and Flemington get ahead of us. Plainfield demands a base-ball team for '96.

STUDYING BOTANY.

When first Glenfield Pearse went to the reading room at the British museum, he was so weighed down with the thought of his own insignificance and the ponderous amount of books that were already in the world that he almost gave up the idea of writing at all, for it was not as a struggling author yearning to earn his bread that he came to consult some of the million odd volumes, but because, being an authority on the botany of his own county, he had been asked to write a paper on that subject.

The subdued voices of the officials, the deadened footfalls on the soft flooring, rebuked his enthusiasm. Then the tangle of catalogues on that center table!

It was through one of those lists that Glenfield first made the acquaintance of Ursula Holyroyd.

She was trying to pull about 70 pounds weight of morocco bound catalogue from its place, and standing at the next space he went to the assistance of beauty in distress.

After that they met frequently, and Glenfield began to find that his subject required constant attendance at the library, and wrote to his mother at Glenfield manor that the books of reference at the museum were invaluable, and he could not tell when he would be home—at any rate, not until the pheasants required his attention.

Many a quiet talk they had together as they wandered about the great galleries, exchanging theories and ideas, for Ursula was a delightfully refined and educated woman, and though spending half her life working up wearisome statistics for a firm of publishers, thereby earning the money which was necessary to eke out the small pension possessed by her mother, she was as bright and happy as if engaged in the most congenial employment.

In her father's lifetime she had spent many a pleasant season at Malta or Gibraltar or wherever the squadron touched and her father, a captain in the navy, could make a temporary home for his wife and daughter.

Glenfield had persuaded her to come into the Egyptian gallery one day, and a passing smile seemed to illumine the stony face of a pharaoh as he sat, hands on knees, looking down on the love drama going on at his feet, which was enacted much the same in his day.

"How I should love to see the land where all these wonders came from!" said Ursula. "I know I have been lucky in seeing so much of the world, but I always longed for father to be stationed at Alexandria. I fear I am morbid, but mummies have a fascination for me."

"I should like to take you to Egypt," said Glenfield, watching the bright face at his side.

She looked up, surprised at his words.

"You forget. Struggling authors like you and I cannot do such things. One cannot go to Cairo for a few pounds."

He had never told her he was poor. She had simply taken the fact for granted, seeing that he pored over the musty volumes day after day until the opportunity came for a rest and stroll with her.

"May I come and call upon your mother?" he said presently. "I should much like to meet her and hear of your brother, who was on board the Moonstone as gunnery lieutenant when your father was captain."

The following morning he received a letter from his mother reminding him of the guests he had already invited for the pheasant shooting, commencing on the following day.

It was six weeks before he could again come up to town.

"Ursula," he said as he grasped the little hand she held out to him, "child, tell me what is the matter. What has happened?"

She could not trust her voice. Only she looked down at the black dress she wore in mute answer to his question.

Together they paced the long, deserted galleries, and she told him the story of her mother's short illness and death.

No word escaped her of the awful desolation in her heart nor of her poverty, which was very real and terrible now. At her mother's death the pension had been stopped.

"But, you see, I have my work left to distract my thoughts, and I must work harder than ever now," was all she said, and he guessed the rest.

They were in the gem room, and the sparkle of the diamonds and the sunny gold of the topaz seemed in their costly splendor to mock at the pitiful little tale of acknowledged bereavement and unacknowledged poverty.

"Ursula," he said, looking down into the eyes which rivaled the sapphires in their depth and purity, "will you give me the right to comfort you. Will you be my wife?"

At last she looked at him, and he knew before the words were spoken that all the pearls and rubies which surrounded them could not buy the happiness which was to be his—a free gift.—Exchange.

The Smart Jack Tar.

The average bluejacket as I knew him long ago was always a good fellow, but you seldom knew where to have him. He was unquestionably a drunken fellow, and he used to manage to get dead drunk faster than any other class of men with whom I have ever been acquainted. He was not steady. Apart from his officer he seemed almost a reed shaken with the wind, though his personal courage was always lionlike when roused. He was proud of his officer, especially if the officer was hard on him. He was somewhat of a fatalist, quick to imagine that fate was against him and to give up the struggle against it. He was quarrelsome in his cups, but almost always distinctly witty out of them. He preserves his humor to the present day.

The stories about frying watches and lighting pipes with £5 notes give an utterly false notion of the bluejacket. Philip drunk might have done such things, but not Philip sober. Philip sober has always been and is peculiarly sharp and thrifty about money. Philip sober 40 or 50 years ago took wonderful care of the pence, and he does so still. But 40 or 50 years ago he was filled with an ignorant suspicion of every one who had to do with his money, and who did not play upon his fancies. He has got over that now perhaps pretty well, but no one of his rank of life makes closer calculations or drives a better bargain than the developed bluejacket of today.—Admiral Colomb in North American Review.

Cannibal Humor.

The missionary stood before the cannibal king as the cook built the fire in the kitchen stove.

"I am greatly disappointed in you," remarked the missionary to the king.

"But, my dear boy," replied the king playfully, "you are not in me yet." And the missionary turned away and gazed out yearningly over the placid bosom of the Pacific.—New York Sun.

GOSSIP FROM BERLIN

German Reichstag To Assemble on Nov. 21.

The Murder of Heinrich Schwartz by Socialists Causes All Shades of Political Opinion To Call for Repressive Legislation—Dr. von Boetticher Again Accused.

Berlin, Oct. 21.—Semi-official reports agree in fixing the time of the opening of the next session of the reichstag at November 21. All of the best informed sources of political opinion credit the government with the intention of adhering closely to the decision arrived at some time ago not to again introduce an anti-revolution bill in any form, the chance of such a measure passing the reichstag being apparently no better, if as good, as they were upon the last occasion of the introduction of a bill of that character. Nevertheless there are evidences of an increase in the public sentiment in favor of repressive legislation of some kind.

Repressive Laws Called For.

The dispatch wired by the emperor a week ago to Prince Hohenlohe-Langenburg, governor of Alsace-Lorrain, in regard to the murder of the wealthy Alsatian mine owner, Heinrich Schwartz, at Mulhouse, by a socialist named Andreas Meyer, coupled with the recent developments of crime throughout the empire, has revived the question of repression in an acute form and the resultant clamor for exceptional legislation is coming from diverse quarters, the demands emanating from the conservative, the national liberal and even the centrist sections. Still, there is no reason to believe that the reichstag as at present constituted could be depended upon to pass a measure sufficiently repressive to meet the demands of the agitators and anything less sweeping would satisfy nobody nor could it reach the element sought to be suppressed.

The Murder of Schwartz.

Concerning the murder of Schwartz, the Vorwaerts, the leading socialist organ, denies that there is any conclusive proof that Meyer, the assassin of Schwartz, was either a socialist or an anarchist and protests against the disposition to hold the socialist party or its teachings responsible for the crime. The police at Mulhouse have arrested six men who were known to be associates of Meyer. All of them are socialist extremists and are charged with having had knowledge that it was the intention of Meyer to strike at some industrial chief with the object of making his taking-off an example to other industrial magnates who were unmindful of the rights of workingmen.

Other Magnates Worried.

Since the murder of Schwartz several other heads of great manufacturing industries in Mulhouse have received anonymous letters containing the warning: "One of you has been stiffened out; prepare to join him." The police have not as yet been able to trace the origin of these letters, but are confident of their ability to do so. In the meantime the socialist parliamentary party resents the general disposition to blame them for the commission of such excesses by their extremist comrades, but those who contend that the crimes were committed by the order of the socialist party are determined to make these acts of violence the occasion for a demand for urgency in the passage of repressive legislation as the first question to be considered by the reichstag after that body reassembles.

Von Boetticher Again Accused.

The revival of the scandals connecting Dr. Von Boetticher, the vice-president of the council of ministers, minister of state and imperial secretary of state for the interior, with financial irregularities in the matter of the Guelph fund and in borrowing large sums from bankers on the eve of important financial reforms with no intention of repaying except through such reforms, is absorbing general attention, despite the recent official declaration of the ministry exonerating him.

Will Maintain His Silence.

In the face of all this public discussion of the scandal Dr. Von Boetticher remains calm and has informed a representative of the United Press that he has no intention whatever of abandoning the attitude of reserve he has maintained throughout the controversy. The current reports of his intention to resign, he says, are absolutely inventions for which there is not even a suspicion of foundation.

Had Evidently Committed Suicide.

White River Junction, Vt., Oct. 21.—The mystery surrounding the sudden disappearance on July 26 last of Almeron C. Inman, night watchman in the train department of the Central Vermont Railroad company, has been solved, his dead body being discovered in the woods west of Billing's park, within a mile of his home. He had evidently committed suicide.

Stabbed with a Hatpin.

New York, Oct. 21.—Thomas McCoy, was probably fatally stabbed last night in the heart with a hatpin, by his wife, from whom he has been separated for some time, while dancing with a strange woman at a ball in Fernando's hall. The woman escaped and has not been located by the police.

Turkish Students Arrested.

Constantinople, Oct. 21.—Yesterday eighteen students at the Pancaldi military school were arrested on the charge of conspiring to restore the constitution of Nudhad. When questioned in prison the young men confessed, giving all the details of the plot.

Snow at Watertown.

Watertown, N. Y., Oct. 21.—Snow has been falling here since noon yesterday. Last night the ground was thickly covered concealing the grass and clothing the trees with winter garb. It is rapidly melting, however, with prospects of warmer weather.

Thirty Rebels Killed.

Madrid, Oct. 21.—A dispatch to the Imparcial from Havana says that General Oliver's column has defeated 600 insurgents at Los Remedios, killing thirty of them. The Spanish loss was three killed and ten wounded.

GRIGGS AND LABOR.

MR. M'DERMOTT SHOWS HOW THE G. O. P. CANDIDATE TREATED THE WORKINGMAN'S BILLS.

Kill All, His Motto—When Senator He Voted Against Labor Day, but It Became a Holiday Just the Same.

To the Editor of the New York World:

So far in his campaign Mr. Griggs has endeavored to impress the idea that he should be elected because one Barney Ford acted dishonestly in purchasing supplies for the statehouse. Can there be a greater insult to the citizens of New Jersey than the attitude of Mr. Griggs, who reads off a list of furniture purchased by Mr. Ford and asks for votes because excessive prices were paid for desks or chairs? The total amount of excess, as shown by the testimony, was less than the cost of the investigation, but if it had been ten times the amount what has this do with Chancellor McGill? Does Mr. Griggs claim that he is of superior honesty? Does he think the people of New Jersey would have a more honest government if the governorship were in the hands of Griggs, Hobart & Co. than they will have under Governor McGill?

Mr. Griggs is "running on his record," and if he has told a single truth about that record I have not observed a report of its utterance. For certain reasons I have taken considerable interest in the record of Mr. Griggs, and I propose to show to the readers of The World just what part he has played in the history of the state. He claims credit for the taxation of the railroads of this state. I will prove from the official records that the railroad tax shirkers never had a better friend. He says that he is willing that Jersey City should obtain a supply of decent water without being ruined by Mr. Hobart's water schemes. If Mr. Hobart has not had an understanding on this point with Mr. Griggs, then has Mr. Hobart lost his rapidity.

I will give Mr. Griggs' record on the water question. It will be interesting reading for the people of Jersey City. Before reviewing these questions, however, I beg space to print a few words of and concerning Mr. Griggs' record on questions of interest to the wageworkers of New Jersey.

Mr. Griggs served two years in the house of assembly and six years in the senate. During the entire time he was either an open or a covert enemy of every bill introduced in the interest of organized labor. He is now seeking the votes of the wage earners of the state. Many of them will be present at a meeting in Paterson where Mr. Griggs will speak in a few days. If he should devote the entire evening to the subject, he would not be able to cover, either by admission, denial or extenuation, the whole of his record, and I will therefore ask him to tell the good people of Paterson whether he yet has the idea that organized labor is a huge joke and to explain his record for the single year 1887. I select this year because it was the one in which the united efforts of labor organizations of the state accomplished the common object of obtaining legislative recognition of a day to be known as Labor day.

At the session of 1887 there was passed a bill entitled "An act to regulate the hours of labor of employees of surface and elevated railroad companies." It was approved by Governor Green on April 8, 1887, and provided that "12 hours' labor, to be performed within 12 consecutive hours, with reasonable time for meals, not less than half an hour for each, shall constitute a day's labor in the operation of all cable, traction and horse car street surface railroads owned or operated by corporations incorporated under the laws of this state for the employees of such corporations in operating such railroads."

Now, even so hardworking a man as Mr. Griggs will admit that 12 consecutive hours form a fair day's work. The bill passed the house and was referred to the committee on labor and industries. Mr. Griggs was chairman of this committee. The bill was amended, considered, reconsidered, laid over and fooled with until its advocates perceived that it was the intention of the corporation lobby to bury the measure. The demand for its passage was not acceded to until Monday, April 4, three days before final adjournment. It was considered immediately after the passage of senate bill No. 136, entitled "An act relating to the improvement of the water supply in cities and towns of this state."

In examining the legislative record of Mr. Griggs it will be found that he was always on hand and voting whenever a water bill was up for action. He voted for this water bill. The next bill taken up was the one to regulate the hours of labor of railroad employees.

Mr Griggs was in the senate chamber and his name was called, but he dodged his vote. His patron, Senator Hobart, was interested in many roads affected by the bill, and Senator Griggs declined to vote for the bill. It was passed without his vote (See journal of the senate, 1887, page 448.) In his speech at Paterson it will be well for Mr. Griggs to say whether he thinks 12 hours are now enough to constitute a fair day's work. If he has changed his mind, let him tell of his repentance. If not, let him tell why he refused to vote for the bill.

There are several thousand men employed on the surface railroads of New Jersey who will read that explanation with more or less interest.

The same year the house of assembly passed a bill to make wages a preferred debt in all cases of insolvency. Nothing fairer could be asked than the protection of workingmen from the sharks who take advantage of the insolvent laws. The bill was known as assembly bill No. 29.

When received in the senate, it was referred to the committee on labor and industries, of which Senator Griggs was chairman. He is yet considering it. Once in his hands, it was dead.

Will Senator Griggs tell the workingmen of Paterson why he refused to report that bill for action by the senate? Its provisions have since been enacted and have protected many a workingman in New Jersey.

On April 4, 1887, Senator Chattle of Monmouth introduced a bill entitled "An act to make Saturdays, after 12 o'clock noon, legal holidays." On Wednesday, April 6, Senator Griggs voted to kill the bill, and it was killed. As the senator could have his Saturday afternoons to himself, unless called upon to attend an important meeting of the directors of a water company, he could not comprehend why such legislation should be enacted. After Mr. Griggs had left the senate and the working people of Passaic had secured a better representative this bill became a law.

But his final fling at organized labor was the most remarkable one of the session. From Maine to California the trades unions and other labor societies had demanded that one day in the year should be set apart, to be known as Labor day, and in response to this demand the house of assembly passed bill No. 88, providing that the first Monday of September in each year should be a legal holiday, to be known as Labor day. The vote in the house was unanimous for the bill.

When it reached the senate, the classical features of the senator from Passaic were wreathed in scorn. The bill was a step toward anarchy. It would be just as sensible to set aside a day to be known as lawyers' day. On other bills he might be willing to hedge or skip his vote, but the Labor day bill was too much. From the day it reached the senate until it was sent to the governor for the approval which he accorded it, the bill for a Labor day received the untiring, unqualified opposition of John W. Griggs, senator from Passaic. He had nothing but contempt for the bill, nothing but scorn for its advocates. And yet every political economist who has written within the past five years has credited the setting apart of one day in the year as a tribute to the dignity of labor with being the work of true statesmanship. The creation of the day was not the work of demagogues. It was the work of the best citizens of these United States. Other states had taken the step, and New Jersey was asked to fall in line.

Mr. Griggs, who now loves the wage earners, loves them, in the words of the late Mr. Poe, with "a love that is more than a love," never worked harder in the senate chamber than he did to kill that bill. Happily he was not successful. But his anger at defeat made him less cautious than was his wont, and he went on record. The bill was put on its final reading on April 5, 1887, and was passed by the following vote:

Yeas—Chase, Chattle, Cranmer, Edwards, Fish, Gardner, Herring, Livingston, McBride, Noon, Rue, Werts—12.

Nays—Griggs, Large.

I haven't kept track of Large. The Mr. Griggs who voted against the bill is now the Republican candidate for governor of New Jersey.

This is record enough for one year. I give it as a sample illustrative of the deep sympathy which fills Mr. Griggs when he is considering the problems of legislation affecting the condition of those who receive their pay in small envelopes. Respectfully,

ALLAN L. MCDERMOTT.

GRIGGS' POPULARITY WHERE HE IS BEST KNOWN.

In all the calculations of Republican prophets immense figures are given to show what Passaic will do for her "favorite son." As a matter of fact, Mr. Griggs is not popular in Passaic county. The wageworkers of the county distrust him. They know that he is and always has been merely the legal tool of a lot of rich clients who have invested their money in those artificial persons known as corporations. In 1875 and 1876 he was elected to the house of assembly, and his constituents were so dissatisfied with him that they defeated him when he ran for a third term in 1877. In 1879 Garret A. Hobart was the Republican nominee for senator in Passaic, and he was elected by a plurality of 1,900. In 1882 Mr. Griggs was elected senator by a plurality of 182. In 1885 he was elected senator by a plurality of 857. After the wage earners of Passaic county have examined Senator Griggs' record, after they have considered the fine scorn with which he treated the bill to make Labor day a legal holiday and every other measure advocated by the labor organizations of the state, the majority in Passaic county will be found where it properly belongs, and that is against Mr. Griggs.

REPUBLICAN REASONS.

The Republican orators and press are furnishing the best of reasons why the people should support Chancellor McGill. They admit that he is honest, upright and true to the constitution. They admit that they have searched his record and found no flaw. What reason, then, is there that any Democrat should leave his party and support Mr. Griggs, who has devoted himself for 20 years to abusing the Democratic party, its leaders and its principles? What reason is there that any Democrat should desert the standard of a spotless candidate and support a man whose vinegary tongue has been heard in every county of the state denouncing Tilden, Hancock and Cleveland? New Jersey never had a better candidate for the office of governor than is furnished in the person of Chancellor McGill, and it would be the basest treachery for any one who believes in his political principles to desert him on election day.

RECALL THEM.

Democrats of New Jersey, recall the speeches John W. Griggs made against George B. McClellan, recall the slanders he uttered against Grover Cleveland, recall the fact that your party has never had a more violent slanderer of its men and platforms than this same John W. Griggs, who is now asking for Democratic votes. Was he right when he slandered McClellan? Was he right when he spoke against Tilden and Cleveland? Is he right when he slanders Chancellor McGill by saying that he is responsible for the acts of men who left the Democratic party when they did wrong?

ITS NATIONAL ASPECT.

During the past three years the people of the United States have been called upon to pay the price which ever follows a violation of the laws of political economy. The election of 1892 contained the protest of the common sense of the people against Sherman silver laws and McKinley tariff bills. Had the people shown as much wisdom in 1888 as they did in 1892 the hardships that have been endured during the past three years would have been avoided. When Benjamin Harrison was inaugurated in 1889, the federal treasury was full to overflowing. Under four years of a Democratic administration the land had been prosperous. In three years under President Harrison the treasury was emptied and the seeds sown for a period of cruel industrial depression. The "panic" was upon us in 1893. It has been sought to charge the hard times of the past three years to the Democratic party, and this charge is easily impressed upon the minds of those who do not understand governmental affairs or look only at conditions without examining for the cause. The panic could not have been caused by Democratic legislation, for it commenced when the government was in the hands of a Republican president and senate. The McKinley bill was the finishing touch, the straw that broke the camel's back. Its authors predicted that it would bring industry to the people and prosperity to the nation. It brought the reverse of these. It depressed both labor and capital. The seeds of the panic were germinated by the McKinley bill. They fell in ground too well prepared by a system of vicious financial legislation. It is impossible to choke the commerce of a country and destroy its financial standing among the nations of the earth without bringing distress and want to the homes of millions.

The result of Republican legislation continued during the first two years of President Cleveland's administration. The laws which produced the disaster could not be at once repealed. When the Democrats obtained control of the senate, it was by such a small majority as to render all remedial legislation a work of the greatest difficulty. Every obstruction known to parliamentary law was placed in the road of legislative reform. The battle was a long one, and while it was in progress the evils under which the people were suffering continued. But the battle was won. While it was in progress the people were taught by demagogues on the stump and in the press that the Democratic party was properly chargeable with the distress of the hour. This was but history repeating itself. Whenever General Washington lost a skirmish, his enemies called for his resignation. No more bitter words are recorded than those uttered in Philadelphia against Washington whenever his progress was delayed by the enemy. So during the battles for tariff reform and sound finances every setback was charged to the Democratic party. The people are very apt to charge the party in power with all existing evils, and those who sought in vain for employment during the years 1893 and 1894 followed but natural impulse when they charged their sufferings to the existing administration. They charged their ills not to the cause, but to the doctor who was engaged in purifying the system. The fight against the McKinley bill, opposed, step by step, by the men who had been legislated into millionaires, was stubborn and bitter, and the uncertainty which attended the debates upon every item in the schedules irritated every branch of business. But who was to blame for this? Was it the party that enacted the McKinley bill or the party that fought for relief? Who was to blame for the suffering caused by the long struggle to repeal the "Sherman silver bill?" Was it the party that enacted the bill or the party that repealed it?

The Republicans claim that the election of a Republican house of representatives in 1894 was an indorsement of McKinleyism. It was nothing of the sort. It was the protest of the people against the depression under which they were suffering, and they mistakenly credited that depression to the party that was seeking to repeal the laws that caused it. Now that those laws have been repealed; now that the national government has retired from the business of buying silver by the bartload for storage in the treasury vaults; now that the chains have been taken from the limbs of labor; now that the government has dissolved partnership with the Carnegies, every hour brings glad tidings of the revival of prosperity. Wages are advancing, while the prices of the necessities of life are decreasing. These United States have entered upon a prosperity that will prove increasing and enduring. Do the people of New Jersey desire that this prosperity shall be interrupted? Do they wish to return to the vicious system of legislating for the few at the cost of the many? Mr. Griggs, in his speeches, carefully avoids all allusion to the national question. He leaves McKinleyism severely alone. But this silence is only a trick. If Mr. Griggs is elected governor of New Jersey, it will be heralded from Maine to California that New Jersey has again repudiated the national policy of the Democratic party, and comfort and joy will be gathered to aid next year in the election of a Republican president. The cry that this is only a state election is false. It is an election of national importance. The Republican leaders recognize this fact, and Mr. Griggs is receiving the assistance of the national Republican committee. If the Democratic candidate for governor was an objectionable man, if his record was not as bright and spotless as light; if it was an issue joined upon questions of his fitness for the office, then it might be said that the battle was fought upon local issues. But this is not so. No speaker, no paper, has had the temerity to say that Chancellor McGill is not a perfect candidate. No Republican will say that Alexander T. McGill will not make an upright governor, true to the constitution, true to the people and true to the high standards by which his life has been guided. With such a man the nomination the campaign in New Jersey becomes of national import. It is a fight between the Republican and the Democratic parties. If Mr. McGill is defeated the Democratic party of the nation will be placed at a great disadvantage in the presidential campaign of 1896. No man who believes in the principles of the Democratic party will vote to bring this about.

MUSHROOMS.

They Do Not Come Up All at Once, Nor Do They Grow Forever.

Mushrooms do not come up all at once, nor do they grow forever. If the spawn is good and planted early in September, from four to five, and sometimes six, weeks will expire before the first crop of mushrooms makes its appearance.

The first crop will flow for two or three weeks; then the mushrooms will thin out, and a slight dressing of fresh loam, about half an inch in depth, should be spread over the bed. When this coating has been beaten down with a spade, the soil should be gently moistened with tepid water, and in a day or two a second crop of mushrooms—often better than the first—can be gathered. The second crop of mushrooms may last for three or four weeks, and about the latter part of December the spawn will be found to have exhausted itself, and fresh manure, fresh spawn and fresh loam must be procured for the formation of new beds if another crop of mushrooms is desired.

To grow mushrooms successfully great care must be taken to obtain fresh spawn, which can be bought in all the horticultural stores. But if the cultivator wishes to make his own spawn, he can do so by following these directions: Take equal portions of horse droppings, cow dung and fresh loam and mix the whole thoroughly together, as you would make mortar. Then form the matter into cakes about the size of a large brick. Place these bricks on edge under cover until they become half dry, then insert into each brick a piece of spawn half an inch or so square, and let the bricks remain until they are quite dry. Then spread about eight inches of horse dung over the floor of the shed, on which build the bricks in a pile, keeping the side in which the spawn has been put uppermost Then cover the pile of bricks over with sufficient stable manure so as to give a gentle heat, not exceeding 100 degrees, through the whole. In two or three weeks the spawn will have spread itself through the whole mass of each brick and will be ready to plant at any time during the winter.—New York Times.

CAITHNESS SUPERSTITIONS.

Some of the Curious Methods Adopted In Sickness and Death.

A method much in vogue at one time of ascertaining whether a sickness would prove fatal was to dig two holes in the ground, one called the quick grave, the other the dead hole. The sufferer was then placed between the two, and the hole toward which he turned indicated what would be the outcome of his malady. Sometimes a piece of rock was broken over the head of a person whose last agonies were painful alike to himself and to those who witnessed them. It was believed that the heart of the sick man would thus be broken and his release hastened. Windows and doors are always thrown wide open in order that the departing spirit may have free egress from the house and escape from the evil ones that hover around eager to inthrall his soul.

During the interval between death and burial hens and cats were kept carefully shut up. A person meeting these animals at such a juncture was doomed to blindness in the future. Moreover, unless a stream divided the two houses, farmers frequently refrained from yoking their oxen or horses before the body was "laid under the turf of truth." Many women preserved with the greatest reverence their bridal attire to cover them in the coffin. Bread and water were placed in the chamber of death, for during the night prior to the burial the spirit of the departed one came to partake of them. Stillborn children and little ones who had not been blessed by the minister were buried before sunrise. In this way their admission to the land of promise was assured. Not to observe the practice was to destine the souls of these bairns to wander homeless and disconsolate.

The fate of the suicide is lamentable. His body cannot rest in the kirkyard, for it would taint the souls of those who lie therein; frequently he was buried in a lone dike which separated two lairds' estates, and passersby were expected to cast a pebble at the rude stone which marked the place.—Scottish Review.

A New York Scene.

That he who runs may read is especially true of those who travel on the trains of the elevated roads. The other day, just before the Bleecker street station was reached, a glance in at a window of a tenement near there showed a scene that has haunted its witness since. In what was probably the one room of a family, for bed, stove and washtubs occupied almost all of the space, sat a woman with a baby, perhaps a year old, in her lap. And such a baby! Thin, weazen, old before its time and evidently dying, for each panting breath was a struggle. Over mother and child bent a middle aged man, undoubtedly the doctor, with his finger at the baby's wrist. One glance told the story. The fast graying face of the child, the agonized look of the mother, the doctor's pitying expression, all were photographed in a second of time from the window of that elevated car, with a distinctness that will not soon fade.—New York Times.

Theatrical Contracts.

A carelessly worded theatrical contract often means a heavy loss. For instance, Florence St. John was engaged by H. J. Leslie for the opera "Dorothy." Unfortunately, she was taken ill and was actually never able to play in the piece at all. Nevertheless the manager was compelled by the wording of the contract to pay her £60 a week for nearly 12 months. So rigidly is the letter of the agreement adhered to that an actor engaged for the Globe will refuse to play at the Gaiety, and an actress whose contract is worded "comic opera" will decline her part if the piece should afterward be entitled a burlesque. Their salaries, however, have to be paid while they are doing nothing, just as if they were earning them.—London Letter.

A JUROR'S DIARY.

Things Kept Getting Worse Every Day of the Trial.

The following record of a juryman's experience was made by a carpenter of more than average intelligence:

The first day he was impressed with the magnitude of the case and the sadness of the prisoner. He did not sleep the first night, for the reason that four men occupied one room. The air was bad, and two men snored loudly. The second day he tried to remember all that the witnesses said and its bearing on the case, and at night was very weary and went to bed early, but was wakened and disturbed by the other jurors. The third day his head ached, and he could with difficulty follow the testimony. His appetite was poor, and he was drowsy. The fourth day he was astonished to hear the opposing evidence. Statements which had been made by apparently honest men were affirmed to be false. He was shocked, and his first impressions and personal interest were disturbed. His head ached, and he felt weak and nervous. His appetite and sleep were broken.

The fifth day he gave up all efforts to follow the testimony or to understand what was said. He felt stupid and exceedingly tired. The other jurors began to complain of the food and the sleeping rooms and had several quarrels with each other on religious and political matters. Foolish stories were told, and card playing and personal boasting filled up the evenings. They all manifested disgust at the trial and longed for the end and declared they would never be caught in a similar case.

On the sixth day the case was closed The arguments of the attorneys and the judge's charge seemed very dull and wearisome. He felt sick, looked forward to a release, and his interest in the case had died out. He could not understand why so much was said that was contradictory, and why the judge should not tell them the real facts of the case. In the jury room no discussion took place; each one voted "guilty" or "not guilty," and when they found the majority was "guilty" most of them followed the majority. Two of the minority became angry and refused to vote for over a day except in favor of the prisoner. They gave no reasons for their belief, only saying that they were right and the rest of the jury was wrong. Finally one of these men was accused of having some personal object in voting for the prisoner, and after a short altercation he changed, and the other men followed him, and the verdict "guilty" was agreed upon.—Popular Science Monthly.

POINTS FOR GOLF PLAYERS.

THE ESSENTIAL QUALIFICATIONS TO MAKE A GOOD PLAYER.

How the Grounds Are Laid Out and Some of the Technical Terms Used. Great Variety of Clubs—Caddie's Place.

Since the completion of a golf course in Plainfield the question is often heard, "what is golf and how is it played," and while there are many who are familiar with the game, there are as many more who would be glad of a little enlightement on the subject, so that a short description of the manner of playing golf may not come amiss to readers of the Press.

The game of golf is played by two or more sides, each playing its own ball. A side may consist of one or more persons. The game consists in each side playing a ball from a tee into a hole by successive strokes and the hole is won by the side holing its ball in the fewest strokes. The side winning the greatest number of holes in the course wins the match. If two sides hole out in the same number of strokes the hole is "halved," that is it is of advantage to neither side. The teeing ground, or spot from which the ball is driven is usually elevated a few inches above the rest of the course to give every advantage for the first drive toward the hole, distant from one hundred to three hundred yards. This hole is but four and one-half inches in diameter and four inches deep and is placed directly in the centre of a perfectly level and smooth piece of turf about thirty feet square, known as the putting green. The location of the hole is made plain by a small red disc which is temporarily removed while playing into it, and the general direction of the whole course is indicated by larger flags set at intervals throughout its length. The ball is made of solid, hard guttapercha, painted white so that it may be easily seen and followed, and is about one and one-half inches in diameter.

The clubs are many in number and varied in shape according to the nature of the strike to be made or the character of the ground on which the ball is lying, for after the first drive the ball must be played from the spot where it lands, no matter how rough, save in a few exceptional cases where the player is allowed to move his ball backwards at a cost to his side of one or more strokes. The more important clubs are named as follows: The driver, brassie, lofter, cleek, mashie, niblick, and putter. Of these the driver, lofter and putter are essential to the beginner and he may soon add a cleek to this number, but the others he can very well get along without until he has become proficient in the use of the four mentioned.

The driver, as its name indicates, is used for the first drive from the tee where the ball is placed on a small mound of sand an inch or so high so that a perfectly free stroke is insured.

In shape the end of the club is not unlike the right fist closed with the thumb outside and the back of the hand facing upwards, the striking face of the club corresponding to the flat portion of the fist made by the thumb and forefinger. It is made of hard wood and a very powerful blow can be struck with it. The lofter has a metallic end set on at such an angle that a blow can be given which will raise the ball by striking under it, and is a very useful club in rough ground and even for a variety of strokes on hard smooth parts of the course.

The putter has a metallic end set on in the plane with the handle and is used on the putting green for the short accurate strokes that are necessary to hole the ball. The cleek is similar to the lofter, but is put on the handle at a smaller angle and is used for long drives on hard, smooth ground. The other clubs are for the most part minor modifications of those already described and are used by good players for special strokes.

A method of play much in vogue in practice games is for each player to go around the course making all the holes in as few strokes as possible, the player going around the course in the least number of strokes winning.

The caddie, or boy who carries the player's clubs, is the only individual allowed to give advice or warning to his principal during a match, but if your caddie is a good one, knowing the game no less than he does the course, he will prove a veritable guide, philosopher and friend, handing you the right club without giving you the trouble of asking for it and doing a dozen little things that add to your enjoyment of the game, and which you never appreciate until you are one day saddled with a green caddie and see him thoughtfully take up a ball that you have driven to a good position on the green, and ask "What are them things made of?"

Golf etiquette is very strict and well defined, and the tyro in his enthusiasm frequently finds himself breaking some time-honored rule of which he is made aware by the frowns of his fellow-players. Here are three rules taken at random from a code of etiquette adopted by one of the leading golf clubs of America:

1. The player who leads from the tee should be allowed to play before his opponent tees his ball.

2. Players who have holed out should not try their puts over again when other players are following them.

3. Turf cut or displaced by a stroke in playing should be immediately replaced.

Although much scoffed at by some when first introduced into this country, golf has an amazing faculty for making an enthusiast out of a scoffer after he has once held a club in his hand, and even the Long Island farmer, who asked an elderly golfer if "he didn't think he was pretty big for that kind of thing?" might have became a convert if he had made one successful drive.

The finishing touches are being placed on the course of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club and it is expected that the grounds will be complete in every way by Saturday and the fixtures all in place which will add greatly to the appearance of the course. Should nothing unforseen happen to delay the proceedings, the formal opening will take place on Saturday, November 2d, and additional interest will be added to the event by the presence of some expert players from the older golf clubs around New York.

WORK OF THE GRAND JURY.

A THREE-WEEKS SESSION AND FIFTY-FIVE INDICTMENTS.

Justices of the Peace Censured for Unnecessarily Burdening the Courts With Trivial Cases—No Liquor Men Indicted.

The Union County Grand Jury, after a three-weeks session, came into court at noon yesterday with fifty-five bills of indictment, which they presented to Judge VanSyckel. There were also three presentments which were not made public. The jury reported failure to find any true bills against Michael Kildea and Henry Sampson, two waiters who were accused of starting a riot at the Beechwood Hotel, Summit, and resisting an officer.

No indictment was found against Larry Sheridan, of Summit, charged with forgery, or Michael McDonald, of the same place, who was charged with assault and battery at Roselle.

Henry Pendleton, of Westfield, and Mary Sullivan, both charged with assault, also escaped indictment. All these were held prisoners in the county jail and Judge Van Syckel ordered their release.

The arraignment of persons against whom indictments have been found will begin on Wednesday.

The Grand Jury also brought in a general presentment against the various Justices of the Peace in the county for the manner in which they unnecessarily burden the courts with trivial complaints that should never be sent to the Grand Inquest to consider. Another presentment was in reference to the complaints lodged by the Christian Citizenship Union, of Elizabeth, against several prominent local saloon-keepers who were charged with Sunday selling. The Grand Jury pointed out that it required proof of three consecutive sales, or violations of the law, to convict the accused dealer, and that where there was a city ordinance governing the the sale of liquor on Sunday, as in Rahway and Elizabeth, the Common Pleas Court had no jurisdiction in the matter.

A third presentment called the attention of the Union Township Board of Health to the existence of a nuisance in that township which steps are now being taken to abate.

BRUNN'S PLANS THWARTED.

TRIED TO TAKE HIS THREE GIRLS TO NEW YORK THIS MORNING.

Backed Up By the Good People of Washington Park, He Claims His Wife Does Not Look After Them Properly

People about the Fanwood station were quite excited this morning over the supposed abduction of three young girls. It was not exactly an abduction, however, as it was done by legal advice, and as the man was the father of the children.

Peter P. Brunn, a German, has lived in the borough on Harrison street for some time, and for the last three years has had constant trouble with his wife. These differences have been a source of anxiety to a number of the good people of the borough, as the mother is, it is alleged, a drinking woman, and is bringing up her children in an evil way. Several times the citizens of Washington Park have patched up the differences of the quarreling couple and persuaded them to live together once more. But new quarrels have arisen and they are now separated. The father's great trouble was about the children, three girls, aged seven, eight and thirteen years, on whom this life had any but a good effect, and he was advised to get them away, if possible, from the evil influence of their mother, to some place where they would be properly trated.

Through the efforts of Edmund Embury, of North Plainfield, a place was found for the children at "The Sheltering Arms," a home for children on West One Hundred and Twenty-ninth street, New York. Lawyer Charles A. Reed was consulted in the matter and stated that Brunn, being the father, was the natural guardian and was thus entitled to their custody and had a right to provide for their care and education in any proper and reputable school or home. He also said that Brunn had the right to take the children to such a place, provided he could induce them to go without using violent means or causing any breach of the peace.

This morning the father determined that the time had come, and in company with Mr. Embury he got the girls to get into a carriage with him and then drove to Fanwood station, where he attempted to put them on the train to take them to New York. The two younger children were willing to go, but the oldest girl objected and began to cry and scream. The attention of those around the station was immediately attracted, and they wanted to know what was the matter. Mr. Embury explained, but a man who claimed to be a lawyer stepped up and declared that Brunn had no right to take them. Just then the train pulled in and everyone grew excited.

The young girls had joined their older sister in her cries and none of them seemed to know what they wanted. Brunn tried to put them on the train but the man who had objected before, now persuaded the conductor to refuse to take them, and Brunn and his weeping children saw the train disappear around the curve. Then the oldest girl started to walk home and her sisters joined her, while the despairing father brought up the rear of the party alone, Mr. Embury having taken the train for home.

As these means of placing the children in a proper home have failed, legal proceedings will be instituted and the father given the authority to put them in a suitable place.

Mrs. Brunn claims that her husband is a drunkard and is in league with a dime museum man to get the girls to New York where one of them, who has a remarkable growth of hair, can be exhibited.

A BACHELOR'S DINNER.

A Prospective Groom Entertains His Friends at Dinner.

Max Wiertz fairly outdid himself in preparing for the bachelor dinner which Edward M. VanBurren gave to a few of his friends last evening in the caterer's parlors. The time passed very pleasantly while the prospective bride and groom were toasted and all wished them a long and happy life. The party, besides the host, consisted of Louis B. There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chambertain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family has need of it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once and you will never regret it. For sale by Reynold's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

MOST PEOPLE GO TO CHURCH

VALUABLE CHURCH STATISTICS GATHERED BY THE MINISTERS.

An Interesting Table Showing the Number of Families Attending Church and Whether They Prefer One Denomination

During the summer a church canvass was made of Plainfield and North Plainfield, under the direction of the Ministers' Association, from which the following figures have been compiled, which may be of interest to the general public. The figures given are for families, and not individuals, except in cases where there is but one member of a family in the city. The first column shows the number of families who attend one of the churches of the denomination named. The second column shows the number of families who have a preference for the church named, although they do not call themselves regular attendants at the church:

	Attend	Preference
Baptist	634	45
Seventh Day Baptist	76	1
Congregational	93	11
Episcopal	361	41
Methodist Episcopal	422	34
Presbyterian	826	74
Trinity Reformed	278	17
Other Protestant Churches	256	30
Salvation Army	21	2
Total families attending Protestant Churches	2,967	255
Roman Catholic Churches	473	8
Total families attending Christian Churches	3,440	263

Against these 3,440 families who attend Christian churches there are 523 families who do not attend:

Families expressing a preference merely	263
Hebrew Families	24
Families expressing no preference and without church affiliation	236
	523

These figures are as nearly correct as an ordinary census can make them. Possibly the Roman Catholic churches are not credited with their full number of attendants.

APPLEJACK TO BLAME.

Cobbler Stillger Took Too Frequent Libations of the Seductive Stuff.

The report in yesterday's Press, charging George Stillger with the theft of Farmer Clark's corn, demands an immediate explanation in justice to his much-respected and humiliated family. Mr. Stillger was under the influence of Lambert's applejack at the time of the so-called theft, a gallon of which one of the family had purchased recently for the purpose of making mince pies. The old gentleman, having taken too frequent libations of it, and not knowing its baneful effects, was totally unaccountable for his actions that evening. Mr. Clark has been bountifully repaid for the loss of corn.

SURPRISED MISS RAYBERT.

A novel feature of the event was that each guest presented Miss Raybert with a dainty handkerchief as a gift.

During the evening the orchestra rendered a programme of music that was pleasing, after which refreshments were served.

Mr. Raybert amused the guests with impersonations of a young man in the olden time.

A Rumored Failure.

It is rumored that a prominent North Avenue merchant has left town on account of financial difficulties. Outside parties have been looking for him in vain.

"I would rather trust that medicine than any doctor I know of," says Mrs. Hattie Mason, of Chilton, Carter Co., Mo., in speaking of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

THE BIG FIGHT IS OFF

Julian Would Not Postpone to November 11.

Corbett Is Disappointed, But Says He Has Been Expecting Such an Ending—Vendig Names Maher To Meet the Champion—Numerous Propositions Made.

Hot Springs, Ark., Oct. 22.—Like Mahommet's coffin the proposed championship meeting between Corbett and Fitzsimmons is suspended between earth and the skies. So far as the Florida Athletic club is concerned the contest has been declared off, on the grounds of Fitzsimmons' refusal to consent to a postponement for two weeks and a position to substitute Peter Maher for the Australian to meet Corbett in the ring on Nov. 11, or such date as may eventually be agreed upon. There is just a probability, however, that Fitzsimmons, who was fully advised last evening by wire of the situation may finally consent too meet the views of the Floridans, and which were concurred in by representatives of Corbett.

Further Complications.

The local situation was further complicated last evening by a telephone message from Little Rock that Gov. Clarke had issued a call for a special session of the legislature to assemble on Friday to enact a law prohibiting such carnivals in the state. These reports, however, were subsequently denied, but they served the purpose of increasing the tension to which the representatives of the conflicting interests are just now subjected.

Insisted on Original Terms.

It was a little after 1 o'clock when the conference in the private office of the Arlington hotel between president Dan A. Stuart, Joseph S. Vendig and Louis C. Siler, of the Florida Athletic club, W. A. Brady, representing Corbett, and Julian, manager for Fitzsimmons, was called off by the Florida Athletic club because of Julian's deciding that the men must fight to a finish Oct. 31 for a purse of $41,000 or not at all. Owing to concurrent circumstances the club could not agree to this and now announces that preparations are in progress to match Corbett against Peter Maher with Choynski to be substituted in Maher's place to try conclusions with O'Donnell.

Julian Would Not Yield.

At the conference, after an hour had been consumed in desultory conversation, some one asked the question if the postponement of the fight for ten days or two weeks would be agreeable to both sides. Brady promptly objected as did Julian. Then ensued more discussion and finally Brady conceded to the proposition but Julian never swerved. So positive was Julian in his manner that he announced that Fitzsimmons would be ready to meet Corbett in the ring October 31 whether before six men on a side in private or before forty thousand for a side stake rather than for the purse of $41,000 on November 11. Brady here interposed an objection to any such proceeding or proposition. He said, "Get Fitz and we'll be ready to talk business."

Vendig Explains the Situation.

Vendig said that under the legal aspect and pledge of the club to the attorneys it was practically an impossibility to get things in readiness by that time and the crowd here to reimburse the club for money already invested and the purse of $41,000. He thought that under the circumstances it was no use to go further with the matter and as the sum of $34,000 was to have been deposited to-day it would not be safe to run any chances of being able to pull it off by the 31st. He suggested then that some one else be put against Corbett, but again Brady objected.

Proposition Declined.

Brady then declined to accept an offer made by Julian for a $10,000 a side fight on October 31 at any place which might be selected, no admission fee to be charged. Just here President Stuart had a short conference with Vendig and then made this proposition to Julian: "If we can throw things together to get started by October 31, if the club hangs up a purse of $10,000 apart from the side bet—" "We shall not agree to it," answered Julian. "If the club hangs up a purse at all and wants Fitzsimmons to fight it must be for $41,000 and take place October 31." Stuart and Vendig declared this out of the question and Brady concurred.

Brady's Final Proposition.

Brady proposed that he had a man he would put against Fitzsimmons and bet $5,000 on the result. Julian replied that no propositions would go until after October 31, when they might be able to do business together. Stuart asked Julian if he would agree to a postponement, the men to meet anywhere else. Julian said he was ready to make no new contract until after October 31. Brady then made this announcement as his final proposition: "Corbett will fight any man in the world, Fitzsimmons preferred, for $5,000 a side on November 11."

Formally Declared Off.

Vendig became disgusted. He declared he would match Maher and Corbett and if Maher did not have the $5,000 he would put it up for him. The fight between Corbett and Fitzsimmons was then formally declared off and Vendig said he would find a man to match with O'Donnell.

Corbett To Meet Maher.

Just as soon as the conferees had separated there was a meeting between the Florida men and Brady at which it was decided that Corbett being willing Peter Maher should be put against him in the place of Fitzsimmons. It was argued that although Maher has once been defeated by the Australian, yet he was in fact more in Corbett's class than the latter, and that the meeting would draw a big crowd. Later he said to a reporter: "Corbett is naturally disappointed. However, he is right when he says he has been calculating for two months upon just such a fix, and it is not surprising to him. He is willing to meet Maher or any other man that may be put against him whenever and wherever the representatives of the Florida club and myself may agree."

IN PALACES ON WHEELS.

Journey of the President and Cabinet to Atlanta.

Washington, Oct. 22.—The train bearing President Cleveland and cabinet which left here last night is due in Atlanta late this afternoon. The train is one of the handsomest ever made up in this country—all palaces on wheels. It was made up under the direct supervision of W. H. Baldwin, second vice-president of the railroad company. First is a complete baggage and smoking car, then the compartment car Columbus, which has just come out of the shops at Wilmington, having been refitted for this trip. The car is probably the most magnificent example of car construction in existence and was built at a cost of $135,000. It contains twelve compartments, each fitted up with all the toilet accessories essential to comfort and convenience—complete in itself. The last car is Mr. Pullman's private coach, the Wildwood. It has a large saloon in the centre and an observation space in the rear. At Greensboro, N. C., a vestibule dining car will be attached to the train and run through to Atlanta, in which breakfast and lunch will be served en route.

MILES T. GRANGER DEAD.

Passes Away Unexpectedly at His Home at North Canaan, Conn.

Falls Village, Conn., Oct. 22.—Ex-congressman Miles T. Granger died at his home in North Canaan yesterday afternoon. His death was unexpected although he was taken seriously ill Sunday night. Judge Granger was born in North Marlborough, Mass., in 1817. He was educated at Wesleyan university, Middletown, and took up the law as a profession. He early became identified with the democratic party of Connecticut. In 1857 he was chosen to represent North Canaan in the lower branch of the general assembly. Nine years later he became senator from the old Fifteenth senatorial district and was in the state senate during '66 and '67. In 1867 he was appointed to the supreme court and occupied a seat on that bench until his age, 70, compelled him to retire. He re-entered public life in 1887, having been elected to represent the Fourth congressional district in congress.

We, citizens of New Hill and vicinity, acting upon our knowledge of and information as to your religious principles, regard you as a nuisance to the community, therefore we ask you to retire from our community as quietly as you came, and that at once." It is signed by twenty-seven respectable people of that section, among them M. D. Bynum, pastor of the Christian church, and Rev. B. J. Jennett. Governor Carr has turned the letter over to the judges of the superior court now sitting here.

Points Insisted Upon by Lord Salisbury—Will Not Permit Encroachment of Certain Territory—Willing To Submit Other Matters in Dispute to Arbitration.

London, Oct. 22.—In view of the many reports in circulation regarding the attitude of Great Britain towards Venezuela, the following official announcement has been made: "In consequence of Venezuela not offering an apology or reparation for the Muruan incident, the Marquis of Salisbury has taken steps to inform her as to what reparation Great Britain requires. But, as relations between the two countries have been broken off for some years, the communication was not sent through the direct diplomatic channel. As the document has not reached its destination, it is not considered desirable to give details of its contents; but it is couched in forcible terms, and points out that Great Britain will not permit Venezuela to overstep the boundaries marked by the courses of the rivers Cuyuni and Amacura; but is willing that the question of the other disputed territory should be submitted to arbitration."

Not an Ultimatum.

A high official of the British foreign office told a press representative that Great Britain had not sent an "ultimatum" to Venezula; but a dipatch on the subject of the misunderstanding had been forwarded to President Crespo. "This," he said, "is a very different thing, as all persons acquainted with the principles of diplomacy will recognize. Lord Salisbury thinks that sufficient time has elapsed for reparation to have been made and with this view he prepared the dispatch referred to."

The Most Serious Aspect.

The Daily News to-day says: "It is little to the credit of diplomacy that the Venezuelan question has been so long unsettled. The most serious aspect of the question is not so much in Venezuela as in the United States. There are many signs that public opinion in the latter country may be greatly disturbed by the British demand for reparation, complicated by the boundary claim. The dispute will need to be managed with the greatest tact and good temper by both sides, both by the respective governments and the press." The paper refers to Trinidad, and continues: "In each case we have to consider public sentiment in the United States and set an example of moderation and self-control, without which it will be difficult to bring these irritating disputes to a happy issue."

Impoverished * Blood

whether due to the inheritance of some scrofulous disorder, or caused by a depleted condition of the system, is the cause of much agony. A terrible complexion, foul eruptions, and loathesome ulcers are but outward symptoms—the sufferer should remember that all of the great organs of the body are likewise diseased, and the day cannot be long distant when death must surely ensue.

Bovinine

when taken for this trouble, is a means of salvation. It creates new flesh tissue and pure red blood corpuscles, and by giving strength to the great vital centres of the body, it enables them to perform their functions naturally, and thus dispel the existing poisons by the natural channels. It is not a medicine, but a powerful food preparation and invigorant, and is endorsed by over 25,000 physicians.

SCANDAL IN HIGH LIFE

The Colt-Van Alen Trouble Reaches the Courts.

Mrs. Samuel P. Colt Brings Action for Divorce and Col. Colt Sues James Van Alen for $200,000 for Alienating the Affections of Mrs. Colt—Sensations Promised.

Providence, R. I., Oct. 22.—The Colt Van Alen scandal has reached the courts. Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Elizabeth M. Colt, wife of Col. Samuel P. Colt, filed a petition asking for a legal separation from her husband, the care of their two minor children and a suitable annuity. The co-respondent is not named. Late yesterday afternoon Col. Colt caused a writ of arrest to be issued against James Van Alen, the well-known Newport society man, who it will be remembered declined the ambassadorship to Italy offered him by President Cleveland. He charged Mr. Van Alen with alienating his wife's affections and places the damages at $200,000. A deputy sheriff started for Newport to serve the warrant. Mr. Van Alen's bond will be placed at $400,000.

Beginning of the Scandal.

Mrs. Colt absolutely refues to talk of the case, but her lawyers gave out the following statement. "A number of prominent society people started for Jackson Falls, N. H., early in August. Col. Colt was one of the party, and so was a distant relative of his, a society woman of New York, whose name is withheld. All the party, with the exception of Col. Colt, stopped at Gray's inn. He went to another hotel, and it is said his attentions to this young lady became so marked that three of the party became disgusted and returned home to Providence. Mrs. Colt consulted lawyers who made an investigation which resulted in the suit brought by Mrs. Colt."

High Officials Threatened.

Colonel Colt's attorneys say it is folly for Mrs. Colt to attempt to prove that the trouble commenced in August, as they say that Mr. Van Alen had been denied admittance to the Colt house long before that at Mrs. Colt's request. Society has talked considerably about Mrs. Colt and Mr. Van Alen, and it is said letters have been found which will place Mr. Van Alen in a serious light. Francis M. Colwell, city solicitor of Providence, says he has never seen a more complete case than Colonel Colt's and if Mrs. Colt brings her case into court there will be some remarkable developments that will involve not only state officials but one person who stands very high in national affairs.

ARRESTED AS FILIBUSTERS.

Men Landed from an American Steamer at Inagua Suspected.

Nassau, New Providence, Oct. 22.—The British warship Patridge arrived here last night, having on board twenty-one men who were arrested at Inagua, one of the Bahama groups, on the charge of being filibusters who were making their way to Cuba. The men landed at Inagua from the American steamer Delaware, from New York, and were taken in custody by order of the magistrate there, who, upon the arrival of the Patridge, sent them to this place for trial. A man named Ruiz is the leader of the party. The authorities here and at the various outports, acting under instructions from the governor, are keeping a close watch to prevent the departure of any filibustering expeditions from these islands for Cuba.

SNOW IN MASSACHUSETTS.

Earliest Fall Ever Remembered by the Oldest Inhabitants.

Sandwich, Mass., Oct. 22.—The approach of winter was evidenced yesterday morning by quite a heavy fall of snow. Along the coast the fall was light, but in the interior villages it came down in blinding clouds. Cranberry picking on many of the bogs was in progress and never before in the history of cranberry culture have pickers been obliged to suspend work on account of a snowstorm. The oldest inhabitants say that a snow storm at this time of the year was never known to occur before.

BRITISH STEAMER IN COLLISION

The American Ship Alameda Badly Damaged by the Indrani.

Sydney, N. S. W., Oct. 22.—The British steamer Indrani has been in collision with the American ship Alameda, from Moodyville. The Alameda was cut down to and below the water line, and subsequently grounded in a badly damaged condition. The Indrani was from Tokio for Port Kemble. The Alameda left Vancouver on Aug. 16 for Sydney.

Verdict Set Aside.

Norwich, Conn., Oct 22.—Judge John M. Thayer of the superior court has set aside the verdict of $2,500 rendered D. S. Guile vs. Jewett City Water company. This is the first verdict of a jury ever set aside in New London county. Judge Thayer declares that the damages were excessive and the jury was unduly influenced by prejudice.

To Lexow Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Oct. 22.—The probe into the municipal affairs of Philadelphia will first be inserted on November 11, according to agreement reached yesterday at a meeting of representatives of the Citizens' Municipal association and State Senator William H. Andrews, chairman of the senate investigating committee.

Durrant Trial Resumed.

San Francisco, Oct. 22.—The Durrant trial was resumed yesterday. Attorney Deuprey, one of the counsel for the defense, was not present. He is still ill and it is believed he will not be able to participate further in the proceedings.

Count Taaffe Seriously Ill.

Vienna, Oct. 22.—Count Edward Taaffe, ex prime minister of Austria, whose illness was recently announced, is in a critical condition. He is suffering from heart disease and pyaemia.

Pastor Smith Starts East.

Denver, Oct. 22.—The Rev. Frank Hijatt Smith and wife departed for Cambridge, Mass., yesterday, to meet the charges preferred against him.

THE CUBAN REVOLUTION.

Several Engagements Resulting in Slight Rebel Victories.

Santiago de Cuba, Oct. 10, via Key West, Oct. 22.—Great excitement has prevailed here for the last few days on account of numerous rebel bands hovering around the city, some times as close as one mile. Last night a party of forty insurgents set fire to a large store just in the suburbs of the city. The owner is one of the boldest government supporters. Every night the rebels fire on the fortresses around the city, keeping the troops constantly busy.

Court Martial of Gonzalez.

The trial by court martial of Francisco Fajardo Gonzalez, accused of treason, took place yesterday. The prosecution asked that he be imprisoned for life. On the night of the 8th inst. a Spanish officer and thirty soldiers deserted from the Reina Mercedes barracks and went to join Periquito Perez's band, which is encamped in Escandell, fifteen miles from this city. The officer was implicated in the robbery of arms sold to the insurgents a few days ago.

Two Towns Threatened.

The forces of the rebel leader Rabi are threatening to enter the towns of San Luis and Dos Caminos, two important stations of the American railroad which are well fortified and where there are many stores. On the 6th inst. Spanish Lieutenant Cullen and his soldiers, who were on a scouting expedition in the Daiquiri mountains, were attacked by a party of insurgents; the Spaniards position was a very bad one, but they defended themselves bravely, having two killed and four wounded. The timely arrival of another officer with twenty men saved them from being made prisoners.

Guerrillas Killed.

On the 7th inst. three companies of Spanish guerrillas under Lieut. Col. Tejeda, who went to protect the men who were repairing the telegraph lines between San Luis and Palma Bordona, were attacked by a party of rebels under Demetrio Castillo, five of the guerrillas were killed and twenty-four wounded. The guerrillas were retiring when a reinforcement of fifty cavalry arrived, causing the rebels to retreat. They left behind them two mules loaded with provisions, two guns and other articles.

Many Spaniards Wounded.

On the 8th inst. the Spanish columns of Lieut.-Col. Frances and Commanders Lanzagorda and Izquierdo stationed at the Daiquiri mines, went out to the neighboring mountains and met rebel bands on the coffee plantations, Pinareo Descanso, Magdalena and Limones, in each of which places they had short skirmishes. The Spaniards were obliged to retreat to the mines with a great number of wounded. A special column under Commander Rozabal on the 8th inst. attacked the rebel camp near Limones of Gen. Periquito Perez. The Spaniards were compelled to retreat after losing five killed and fourteen wounded. The insurgents had two killed and none wounded.

Gomez Very Ill.

It is reported here that Maximo Gomez is very ill, suffering from old ulcers on his leg which have reopened. He is unable to carry on any war operations. The sugar planters of Manzanillo are preparing to grind their crops as they are willing to pay the taxes that the rebels impose upon them.

UNITARIAN CONFERENCE.

Nearly 2,000 Delegates Present at the Opening Session.

Washington, Oct. 22.—Nearly 2,000 delegates to the sixteenth national conference of the Unitarian churches of the United States and other religious bodies holding kindred beliefs are now in this city in attendance at the business session which opened this morning. Great regret is generally expressed that Dr. Edward Everett Hale has not been able to attend this year's conference on account of deep family afflictions. Rev. Robert Collyer of New York conducted a communion service, with which the regular proceedings were commenced this morning, and Carroll D. Wright, superintendent of the census and commissioner of labor, delivered the address of welcome.

AMNESTY TO REBELS.

Final Act in the Recent Revolution in Brazil.

Washington, Oct. 22.—Minister Mendonca last night received a cablegram from the Brazilian minister of foreign relations at Rio de Janeiro that forms the concluding chapter in the recent revolution in that country. The text of the message is as follows: "The president of the republic signed today the act of congress granting amnesty to the revolutionists of the Rio Grande do Sul, who laid down their arms on the 23d of August last."

The Common Council of Newark have decided to investigate the charges of fraud made regarding the purchase of land in Grove street, Clinton township, for a disinfecting station. The price paid for the land was $15,000. It is charged that the land is worth only $10,000.

The acquital of John Mullins, the Jersey City furniture dealer, for alleged complicity in the State House frauds, is a sad criterion on the much vaunted Legislative investigation of the Republicans last winter. Not a single conviction has been made before a court from the evidence furnished by this investigation.

The New York Sun this morning has a column editorial on the New Jersey Gubernatorial situation and finishes with the following:

Let Griggs talk if he will! McGill is the man to vote for. If by his useless eloquence Griggs is entitled to wear a laurel crown for oratory, who objects? On January 20th, 1896, inauguration day, we believe McGill will do all the necessary talking. Until then his Democratic partisans in New Jersey will furnish the oratory, the arguments, and the votes.

Jerseymen and Democrats! This is a year for action, not talk!

The management of the State Insane Asylum at Morris Plains, N. J., will probably investigate the charge of abuses made against the asylum by Albert F. Chadwick, principal of a public school in Paterson. Superintendent Coman and Dr. Smith of the asylum say that the reports which have been recently circulated about abuses in the asylum have been exaggerated. They deny that they allow the keepers to abuse the patients. In some instances the management admits that the keepers have used undue force when trying to subdue violent patients.

DAILY PRESS MEDAL PRESENTED.

At a Meeting of the High School Athletic Association This Morning.

The High School Athletic Association gathered in the High School building yesterday afternoon at 3:40 to witness the presentation of the prizes for the several events of the association which was held last Thursday afternoon, and also to witness the presentation of The Daily Press medal to the all-around champion of the year.

The presentation was made by Charles Noble who represented both the Association and The Daily Press.

It was resolved to send the following expression of gratitude to The Press:

We, the members of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association, do hereby send a most hearty vote of thanks to The Daily Press, of this city, for their generous gift, the medal, which in the minds of all is the handsomest medal which as yet has been offered at the fall field day.

George Proctor Smith, who won the medal, accepted it in a well-worded speech to the young athletes assembled.

Inventive Plainfielder.

W. M. Miner, of this city, has secured a patent on a telephone switch.

Dr. Deane's Dyspepsia Pills.

For thirty years Dr. Deane has made a specialty of dyspepsia. For thirty years has cured cases of it that had resisted any other first class medicines combined. He gave up the study of medicine, because he took to medicine, because the most eminent physicians of that day gave him up as a chronic dyspeptic, with only a short time to live.

Result of this change—a hearty, healthy, useful life, an enormous practice, and a demand for his pills greater than for all others combined wherever known. For sale at all druggists'. Send for a free sample. White wrapper if constipated, yellow if bowels are loose.

AMONG THE POLITICIANS.

It Is Said That the Republicans Will Renominate Codding.

The World this morning has the following political gossip from Elizabeth:

Ex-Freeholder John J. Donohue jumped into the field at the eleventh hour last night as a candidate for member of Assembly, at Elizabethport, and carried the delegates in some of the wards. The fight for the Elizabeth nomination will, therefore, lie between him and School Commissioner William D. Wolfiskeil. Donohue carried the First and Fourth wards, Wolfiskeil the Second. The delegates from the remaining wards were uninstructed.

There will be a grand Democratic mass-meeting Friday night at the Lyceum Theatre, Elizabeth. Richard V. Lindabury and Judge Carrow, of Camden, will be the principal speakers. There will also be addresses by the candidates nominated at Wednesday's convention.

The Republican leaders in Union county last night revised their programme and will renominate Assemblymen Codding and Burger today. With Freeholder J. Martin, of Springfield, as the third candidate, this is the programme as mapped out last night, and the bosses are confident of putting it through.

A large pumpkin weighing 133 pounds raised by Mr. Wilson, of New Market, was loaned to the M. E. church for their autumnal exercises.

Rev. A. I. Martine, of the Presbyterian church, or this place, and Rev. F. Fletcher, of the Baptist church, of New Market, exchanged pulpits Sunday.

The autumnal exercises at the M. E. church, Sunday, were well attended, the Presbyterian congregation uniting with them. The church was beautifully decorated witn colored leaves, branches and products from farm, garden and field. The programme was opened with a song by the Sunday-school, called "The Thanksgiving Song," which was nicely rendered. The rest of the programme was as follows: Prayer, Rev. A. I. Martine, of the Presbyterian church; song by the congregation, "Walking in the Light;" recitation, "The Frost Spirit," Miss Gussie Owen; recitation, "Wind and Leaves," Master Willie Kennedy; dialogue, 'Chain of Promises," thirteen young girls of the Sunday-school; recitation, "A Neglected Call," Miss Lillie VanMiddlesworth; recitation, "The Corn," W. Herald-Democrat Changes Hands.

HUMAN LIFE IN PERIL.

A New Disease Dangerously Prevalent.

Heart Failure Recognized the Most Deadly Complaint.

All the Danger Comes From a Weak Heart.

And a Weak Heart Always Comes from Weak Nerves.

Fortify Your Heart and Nerves Against the Dangers.

Of late a new disease has developed from our later-day civilization, a disease unheard of a few years ago, known as heart failure. So common are sudden deaths, people dropping dead without apparent cause on our streets, in offices, shops and factories, that the Boston Herald stated editorially that "we seem to be in the midst of an epidemic of sudden deaths," and the Boston Record voices the cry of the public when it asks "what is the cause of the great number of sudden deaths, and what is the remedy?"

The deaths comes from heart failure, and the cause of heart failure is weak nerves.

It is plainly evident that if people, by overwork, fret, worry, dissipation or excesses, break down their nervous systems, nerve weakness must result.

It is not singular, therefore, that the heart is the first organ to suffer the result of nerve weakness. A nervous irritation of the heart is the first symptoms experienced, causing irregular beating, rush of blood to the head, flushed face, cold feet and extremities, with nervousness and tired feeling. After a time, dizziness, giddiness, swimming of the head, dimness of the vision, sudden strange faint feelings, followed by a sinking sensation in the left chest or at pit of stomach. As the disease progresses there are trembling sensations, palpitation or fluttering in the left side of the chest, shortness of breath, especially after exertion, stooping or going up stairs. The sufferer will be drowsy daytimes and wakeful at nigh, and is more or less constantly haunted by a feeling of apprehension or anxiety, as of some impending danger.

Persons experiencing these symptoms have heart disease and are in momentary danger of heart failure—death. It can be cured by Dr. Greene's Nervura, the great nerve and heart tonic, as this wonderful nerve restorative will immediately give strength and vigor to both heart and nerves.

In any case do not delay. There is no time to lose and the cure may depend upon your taking this medicine immediately. Just read what Mrs. J. M. Adams, of Elizabethtown, N. Y., says of her astonishing cure.

"About two years ago I was in a very bad state on account of heart disease. I was in a feeble state of health, and from the action of the heart I was very weak and did what work I could do, in suffering.

"I had numb spells accasioned by inaction of the heart, which confined me to my bed for days. All this was brought on by the grippe three years ago.

"I found I had to do something quick, and reading of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, got and took the medicine. I found it all that it was recommended to be, and received great benefit from it, and found it helped my nerves.

"I can say truthfully that it is the best remedy that I know of, and I gladly recommend it to others, and shall be pleased to answer any inquiries as I have often done."

This grand remedy for heart and nerves is not a patent medicine, but the prescription of the most successful living specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th street, New York City. He has the largest practice in the world, and this grand medical discovery is the result of his vast experience. The great reputation of Dr. Greene is a guarantee that his medicine will cure, and the fact that he can be consulted by anyone at any time, free of charge, personally or by letter, gives absolute assurance of the beneficial action of this wonderful medicine.

A Household Treasure.

D. W. Fuller, of Canajoharie, N. Y., says that he always keeps Dr. King's New Discovery in the house and his family has always found the very best results follow its use; that he would not be without it, if procurable. G. A. Dykeman Druggist, Catskill, N. Y., says that Dr. King's New Discovery is undoubtedly the best cough remedy: that he has used it in his family for eight years, and it has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. Why not try a remedy so long tried and tested. Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c. and $1.00.

So the Tree Came Over and Peter Collins With It.

Old Peter Collins had a narrow escape from breaking his neck while trying to cut down a tree in front of his place on Fourth street, near Liberty street, this morning. For some time he had been working on the job and had dug the earth away from around the roots for several feet. This morning he climbed up to fasten a rope to pull the tree over.

While he was up the tree working, W. S. Wood, of Howard street, stopped in front of the tree to do an errand in a neighboring house. Suddenly Collins found himself flying through the air. The top of the wagon broke the fall but was broken in the bargain and Collins was knocked senseless for a few moments. He straightened up in a few minutes, however, and was all right again.

An Honest Man.

Last night two unmade dresses were advertised in the cent-a-word-column of The Press as lost. This morning D. E. Gavin, the milkman of Columbia avenue, called at the Press office and stated that he found them on West Front street. They were returned to the owner.

YOUR TIRED STOMACH.

"I have no appetite," you say, "and the little I do eat does me no good. At first it feels cold and dead in my stomach and by and by I have aches and pains that sometimes go to my chest and back. I feel weak, low spirited and out of sorts all over. I fancy the demon of dyspepsia has got me." That's the way you talk, and no wonder. But wait a moment. Let us reason together. Perhaps thus far your stomach is merely tired. You have been eating too much, eating the wroug things, and irregularly. You have given it too much to do, and like all living things, when overworked, it stops at length from sheer exhaustion. There may not be an actually diseased condition as yet. Still it is nature's warning, and you must heed it or worse will follow. "But I must eat or starve," you say. True enough, but safety usually lies in middle courses. Here is one for you. You don't need drastic purges or exciting stimulants. Your condition is one easily relieved if we go about it gently and sensibly. The tired stomach won't work under whip and spur. It has probably had too much of that already. What you require is something that is at once a food and a digester of food. Such an article is the Shaker Digestive Cordial, discovered and prepared by the Shaker Community of Mt. Lebanon, N. Y. Taken right after eating, so as to mix with the food, it does the stomach's work for it, gives it the advantage of further rest, strengthens you in a natural way, and soon enables the stomach to do full duty. There is nothing else like this simple, safe, certain and palatable remedy. Yet the Shakers respect your doubts, and authorize druggists to sell a trial bottle for ten cents.

HE WENT ON WALL STREET.

The Lamb's Experience There Gave Him Valuable Pointers.

At the corner of Broadway and Wall street a man accosted me the other day with an inquiry for the nearest police station, and of course I asked him what was the matter. He was mournful rather than mad and not a bit excited as he answered:

"Waal, I guess I don't want the police station after all, though somebody ought to be arrested. I went down in Wall street about two hours ago thinkin I'd speculate. I've heard and read of Wall street so much that I thought I'd try my luck."

"And so you went to a broker's office?"

"Noap. I don't know nuthin 'bout brokers. I walked up and down fur awhile and then got my eye on a sharp lookin young feller and made up to him and asked:

"'Young man, kin you tell me whar I kin put up $10 on the wheat market?'

"'I kin,' says he. 'Jest gimme yer money and I'll buy ye a thousand bushels.'

"I gin him the money, and we stood around fur awhile, and then went into a place to look at what they calls a ticker. Arter he'd looked the young man says:

"'Ole man, she's broke five pints, and you are closed out. She's sure to turn, though, and you'd better put up another five.'"

"And did you?" I asked.

"Waal, yes. I put up another five, and the market went up, and I cleared $3. Then she went down, and I lost the hull thing. Then I got kinder excited and put up $15 all to once. In about five minutes the young man said if Chicago kept out of the deal I'd make a cool hundred. Five minits later Chicago jumped in, and I lost my $15."

"And then you quit?"

"Waal, yes—that is, the young feller asked if I had any more money to bull the market with, and when I said no he did the quittin. I was lookin around fur him when a man told me I'd bin swindled. I was mad 'nuff to bust at fust, but I guess I won't do nuthin about it. I've seen Wall street. The lamb has met the lion, and the lamb wasn't in it!"

"But the experience will be valuable to you."

"Yes, she will. Jest about the time I realized I'd bin swindled a feller cum along and asked me where Broadway was, and I hauled off and knocked him head over heels down a basement! You bet they don't git ahead of me agin in this town!"—Detroit Free Press.

No Mo' Ashes.

There was an old colored man pushing a whitewash cart along Brush street the other afternoon when a woman opened a chamber window and called to him:

"Hey, you! Do you want a job?"

"What sort of a job, mum?" he asked as he stood at the gate.

"Carrying ashes out of the cellar."

"Werry sorry, mum, but I couldn't do dat job. I used to be in de ashes bizness, but I'ze dun quit it. If it was whitewashin or beatin a ca'pet, I'd be right on hand, but I doan' tech ashes no mo'."

"What's the matter with ashes?"

"Heaps de mattah, mum. Last job I worked on I found three knives, five fo'ks, seben spoons, two towles an a dollar in cash in de ash heap, an what yo' dun s'pose de jedge gimme fur it?"

"I don't understand," she said.

"Why, a policeman took me into co't, an de jedge gimme three months in jail."

"He must have thought you stole the things."

"Sartinly, mum, sartinly, an dat's why I say dat owin to de suspishus occupashun of de suspected suspishun I'ze beaharter gwine to hold myself right down to whitewashin an ca'pets."—Detroit Free Press.

His Sentence.

The following remarkable judgment was delivered some years ago by a magistrate in one of the English colonies:

"Pachua is hereby charged with having on the 11th of January followed the court on its rising, and while said court was in the act of mounting into its buggy came from behind, and seizing the court's dangling leg, the other foot being on the step, forcibly pulled back the court, frightened the horse and nearly caused an accident. The reason alleged for this by accused is that he wanted to hear the result of an application of his. The practice by petitioners of pulling the courts by the legs is one that should be discouraged. Accused only says he is a poor man, admitting the truth of the complaint. He is sentenced to one month's rigorous imprisonment."

Strange to relate, the lieutenant governor of the province, on reading this sentence, felt it necessary to intimate to the magistrate that neither the sentence itself nor the peculiar phraseology in which it was couched was calculated to meet with approval from minds running in legal grooves.—Youth's Companion.

Artistic Keys.

Keys, in our own day, have not only lost their former beauty, but are fast losing their significance as well. With the adoption of patent contrivances and strong box "combinations," the whole tribe of portable keys threatens to become as extinct as tirling pins, tinder boxes and warming pans. One of the most curious is that of the unfortunate Mary, queen of Scots, which had, in addition, a rather curious history after it left the hands of its royal owner. It is said to have passed into the possession, successively, of the late Duke of York, a nurse, a physician, a locksmith and an Edinburgh architect before its origin was known—the cipher "Marie" being very intricate, although the thistle, joined with the crown of France, might have given some clew to its possessor.—Cassell's Magazine.

Long Time Between.

The clock struck Jan. 1 and then Feb. 15, but still she was alone.

The Eskimo wife slept but fitfully, starting from a troubled dream every two or three weeks.

"Will he never come?"

Presently, however, she heard the familiar footfall.

"Tanked again," she groaned. "It is hardly ten years since he was drunk before."

It was very late.

The gray dawn was already breaking, and in less than a month it would be broad day.—Detroit Tribune.

His Heroine.

A new novelist, Mr. Shephard M. Duggar, in describing his heroine, says, "Her mouth was set with pearls and tuned with minstrel lays, while her nose gracefully concealed its own umbrage, and her eyes imparted a radiant glow to the azure of the sky."

The haunts of happiness are varied and rather unaccountable, but I have more often seen her among little children and home firesides and the country houses than anywhere else—at least I think so.—Sydney Smith.

TO BE ORDERED HOME

Admiral Kirkland Is Detached from Duty.

News of Secretary Herbert's Action Causes a Sensation in Naval Circles—Dissatisfaction with Him Arising from a Number of Causes. Will Probably Seek Retirement.

Washington, Oct. 22.—A sensation in naval circles was caused last night by the announcement that Rear Admiral Kirkland, commanding the European naval station of the United States, had been detached from duty and ordered home. It is expected that Admiral Kirkland will apply at once to be placed on the retired list. Commodore Thomas O. Selfridge, jr., will succeed him as commanding officer of the European station. For some time past it has been rumored that Secretary Herbert was not pleased with the conduct of Admiral Kirkland. Dissatisfaction was first caused by the action of the admiral in sending a letter of congratulation on his election to President Faure of France. Secretary Herbert construed this as entirely wrong, holding that the official position of the admiral, representing the dignity of the United States navy in European waters, precluded him from making any comment whatever with reference to French politics and sent a letter of reprimand. Admiral Kirkland was not slow to respond and he did so by appealing to the president to overrule Secretary Herbert's strictures on his conduct. He claimed in his own defense that he had known President Faure personally and he had merely congratulated him in a personal capacity and not as an officer of the United States navy. It is not known what action the president took in the matter but the detachment of the admiral indicates that the secretary was sustained by Mr. Cleveland.

Other Causes of Complaint.

Admiral Kirkland next came into public notice through a newspaper interview in which he made somewhat insulting comments on the character of American missionaries in Syria, whither he had been to give them protection during the Armenian troubles. This was brought to the notice of the navy department by a protest from religious organizations in Boston. Shortly following this second cause of dissatisfaction came a complaint from a chaplain in the navy that the admiral had insulted him before a number of officers during the festivities at the opening of the Kiel canal, where Admiral Kirkland was in command of the United States fleet. It was claimed by the chaplain that while standing with Admiral Kirkland and a groupe of other officers on the quarterdeck of the flagship San Francisco the admiral turned to him and ordered him below in a brusque if not insulting manner, because he was not attired in full dress uniform. The chaplain in his letter to the navy department made plain that the chaplains had only one regulation uniform, which serves for all occasions, and therefor believed himself very badly used. It is said that Secretary Herbert sided with the chaplain in his complaint, but it is not known whether he took official action upon it.

The Recall Uncomplimentary.

In addition to these reports of Admiral Kirkland others reached the navy department of a more personal nature, and after making a pretty thorough inquiry into the matter and consulting President Cleveland, Secretary Herbert issued the order of detachment. Admiral Kirkland will probably receive the news by cable at Algiers, for which place the San Francisco sailed yesterday from Gibraltar, according to a dispatch received at the navy department. While the recall is, of course, uncomplimentary to Admiral Kirkland, there is no disposition at the department to belittle his record as a sailor. He is looked upon as a man of action and of quick perception and always ready to do his duty. He was appointed to the navy from North Carolina in 1850, and attained his present rank March 1 last. Admiral Kirkland has not long to serve on the active list, but it is believed that he will apply for retirement without delay. It is said that he had expressed an intention of going on the retired list if relieved of his present duty.

DEATH WARRANT READ TO HIM

McMullen Is Anxious To Die and Refuses To Appeal.

Pittsburg, Oct. 22.—The death warrant of James McMullen fixing the date of his execution Dec. 12 was read yesterday to the condemed man in the county jail. McMullen murdered his wife, literally chopping her to pieces with a hatchet on the morning of Dec. 31, 1894. He then attempted suicide, inflicting a terrible gash in his neck. He has once attempted suicide since taken to the county jail. McMullen has been anxious for death, and positively refused his permission to take his case to the supreme court or the pardon board.

TO CLOSE PORTS OF CUBA.

Torpedoes To Be Sent from Spain for This Purpose.

London, Oct. 22.—A dispatch to the Central News from Madrid says that the government has decided to close with a triple line of torpedoes the ports of Cuba where a cruiser is kept permanently. One hundred and eighty torpedoes will shortly be shipped to Cuba for this purpose.

Miners' Strike a Failure.

Phillipsburg, Pa., Oct. 22.—The strike in this part of the central Pennsylvania bituminous coal fields has proved a failure. The miners in the Clearfield region, Houtzdale and Osceola were all at work yesterday. In the Beech Creek region a majority of the miners were also working.

Burned Up with His Cottage.

Sag Harbor, L. I., Oct. 22.—A fire early in the morning destroyed a cottage occupied by George Winter. The charred body of Winter was found in the kitchen. It is thought that Winter while making a fire upset a burning lamp.

Field Marshal a Suicide.

Berlin, Oct. 22.—A dispatch to the Tageblat from Vienna says that Field Marshal Dunst-Adelsheim and his wife have committed suicide.

HUMBLING AN EGOTIST.

BY J. AUBREY TYSON.

(Copyright, 1895, by Irving Bacheller.)

CHAPTER I.

Arthur Singleton was being refused, the logical outcome of proposing to Miss Berkley after an acquaintance of barely three weeks. Furthermore, the young lady, no less compassionate than beautiful, had deemed it advisable to suggest, for his own sake, that his visits should cease, until he could regard her merely as a faithful friend who, though esteeming him highly, did not love him and could never be his wife.

"Is it not better so?" she had asked. "After what has now passed between us—if you are as sincere in your profession of regard for me as I believe you are—my apparent lack of reciprocal sentiment, being day by day impressed upon you, must necessarily cause you pain."

Now, had Singleton been an ordinary man, this gentle though firmly-expressed negative would have been sufficient to convince him of the utter hopelessness of his suit; but Singleton was not an ordinary man, or he would not have replied as he did.

"And in requesting me to cease my visits are you not, Miss Berkley, actuated by a fear of the consequence of their continuance—to yourself?"

"I don't understand you," said Miss Berkley, looking at him quickly. She saw a faint smile playing about the corners of his mouth, but in her surprise she failed to observe how grim it was.

"I mean," returned Singleton, "that having formed the resolution not to love me, are you not fearful lest a prolonged acquaintance should impel you to accept me as a husband?"

An expression of blank astonishment overspread Miss Berkley's features; then a flush of pardonable indignation mantled her brow.

"I must confess myself a dull observer of human nature, Mr. Singleton, for during the three weeks I have known you I was not aware that egotism was dominant in your character."

"Why not say 'confidence?' But no matter—call it what you will. Your manner plainly indicates, however, that you think the very idea of my being able to shake your resolution is absurd. I will prove it is not."

"How?" asked Miss Berkley, sarcastically.

"By winning you for a wife against your will."

"Oh, indeed!"

"The enterprise is unique, I'll confess," continued the imperturbable Singleton. "Let us make it more so. You like bon-bons, do you not? Well, I am especially desirous of having you select a bookmark for me. Now, I will wager a box of bon-bons against a bookmark that three months from today you will accept me as a husband—subject, however, to certain conditions."

"And the conditions, please?" The smile on Miss Berkley's lips would in all probability have discouraged anyone else, but Singleton did not seem to mind it in the least.

"First, that you continue to receive me as you have lately done; secondly, that at the expiration of the three months you will give me an opportunity to repeat my proposal, and that you will then give me a definite answer.'"

"YOUR HAND ON IT, MISS BERKLEY."

"Very well; I accept the wager and grant the conditions."

"Your hand upon it, Miss Berkley."

They shook hands; then Singleton withdrew.

As Singleton left the room, a change touched the features of Miss Berkley; her face flushed, she stamped her foot, and clenched her fists in such a manner that the thumbs were between fingers and palms—an ominous sign in a woman.

"Why, the impudent, egotistical wretch!" she exclaimed. "The—the—Oh, but I'll humble him."

To the credit of Miss Berkley be it said that she adhered conscientiously to the terms of her compact with Mr. Singleton. The gates and the doors and even certain windows in the Berkley establishment yawned whenever he was pleased to enter, and day by day the spider's parlor became more familiar to the self-invited fly.

Miss Berkley was not long in determining on her tactics. Slowly and laboriously would Mr. Singleton be permitted to climb heavenward, then she would suddenly hurl him down. She, therefore, began to manifest a profound interest in poetry of a sentimental nature. Singleton, who was an excellent reader, tendered his services, which Miss Berkley graciously accepted. The young lady could not deny that his voice was wonderfully sympathetic; but then, she reasoned, good as he was, there must surely exist men who were better readers than Mr. Singleton. So she listened, and he read the poets—Browning and Swinburne and Shelley and any number of them. Sometimes, after having read a canto or two, Singleton would become fatigued, then they would talk, and Miss Berkley usually contrived to find some pretext that appeared reasonable for disagreeing with nearly everything in the form of an aphorism that emanated from Mr. Singleton.

Thus through long summer afternoons they rowed together, walked together, read together, talked together and drowsed together, till at length Miss Berkley reached the conclusion that Mr. Singleton was deriving rather more satisfaction from her society than he deserved. She consequently resolved to give him a preliminary hurl into the abyss of blighted hopes—just to see how he would be likely to look when the three months were expired and he had the bon-bons to buy. About this time Lady Plympton gave a ball in honor of the home-coming of her son, Capt. George, who had for several years served her majesty in a military capacity in India. Singleton besought of Miss Berkley the privilege of escorting her to the function, and it was accorded him; but when he besought of her the further privilege of inscribing his name on her dancing card in five or six places, his hopes were dashed by the intimation that he would be restricted to two.

After their first measure they separated. Miss Berkley was then appropriated by the hero of the evening, Capt. George Plympton, whose attentions to her for the next few hours were conspicuous enough to excite comment. It was also apparent that Miss Berkley found the young officer fascinating as he found her, and it was a mooted question among the speculative whether or not Miss Berkley had ever treated man so graciously before.

But where was Singleton?

Oh, Singleton was dancing with Mrs. Colchester; a charming widow, young, handsome, witty and rich. On the merits of this widow, public opinion was divided. The ladies maintained she was artificial, and held her conduct not always "the thing." One wall-flower once remarked suggestively to another that Mrs. Colchester was "devilly-eyed." The gentlemen, however, took the ground that old Dame Nature had done a good job when she fashioned the adorable Mrs. Colchester, and as for her eyes—well, they were "devilish fine eyes." Whether it was the inherent charm of widowhood, the wit, beauty, wealth, or the questionable eyes of Mrs. Colchester that first attracted Singleton, it were difficult to determine. It were likewise impossible to state what qualities Mrs. Colchester found fascinating in the person of Mr. Singleton; but that she did find them was obvious. The result was that he devoted himself to Mrs. Colchester, and she reciprocated his manifestations of devotion. Each of them fairly reveled in the society of the other. At last they disappeared. People wondered, Miss Berkley among them, what had become of them. Capt. George alone was without curiosity; he would not have given a clank of his saber for the knowledge.

By and by Capt. George proposed to Miss Berkley that they should "sit out" one of the dances. He knew of such a charming place—a little alcove halfway upstairs—wouldn't she come? Well, she was a little fatigued, and thought she would—and did. But they did not sit in that little alcove, for there they found Mr. Singleton and Mrs. Colchester. They all nodded pleasantly to one another, and Capt. George and Miss Berkley "sat it out" somewhere else. In consequence of this Miss Berkley has since consistently and emphatically maintained that a bachelor who deliberately flirts with a widow in the presence of an assembly of respectable people is a social abomination and should be repressed. This introduction of third and fourth parties into the Singleton-Berkley tournament wrought a new phase in the relations of the first and second parties, and each of the latter now began to mistrust the motives of the other. Was Miss Berkley really in love with Capt. Plympton? Was Mr. Singleton sincere in his professed adoration for Mrs. Colchester? Well, the three months had nearly expired; all would soon be known.

Miss Berkley was resolved, however, that the egotist should not thus lightly escape his well-merited punishment if she could prevent it. In the circumstances only one thing was to be done, and she did it. Capt. George was retained as a foil wherewith to parry the widow-thrusts of Mr. Singleton; but the amiability apparently inspired by Capt. George at the ball was also extended to the man destined to select the bon-bons. Never before had Singleton found her so gentle, so graceful, so sympathetic, so lovable. He was enchanted, and his attentions to Mrs. Colchester began to lose much of their ardor and persistency. But when he observed that Capt. George was similarly rewarded by these manifestations of awakened affection he became at once chagrined and depressed. His calls on Miss Berkley became less frequent, the widow was neglected, his male friends began to know him better, and the extermination of gamebirds appeared now to become the prevailing motive of his life.

NEWSPAPER CUTS.

How the Illustrations For Newspaper Work Are Prepared and Made.

Probably in no other part of the modern newspaper has the development been so rapid as that of producing the pictures and illustrations which go to make attractive the articles on daily happenings. Twenty years ago an editor considered himself lucky if he could have a "cut" made and ready for his "forms" in ten days. Now the drawings are made and the "cuts" finished in from one hour to an hour and a half. When an accident, disaster or anything else of interest happens in the morning, newspaper readers expect to see pictures of the matter in afternoon papers.

To explain this comparatively new art is the purpose of this article. And to begin the subject at the foremost end one must speak of the newspaper artist. In the first place, he is a type by himself. He is even different from the individual who does the work for weeklies. They have plenty of time to correct errors. The newspaper man hasn't. He must be rapid, accurate and withal finished. He must be able to draw everywhere, under any condition and yet produce very creditable work. There are scores of these men. Their names are too numerous to mention.

To the cartoonist the editor gives an idea of what he desires. A photograph, if a likeness is wanted, is handed to the illustrating artist. If it is a picture of a railroad wreck or anything of this kind that is needed, the artist makes a trip to the scene with his first cousin, the reporter, and he takes in lines what the writer puts in words.

From the artist the picture then goes to that part of the building where the "illustrating department" is located. The man in charge is an expert in "photo engraving" or "zinc etching." He seizes the drawing, slaps it into a frame before a powerful camera, and the picture is photographed with a density that would give the president of an amateur club spasms. The negative is almost black, but through it the lines of the sketch show with white transparency. Then a piece of zinc, the size the cut is to be, is covered with a secret solution, which has the property of becoming insoluble when affected by light. On this the powerful rays of an electric light are thrown through the white lines of the negative, and a picture, almost invisible to the eye, on the zinc is the result. The whole surface of the zinc is then lightly rolled with etchers' ink, after which it is given a bath in a tub of water. Wherever the surface of the plate has remained unaffected by the light the film dissolves, carrying away with it the ink. This of course leaves the insoluble lines on the plate, and by a few deft touches with a piece of cotton the operator brings the picture into view. The lines are then dusted with a powder made of "dragon's blood," which adheres to the sticky etchers' ink and forms a protection to them from the acid, in which the plate is next immersed. In this last immersion the surface of the plate which is unprotected by the powder is eaten away by the acid, leaving the lines in relief. The plate is then finished, requiring an hour or an hour and a half, and it then goes to the stereotyper.—New York Advertiser.

Former Cost of English Elections.

From a parliamentary paper showing the total costs of the general elections of 1857 and 1859 much interesting information is to be derived as to the candidate's bill about the middle of the century, when the work of purification had begun and had, in fact, been in progress for some years. The figures are given in a very crude form, the two sets being grouped together without any attempt, say, in the case of Scotland, to give the grand totals or averages of any seat. We find, however, that in an English county the expense, when there was a contest, averaged about £9,000, and when there was no contest, £400 or £500.

In the northern division of Devonshire, in 1857, the account came to £13,522; in Dorset, in the same year, to £12,061; in South Durham, to £14,470; in Hereford, to $12,824; in Herts, to £8,490; in West Kent, to £6,809; in South Northampton, to £11,479, and in East Sussex to £10,311. There were fewer contests in 1859, but in that year the South Derbyshire election cost £12,383; the South Sussex, £13,572; the South Lancashire, £13,279, and the West Riding of Yorkshire as much as £24,621. The boroughs, in these same years, fluctuated considerably. At Cockermouth and in Devizes, where there were contests, the costs in 1857 were £78 and £77 respectively. On the other hand, the Brighton election in 1857 cost £4,265; Finsbury, £3,457 (£5,828 in 1859); London, £7,578; Liverpool, £5,555; Manchester, £6,799.—Saturday Review.

Friendship.

Next to a match that won't light is a friend who won't stand up for you in an emergency. There are lots of friends for every one of us who are always ready to say a good word for us when we don't need it, but when the time comes to test them they fly away like birds at the approach of the cat. I humbly hope that in the next world, if not in this, we shall have a better chance to find out what true, unmurmurable, unscarable and perfect loyalty is. I should like to spend my first few centuries in heaven in the enjoyment of such friendship as I have dreamed of here—a friendship that cares not one straw whether you are poor and ill clothed or rich and arrayed in purple vestments; a friendship that, so long as your soul is clean and true, don't care a fig how much money you make or how successful you are, but casts its lot with yours whether you munch crusts or feed on pheasants; a friendship that will walk alongside whether you walk on cobblestones or ride in a carriage over the king's highway. Yes, my dear, that experience will be quite blissful enough to occupy a few centuries without taking up immediate harp practice or joining in the grand halleluiahs!—Amber in Chicago Times-Herald.

A Recommendation.

Mr. Tomkins is on a tour in Germany. On his departure from a certain town his landlord gives him a letter of introduction to a brother landlord in the next large town. Prompted by curiosity, our tourist opens the letter and reads: "N. B. He is a wealthy Englishman. Fleece him." Missive undelivered. — Schwarzwalder Bote.

The Ultimate Question.

It has been found that molasses mixed with sand makes a better pavement than asphalt. The popularity of this new paving material, however, will depend on the amount of sugar there is in it for the contractors.—Chicago Tribune.

In many nations it has been believed that an individual bitten by a dog may cure himself by placing three of the dog's hairs on the wound. The idea is expressed in the English proverb, "The hair of the dog is good for the bite."

SICKNESS WITHOUT SYMPTOMS.

A Disease That Doesn't Make You Feel Sick Till Too Late.

Symptoms are Nature's Danger Signals—Bright's Disease is Dangerous Because Its Danger Signals Are So Weak. Kidney Troubles and How to Cure Them.

Bright's Disease has no symptoms.

That is, of course, it has some symptoms, but they are so common that everybody suffers from them more or less.

And yet we have not all got Bright's Disease.

We nearly all have headaches. Head aches are a sign of Bright's Disease, nervousness, thirst, hot skin, loss of flesh—these are other symptoms.

Who would suppose he was dangerously sick when he simply had these symptoms?

Yet Bright's Disease often has hardly any others, outwardly, and is still one of the diseases most dreaded of physicians.

If it is allowed to run on too long it is incurable. Even in the beginning, ordinary drugs are often unable to help it.

Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills will cure all cases of Bright's Disease if taken before the kidneys are so worn out that renewing them is impossible.

Most sicknesses are caused by the kidneys, because it is the kidneys which are supposed to keep the blood pure.

When the blood is impure, it causes just the same symptoms as mentioned above for Bright's Disease.

If, when we are sick, we would take Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills, we would cure Bright's Disease if we had it, and in any case we would purify our blood and relieve the symptoms which made us feel sick.

Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills are made from the roots and stalks of the asparagus plant under a special process.

They have a tonic and healing effect upon the kidneys. They repair the effects of overwork, worry, excesses, etc. They strengthen and nourish the organs and give them new vitality.

Kidney troubles caused by wounds or bruises can be cured with Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills.

The kidneys filter our blood. They keep it pure and free from poisonous matter.

When our blood is impure we suffer from Bright's Disease, diabetes and other kidney diseases, and from rheumatism, gout, anaemia and other blood diseases.

The cure would be to take Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills.

By curing the kidneys we would make them purify the blood, and thus would cure all kidney and blood diseases from which we might be suffering.

Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills are for sale by all druggists, or will be sent to any address by mail, prepaid, on receipt of price, 50c per box.

Valuable pamphlet on the subject mailed free on request. Hobb's Medicine Co., Chicago or San Francisco.

CATCHING A CHICKEN THIEF.

The Neat Way In Which a Vermont Farmer Did the Trick.

"The neatest case of catching a chicken thief I ever heard of," says a Maine merchant, "occurred where I used to live in Vermont. There was a fellow round there who was a wonderful horse trainer, but good for nothing else, being shady in other ways. People hired him to break colts, and he had the peculiar habit of hitching up at night and driving off, nobody knew where. He was thought to be a thief, and that his night trips were for that purpose. He was engaged by an old farmer to break a colt, and as soon as the trips began the old man's chickens began to disappear.

"The old man thought hard over the subject. Then he said to the horse trainer one evening, 'Johnny, somebody is stealing my chickens, and I'm going to set a bear trap for 'im.' 'Best thing you can do, deacon,' replied Johnny, picking his teeth with a straw. 'It's pretty hard to set,' said the farmer. 'Won't you help me?' 'Yes, indeed,' Johnny answered, with alacrity. So they went and set the trap very carefully at the back of the henhouse. 'I think the thief gets in this way,' said the man, 'and I guess I'll get him if he comes tonight.' 'Guess you will, deacon,' Johnny chuckled.

"After Johnny had driven off at nightfall as usual the deacon hustled out and moved the bear trap around to the front door of the henhouse. Johnny thought he was all right when a few hours later he crept slyly up to the place. 'Deacon thinks he'll get the chap tonight,' he laughed to himself, 'but I guess I won't go in the back way this time.' The deacon heard his terrific yell when the trap sprung and knew well enough who was in his trap. 'Ha! ha! Johnny. Is that you?' he asked in mock seriousness. 'Told you I'd get the thief tonight, didn't I?'

"Johnny was a high tempered fellow and desperate when trifled with. He lived around there afterward, and sometimes the boys, when they were safely out of his reach, on the other side of the river or something of that sort, would sing out to him, 'Catching any bears now, Johnny?' But they never dared to say 'bear' to him if he had any chance to get at them."—Lewiston Journal.

Strictly Business.

"You air the feller that is giving the show at the opry house, ain't you?" asked the fat man with the red face.

The fat man did not look to be a pass fiend, so Mr. Barnes Tormer swallowed the insult in the word "show," and replied with dignity, "I am."

"Well," the fat man went on, "I want to make a little deal with you. If you will say, when the feller asks that question about what meat Cæsar fed on, that he must have got so fat by gittin his meat at Sprager's antitrust home butcher shop, I'll see that your trunks go along with you when you leave town."—Indianapolis Journal.

A Fractious Steed.

Amos Andrews was out driving on East Second street yesterday when his horse became frightened and he lost control of the animal. When near Berckman street he ran into a horse attacked to a cart, into which dirt was being thrown. The latter was thrown down, but it did not stop the runaway horse. After going a short distance the animal stumbled and fell. He lay on his back making lots of false motions with his feet. Mr. Andrews finally got the horse in a quiet condition and was able to continue on his journey.

Not an Insult.

She is a pretty little west end woman, and the other day, as she was getting off a crowded car on Vandeventer avenue, she was surprised to find her hand seized and pressed very warmly by some man on the platform. He held on to it, too, until she was safely landed and the car went on. She did not dare look up, thinking that this was the best way to ignore so unwarranted a freedom, and so went on her way home in entire ignorance of the handshaker's identity.

That evening when her husband came home she felt it her duty to confess, but he seemed so unnaturally severe in his manner that she could not muster up courage to tell him of her experience. Finally, when the evening was nearly at an end, as was also her peace of mind, he said:

"I'd like to know, Maggie, why you can't recognize your own husband when you meet him on a street car?" A few tears and satisfactory explanations on the part of both followed.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Discovery of Electrogilding.

The experiments which led to the discovery of the method of electrogilding were made in a cell at the citadel of Magdeburg, in which place, on account of his participation in a duel, young Siemens was at the time a prisoner, the chemicals and apparatus employed being procured and smuggled into the fortress by a friendly chemist of the town. In the second place, it was the sale of the patent rights in this invention in England which supplied the brothers Werner and William with the necessary funds to carry on their experiments, and so helped to lay the foundation of the important firms of Siemens & Halske in Germany and Siemens Bros. in England.—Nature

Just give it a passing thought that you can get an antique oak bedroom suit, 8 pieces, for $15, $20, $25 and $30, including a woven wire bed spring and a mixed mattress. No house in the city offers such inducements.

And then to think again that you can get tapestry Brussels carpet for 50, 60, and 70 cents a yard, made and laid with paper, which is a saving of 15c per yard. Where is there a house in the city that will offer such bargains?

And then imagine and wonder how we can afford to give away a moquette rug or parlor table with a parlor suit for $20, $30, $40 or $50.

CANDIDATE GRIGGS SPEAKS.

THE EX-SENATOR ADDRESSES THE REPUBLICAN MASS-MEETING.

Hon. Roswell G. Horr Also Talks and Tells Funny Stories—Ex-Judge Codington Made a Short Address—Vice-Presidents.

The great ratification meeting of the Republicans was held last evening in Music Hall, and a representative throng of citizens with their wives, sisters and sweethearts filled every seat. The especially large number of the gentler sex was remarked by all. The meeting was called to order by ex-Judge W. R. Codington, chairman of the city executive committee, and Frank E Marsh was named as chairman of the meeting. Mr. Marsh made a few opening remarks and declared that it was not a fight between Republicans and Democrats, but between the people and the State House gang. When he mentioned the name of Charles A. Reed in his speech it was loudly applauded. J. B. Coward then read the list of vice presidents, which was as follows:

Hon. Alexander Gilbert, Hon. B. A. Hegeman, Jr., ex-Mayor Chas. Place, Elias R. Pope, J. Fred MacDonald, B. A. Hegeman, Sr., W. G. E See, J. W. Murray, A. D. Shepherd, S. A. Ginna, Chas. J. Fisk, C. W. McCutchen, C. B. Corwin, L. N. Lovell, Hon. George Kyte, Edward Willis, Dr. J. B. Probasco, George D. Patten, L. B. Woolston, D. M. Demarest, W. W. Coriell, W. H. Moore, L. V. F. Randolph, Geo. W. Rockfellow, J. Frank Hubbard, Craig A. Marsh, Rev. A. H. Lewis, Rev. W. R. Richards, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Dr. O. L. Jenkins, E. R. Ackerman, Dr. E. W. Hedges, Harold Serrell, James K. Arnold, James F. Buckle, Wm. Fisher, W. N. Spencer, C. A. Baynon, Newton B. Smalley, Andrew McArdel, Wm. Westphal, Henry McGee, Emil Woltman, Wm. Newcorn, Wm. Messerschmidt, Edwin F. Maynard, F. Hibbits, Dennis Carney, L. L. Coombs, Lewis Peterson and Charles Sorenson.

The secretaries were J. T. MacMurray, Horace J. Martin, and B. Frank Coriell. The officers were all asked to take seats on the platform, which most of them did.

W. R. Codington, candidate for Assemblyman in Union county, was introduced and spoke as follows:

Ladies and gentlemen and fellow citizens: The nomination this afternoon came to me like a thunderbolt out of a clear sky. I attended the convention at Elizabeth as a delegate but it never entered my mind that I was to be a nominee. I recognize that to be nominated is not neccessarily to be elected, that to be elected it means good, hard solid work, and since it has been the pleasure of my friends, the Republican party, to place me in nomination, it is my pleasure to use every means legitimate and proper and fair to, if possible, secure my election. I ask your support and assistance in every legitimate and proper way. We have a leader this fall whom we are all proud of and proud to work with and under, and he is J. W. Griggs, and I feel satisfied and I think the Republican party in general feels satisfied, and if J. W. Griggs is elected Governor of the State of New Jersey, they will see one of its proudest day when he takes his seat and those of us who are with him in the race will feel proud of it that we have voted for him, and if we loose we will know we have lost in a good cause and in him a good leader. I am not quite prepared to make a speech, and if any one had told me this morning that I was to be nominated, I would have looked upon it as a joke, but since I am in the field, I am in to stay, and with your assistance and with the assistance of the people of the connty, we are in to win.

C. A. Reed, candidate for Assemblyman in Somerset county, was received with applause, but he would not speak.

Hon. Roswell G. Horr, a citizen of this city, and one of the foremost political orators in the field, was announced as the next speaker, and received a loud and hearty welcome. His bright, pithy sentences were very much enjoyed, and his speech was accompanied with rounds of applause. He spoke of the condition of New Jersey four years ago and the improvements in the State government since the last election.

"Times are not what we like to have them," he remarked, "but they are better than before, and when we get men to manage the country that know what managing is like we will be all right. You have no right to expect more than is in a man."

Then followed some of Mr. Horr's characteristic humorous remarks in which he told the audience not to expect of President Cleveland and other prominent Democrats more than they were capable of doing and suggested that it might be a good thing to put those in power who were capable of doing the work. He then spoke of the present campaign. He told something of the methods of the Democrats who were "not good" and declared that he believed that they would abuse an angel if the Republicans should nominate an angel.

Among other things Mr. Horr said:

The people now are getting more excited in this campaign, not because of the great presidential question but because the good name of the people of New Jersey where they live is at stake, because they are tired of the thieving and robberies and the race tracks and all that sort of thing and propose to take the power out of the hands of the "gang" and try and put it into the hands of some better people. That is the simple issue. Everybody can understand that. It is simply a question of good government against bad government. And I want to say to the people here tonght that the fact is that they are going to win right here in New Jersey. Some of the reasons why we are going to win is: First, We will have a square honest ballot and a fair count. They are not going to carry this State by voting the graveyards everywhere. If I am noted for anything it is my memory. I can recollect that we have had a good deal of that kind of trouble some time ago. The Democratic party is made up out of two classes. The nice, decent fellows who are really good men, and some who are not so good. That has been the case ever since my memory runs. I remember how true it was during the war. Part of the Democrats were true and did everything to save their country, but there was a portion of them that did not do so well. I can prove it without going into details.

These Democrats used to vote every year about 8,000 people taken from the headstones in the graveyards. They even used to vote a fellow by the name of Lehigh Valley. Whenever there has been a miscount it has been right among that element of the Democrats of which I speak. Now is it strange that the people rise up in their might and elect a legislature to renounce this? I am rejoicing that the people of New Jersey and of the whole United States are not resting until every true American citizen, be he rich or poor, high or low, black or white, can have one vote each and that vote honestly counted.

I do not say anything against McGill. I have no fault to find with him. I take it for granted that he is the best man they have in their ranks. If we elect Griggs he will be Governor and no one else. We want a Governor of New Jersey that has backbone. Griggs has got bone.

Plainfield is known all over the State of New Jersey for its clean, good square ballot. I have lost my vote for the past five years by being banged about, but I am going to vote this year and cast a good, square Republican ticket.

While Mr. Horr was speaking, ex-Senator John W. Griggs, with a body of friends, appeared on the scene and a general ovation followed. Senator Griggs then took the floor. He spoke very gratefully of the cordial reception he had received from all sides.

"I find here as I did at Elizabeth," said the candidate for governor, "an unusual number of ladies present. There is nothing that so encourages us as to know that the women are with us. We have nothing to be ashamed of, we are waging a campaign for pure government."

He then went back in the political history of New Jersey and told of the work of the alleged awful ring that had reigned supreme. He made the same point in his discourse as Horr of separating the Democrats into two classes—the good and the bad.

The party which accompanied him consisted of Hon. Foster Voorhees, Surrogate George Parrott, Assemblyman Charles N. Codding, Freeholder J. Martin Roll, candidate for Assemblyman in Union county, and Hon. Frank Bergen. They had all attended a mass meeting at Elizabeth and were brought here on a special car in the remarkably fast time of eleven minutes. Charles J. Fisk and William T. Kirk accompanied them from Elizabeth, and here they were met at the station by J. B. Coward and G. D. Patten.

The Senator's speech was somewhat lengthy, and did not receive the enthusiasm that Horr's address did.

Hon. Foster M. Voorhees gave the next address, and spoke very highly of Senator Griggs and declared that Union county would give him her entire support. He also gave the past legislators a severe drubbing.

After a few words from J. Martin Roll the assemblage broke up with three cheers for Griggs.

Spartan's Arrange a Football Game.

The Spartan Literary and Athletic Society held its second meeting at the home of Clifford Braider, of Manning avenue, last night. William Buell and John Sheppard were appointed a committee to secure a club room. The question of a football team was discussed and the challenge from the Dunellen team, formerly of the Central New Jersey Football League, accepted for games on election and Thanksgiving day. Westfield also asked for a game, but the date was unsatisfactory and the challenge refused. A mock trial is to be held by the members at the next meeting.

Reed to Speak in the Borough.

The reason why Charles A. Reed, Republican candidate for Member of Assembly in Somerset county, did not speak at the mass meeting in Music Hall last evening was because a similar meeting is to be held in the borough some night next week, and Mr. Reed desired to reserve his remarks for that occasion.

"Many of the citizens of Rainsville, Indiana, are never without a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house," says Jacob Brown, the leading merchant of the place. This Remedy has proven of so much value for colds and croup in children that few mothers who know its worth are willing to be without it. For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, corner of Park and North avenues.

MRS. BRUNN'S SIDE.

She Says She Never Drinks But Takes Good Care of Her Children.

There is generally two sides to every story and so it is with the trouble between Peter Brunn and his wife. Borough residents who have interested themselves in the case seem to differ as to which of the couple is to blame. Many say that the husband is the one, instead of the wife.

Mrs. Brunn, accompanied by two of the children, whom it was endeavored to take to New York yesterday, called at The Press office this afternoon and said that she was very much injured to feel that anyone should accuse her of drinking and neglecting the children. She said that she never does this, but works out every day in order that she may be able to support and send them to school. She claims that the children do not want to leave her. The oldest girl, who has a remarkable growth of hair, added here that what her mother stated was true—that she nor her sisters did not want to leave their mother.

Mrs. Brunn claims that her husband has spent the money that she has earned, and that he does not now live at home and that he contributes nothing to her support.

MARRIED AGAINST THEIR WILL.

An Old Couple Furnish Amusement for a Tipsy East Front Street Man.

An East Front street resident took a drop too much Sunday evening and it left him in a jolly mood. He called an old woman, about sixty years, who boarded at his house, and his hired man, about seventy-five years of age, and informed them that he was going to marry them.

Both the old people strenuously objected to the ceremony, but the imbiber of strong drinks was boss and he read the marriage ceremony, and told the old couple that they were man and wife. The old man started off to the barn, without a word, and slept there that night.

"I wouldn't live with him as his wife if I were paid for it," declared the indignant woman as she departed in the other direction.

The East Front street man thought the whole matter a splendid joke.

WHAT TO DO WITH THE GIRLS

MISS LINDLEY HAS PRONOUNCED IDEAS ON THE SUBJECT.

She Believes the Country Is What the Women Have Made It and Much of Its Future Progress Depends Upon Them.

The fourth lecture in the course given under the auspices of the Plainfield women interested in securing school suffrage for New Jersey women was given by Miss Marguerite Lindley, of New York, yesterday afternoon at four o'clock in the small hall at the Y. M. C. A. building.

The hall was hardly large enough to accommodate those who were in attendance. Mrs. David P. Hall was present and introduced Miss Lindley, after telling the object for which the lectures were given. The familiar motto "Know Thyself" was placed in a conspicuous part of the hall and it is safe to say that every woman present knew herself better at the close of the lecture than previous.

Miss Lindley's subject was "The Coming Girl and How Shall We Rear Her?" and she spoke in part as follows:

The coming girl must be educated to fully know her rights and that man is her brother and protector.

The country today is what the women have made it. She has softened the ire of the savage tribes. The future of this country rests on the coming girl, and the question is "How shall we rear her a correct all-round woman?"

If a mother wants to place corsets on her daughter, let her try it on her son or husband and see how they like it. Plenty of fresh air takes away that craving for unhealthful food. Nowadays health is a phenomenal thing in the majority of our homes. It is a headache, backache, or a pain of some kind, and simply because there has been a violation of the laws of Nature. Business, social and all other relations must be set aside till we feel better. This brings out the fact that there should be hygienic rearing of children. Systematic mental training should be looked after, but at the same time we should not think that the mind is everything, for the body is to be attended to fully as much as the mind.

Her environments cover all influences. She must exercise and bathe, the latter not strictly essential from a cleanliness point of view, but from the fact that it gives better circulation to the blood and makes one healthier. The best method is a cold sponge bath in the morning, which brings every part of one's body into action. She must have the bicycle and the dance, not to excess, but in proper doses. The wheel is new to woman and its possibilities are as yet unknown. She must exercise the upper as well as the lower part of the body.

Her dress must be fashionable and healthful. She doesn't want to dress out of date and be odd.

At this point the speaker exhibited a skeleton, and spoke specifically of the circulatory, respiratory and digestive organs, and how they should be cared for.

Continuing, she said, jumping and dancing, if abused, will in time injure the brain. Our girls must learn cause and effect. She must not wait till the body is loaded down with disease and then ask "What shall I do to be saved?"

Women are the natural educators of children, and I hope that New Jersey women will not leave one stone unturned till she gets control of the schools.

We should not speak of bad women as fallen women, but as uneducated, for it is through ignorance they submit to certain influences that mark them for life, and the same way with the boys, they are not altogether to blame. They are brothers, and their mothers feel too delicate in speaking to them on certain subjects. Masculine women and feminine young men are monstrosities, and proper training is needed in this respect.

A girl is not any more immodest when riding a wheel than when walking. As the home is so is the country.

Mrs. A. M. Powell then announced that the next lecture would be given on Tuesday evening, October 29th, by Prof. John Gifford on "Forestry." It will be illustrated.

RECEPTION TO CHOIR BOYS.

J. W. Reinhart Entertains Those Who Will Sing at His Daughter's Wedding.

The choir boys of the Grace P. E. church are sure of one thing at least, and that is that J. W. Reinhart is the most generous man they have met. Last evening about thirty from the choir were royally entertained at the Union County Country Club house with one of Chef Peterson's best suppers, which means something, all at the expense of J. W. Reinhart, who personally superintended all the arrangements.

The boys gathered round a large table and spent a most enjoyable evening.

A dress rehearsal of the wedding was given just before, and then the choir marched over to the club house to the reception.

A QUIET DEATH.

He Has Been Unwell for Some Time But the End Came Suddenly.

John A. Briant, who died at his late residence on West Fifth street yesterday, was at one tims the most prominent undertaker in Newark. He was born at Springfield, N. J., in 1812, and after entering the undertaking business gradually worked his way to the top. After about sixty years spent mostly in Rahway and Newark, he retired about four years ago and took up his residence in this city. About five weeks ago he had a severe fall, rupturing a kidney, and he has not been well since. His death came very sudden. Its immediate cause was stomach trouble.

WHO'LL BE CITY JUDGE?

With Codington Out, the Contest for Republican Nomination Will Open.

The fight for the Republican nomination for city judge is open again by the withdrrwal of ex-Judge W. R. Codington. His acceptance of the nomination for Assemblyman, of course, withdraws him from the fight. Those left in the field at present are George W. DeMeza, Harry C. Runyon, James P. Powers and Winfield S. Angleman, but the contest has not progressed far enough to tell who has the best chances.

An English Cart.

While Charles L. Case, of Central avenue, was traveling in Europe this summer he purchased a genuine English cart. It arrived in this city last Saturday. The cart is at Blair's livery, and Mr. Case is going to have it repainted in the latest style before using it.

A SENSATION AND SURPRISE.

C. N. CODDING REFUSES TO ACCEPT AN ASSEMBLY RENOMINATION.

Copies of the New Jersey Herald Attacking Him Distributed—Nominated But Refuses—W. R. Codington Selected.

The Union County Republicans held their county convention at Elizabeth yesterday afternoon, says the World, and nominated the following ticket:

Members of Assembly—Henry C. Clauss, of Elizabeth; J. Martin Roll, of Springfield; William R. Codington, of Plainfield. Coroner—Charles B. Holmes, of Rahway.

The convention was presided over by ex-City Attorney Frank Bergen, who later entertained Candidate John W. Griggs with a dinner at his home. Editor Charles C. McBride, of Elizabeth, and Mr. Anderson, of Rahway, acted as secretaries.

There was much excitement in the convention over the advent of two newsboys, who distributed among the delegates copies of a new local paper, the New Jersey Herald, which contained an attack on Assemblyman Charles N. Codding, Chairman of the Union County Republican Executive Committee, and who had called the convention to order. The paper denounced his legislative record and called upon the convention to defeat him for a renomination.

Mr. Codding, however, was nominated. He strode down the aisle and while the delegates cheered him he insisted on speaking. "Gentlemen," he said, "as I do not care to be made the target and victim of two or three caluminous curs whose history is well known I positively decline to accept the nomination."

In spite of this Mr. Codding amid great applause, was nominated by acclamation. He still refused to accept, and in much confusion a recess was taken for ten minutes. The delegates swarmed around Mr. Codding and implored him to reconsider.

It was no use, however, as he declared his mind was made up. "I will not submit to a campaign of calumny," he remarked, "as my business interests would suffer by it. I am sincerely grateful to the convention for its expression of confidence in my legislative actions, but I won't run again, and that settles it."

It is said the A. P. A. and American Mechanics were back of the opposition to Mr. Codding.

Ex-Judge Codington was substituted. Police Justice Frazee, of Rahway, made a good fight for the nomination against the Plainfield man. Elizabeth presented Henry C. Clauss, and the township's choice was Freeholder J. Martin Roll, of Springfield.

The convention was briefly addressed by John W. Griggs, who told of his South Jersey travels, and predicted a big vote from that section. He called on Union County Republicans, he said, to give loyal support to the ticket.

ENGLAND'S NEW CLAIM

Wants To Despoil Brazil of Part of Her Territory.

The British Government Will Not Relinquish Possession of the Island of Trinidad—Brazilian Indignation Aroused—Minister Mendonca Refuses To Talk.

Washington, Oct. 23.—An international complication which may be of greater importance to Great Britain than her dispute with Venezuela, it is said here, is likely to follow the declaration that her majesty's government will not relinquish possession of the island of Trinidad which is situated about 150 miles from Rio Janeiro. Various claims to the possession of this island, which is an important strategic point, have been advanced by Great Britain at different times. One claim was of original discovery, but this being abundantly disproved, in favor of the Portuguese, claim is now made to the island as having been acquired by Great Britain by purchase from the claimants to a grant disputed by Brazil. Great Britain is reported to have arrived at a decision that she will adhere to this, her latest claim. No further information regarding the matter can be learned here.

Minister Mendonca Will Not Talk

The Brazilian minister, Senor Mendonca, politely but firmly declines to discuss it. He says he has no information with reference to Great Britain's action and refuses to discuss its effect either in its relation to Brazil or to this country. There is, however, presumptive proof that the report is true, and if this be so Great Britain's action will create a greater excitement in Brazil than has existed there for years.

Brazil's Claim Unassailable.

There is the strongest documentary evidence that Brazil's claim to Trinidad is unassailable. The island, so far as its physical aspect is concerned, is barren and uninviting with a sterile soil of which rocks and rocky formations are the principal product. It was discovered by the Portuguese as far back as 1540 and later, when Portugal acknowledged the independence of Brazil, it fell to the possession of the latter country. England has several times since practically acknowledged Portugal's control of the island and her seizure of the territory at this late date will, it is believed, arouse the deepest indignation of the Brazilians.

Brazilian Indignation.

This conclusion is bassed on the utterances of the Brazilian press several months ago, when the report was first circulated that England had taken possession of the island. If the newspapers of Rio Janeiro and other important cities correctly report public sentiment, the Brazilians were at that time willing to preceed to any extreme rather than thus be despoiled of any part of their territory. If public indignation was so deep-seated when England's course had not been well defined, it is natural to assume that it will be even more intense if the fact shall be established that Great Britain has in an arbitrary manner converted to her own use a part of Brazilian soil.

This Country Not Involved.

Should any difficulty now arise between the two countries it is not thought that the United States will become involved. Brazil, it is believed, is competent to manage her own affairs without the assistance of this country, although it is not unlikely that in such an event she would have both the moral and material support of the other Latin-American republics in the southern hemisphere.

The complaint is dismissed.

ARGENTINE'S CROPS.

Reduction of 15 Per Cent. in Wheat. Corn To Be Fed to Cattle.

Washington, Oct. 23.—Minister William I. Buchanan of Ohio, representing the United States in the Argentine Republic, reports that the probabilities of the wheat and corn harvest of the province of Buenos Ayres indicate a reduction of about 15 per cent. in the wheat acreage for next year as compared with last year. This is partly due to the fact that the cultivation of corn interfered with the planting and partly from the ravages of locusts. The indications are that the amount of wheat for export next year will be moderate and not in excess of the exports for this year. The corn crop which is now being shipped abroad was large, but the quantity suitable for export was greatly below the quantity expected. It will be impossible to cure the large amount remaining and it will be used in fattening cattle, which industry promises to increase.

ALL THE CREW SAFE.

Missing Seamen of the Burned Parthia Arrive at Valparaiso.

Baltimore, Oct. 23.—A cablegram received from Valparaiso announces the safe arrival at that port of Captain Carter and part of the crew of the burned ship Parthia. Captain Carter sailed from Cardiff, Wales, in the four-masted clipper ship Parthia about five months ago with a cargo of coal for San Francisco. Nothing was heard from the ship until a few days ago when one of her boats, containing the chief officer and part of her crew, reached Valparaiso, Chili, and reported that on October 14, when about four hundred miles off the southern coast of Chili, the Parthia took fire and all hands were forced to take to the boats. They became separated that night in a gale and the captain and remainder of the crew were supposed to have been drowned. Now the missing men have reached Valparaiso in safety.

1,500,000 ACRES INVOLVED.

The Famous Greer County Case To Be Argued in the Supreme Court.

Washington, Oct. 23.—The somewhat famous Greer county, Tex., case will be argued in the supreme court of the United States to-day. This grows out of a controversy between the United States and the state of Texas as to the right of jurisdiction over what is known as Greer county, both parties claiming possession. The area of territory involved is about one and a half million acres. The question at issue is a construction of the treaty of 1819 between Spain and the United States, whether or not the dividing line between Texas and the United States shall be the 100th meridian of longitude west of Greenwich, as laid down in a map published in 1818 and adopted in the treaty, or as it really is shown by later and corrected surveys.

GEN. EWING OVERCOME.

Physically Prostrated While Addressing the Supreme Court.

Washington, Oct. 23.—General Thomas Ewing of Ohio, the distinguished lawyer and physician, was physically prostrated in the supreme court of the United States yesterday afternoon while arguing a case. He had not been well for several days and the strain imposed by the exertion of speaking was too great. Remedies were applied and in a short time he was so far recovered that, accompanied by Mrs. Ewing, he was driven to his hotel. It was noted as a singular coincidence by Justice Field and some of the elder attaches of the court that General Ewing should have been overcome almost in the same spot and under the same circumstances as his father, the venerable Thomas Ewing, sr., on the 22d of October, 1869.

THE WALLER CASE.

ONE TOWN WIPED OUT

Other Wisconsin Villages in Great Danger.

Destructive Work of Fierce Forest Fires—Not a House in Meadow Valley Left Standing—Babcock Threatened—Green Bay Surrounded by the Flames.

Junction City, Wis., Oct. 23.—Word has just been received here that Meadow Valley, a village on the Valley division of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway, has been wiped out by a forest fire, which originated in the large cranberry marsh near the village. There was a high wind at the time and reports say that the fire spread to the village before the residents had a chance to fight the flames. Not a house was left standing. Word was received later that the town of Babcock is threatened with destruction. Meadow Valley is a village of 100 population and is situated in Juneau county.

Surrounded by Flames.

A dispatch from Green Bay says: This city is surrounded by forest fires which to-day are made especially dangerous by a strong north wind. Between here and Kewaunee the fires are almost continuous, in some places approaching dangerously near the tracks of the Kewaunee, Green Bay & Western railway. Near Luxumburg several families have already been burned out and at various points many others have moved from their homes in dread of the approaching flames. On the line of the Annapee & Western road, near Casco, the situation is serious and it requires the united and most persistent efforts of every available man to prevent the destruction of the bridge at that point. Several times the structure caught fire but each time the employes of the road with the assistance of the villagers succeeded in extinguishing the flames.

Immense Forest Fires Raging.

Last night a pall of smoke of unusual density hung over the city. It was carried in this direction by a west wind, which would seem to indicate immense fires in a westerly direction. Fires of a greater or less extent have prevailed on and about the Oneida reservation for the past two weeks, but the most serious damage thus far has been to destroy timber and hay.

CONSCIENCE TROUBLED HIM.

Theodore Burkhardt, Charged with Theft, Gives Himself Up.

New York, Oct. 23.—Detectives Rohrig and Gray arraigned Theodore Burkhardt, a butler, at Jefferson Market police court yesterday. Burkhardt was charged with robbing his employer, Charles Bryant, of $3,500 worth of diamonds and jewelry. Burkhardt walked into the West Thirtieth street station house at night, saying his conscience bothered him so that he could endure it no longer. He said he wanted to give himself up. Magistrate Wentworth remanded Burkhardt back to the station house until to-day.

A BABY

CONTRADICTS THE DOCTORS.

All Are Happy, Glad, and Well.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

The theories of physicians in regard to female complaints suffer a "Waterloo" very frequently, when sensible and thinking women take matters into their own hands.

Women are sometimes compelled to act for themselves, because of the suffering forced upon them by incompetent doctors, who are baffled by very simple complaints, because they are not the right sex to comprehend them.

Lydia E. Pinkham, when she gave to the world her Vegetable Compound, lifted women from the darkness into light. She placed within their reach a guaranty, not only of health, but of delicacy and self-respect.

The following letter is a little story where a "dear little boy" was the "Waterloo."

"I have taken three bottles of your Vegetable Compound, one package of Sanative Wash, one box of Liver Pills; and now I have a dear little babe four weeks old, and I am well. I have to thank you for this.

"I have spent $200.00 for doctors' bills without a cure. For my cure I only spent $5.00.

"I was once a victim of female troubles in their worst form. I have suffered untold agonies every month; had to stay in bed, and have poultices applied, and then could not stand the pain.

"My physician told me if I became pregnant I would die. I had bladder trouble, itching, backache, catarrh of the stomach, hysteria, and heart trouble, fainting spells and leucorrhœa. Can you wonder that I sing the praises of a medicine that has cured me of all these ills?" MRS. GEO. C. KIRCHNER, 351 Snediker Ave., Brooklyn, N.Y.

DAMAGING TESTIMONY

The Prosecution's Rebuttal in the Durrant Case.

Blanche Lamont's Uncle on the Stand—Adolph Hobe's Evidence. As to the Lecture Notes—No Blood on the Shoe Found in the Study of Pastor Gibson.

San Francisco, Oct. 23.—The defense closed its case yesterday without introducing any further testimony and the prosecution immediately began to put in its testimony in rebuttal. This was damaging to Durrant and included evidence as to the notes of Dr. Cheney's lecture on the afternoon of Blanche Lamont's disappearance, which he obtained from a fellow student. Five trustees of the Emanuel Baptist church were called and denied that they had about the time of the murder given any instructions to Durrant to repair the electrical apparatus of the church.

The Victim's Uncle Testifies.

They admitted that previous to that he had been requested to make repairs and in January had been asked to correct a defect in the apparatus connected with some time bells; but none of them had spoken to Durrant at any time about repairs connected with the sun burners. Among the trustees was C. G. Noble, uncle of Blanche Lamont. The treasurer of the church said he had allowed Durrant $4.50 for material used in repairing the electrical apparatus in January.

Adolph Hobe's Evidence.

Adolph Hobe, an old schoolmate of Durrant's, testified that he had seen him at the ferry on the afternoon of April 12, the day of the Minnie Williams murder, with a young lady of Miss Williams' stature, and with a cap such as she wore, at 5:30 o'clock. Durrant testified that he left the ferry before 5 o'clock. Some of the most important testimony of the trial was then introduced in the evidence of E. F. Glazer, a fellow student of Durrant's.

As to the Lecture Notes.

He testified that on the 10th of April he, with Durrant, went into a room in the college, and while he read his notes of the lecture on April 3 Durrant made notes in his notebook. They discussed the points raised and Glazer read his notes entirely through. Though they discussed the points of the lecture Durrant did not read from his notes during the three-quarters of an hour they were engaged.

Grease, Not Blood, on the Shoe.

Professor Thomas Price, the leading chemist of the city, was called as an expert and disposed of the mysterious shoe found in Pastor Gibson's study with a stain on the sole by saying he had found the stain to be a grease spot and not blood. Price went into details as to illuminating gas in use in this city. He said if Durrant had inhaled it over the sun burners as he said he did, for four or five minutes, he would have been entirely overcome. Had he remained two minutes he would have been overcome.

Reporters on the Stand.

Charles Morrison, a reporter, testified that Durrant had told him he went to the church on the afternoon of April 3, between 4 and 4:30 o'clock instead of 4:55, as Durrant had testified. J. S. Dunnigan, another reporter, testified that he and Dr. Gilbert F. Graham had visited Durrant in prison on April 20. He was requested by Durrant to step aside while Graham talked privately with the defendant. The prosecution expects to begin its argument this week.

DUBLIN TRAMWAY DIRECTORS.

Entertained at a Dinner at Boston—To Visit New York To-day.

Boston, Oct. 23.—The directors of the Dublin United Tramway company of Ireland, who have been in this city since Sunday, were the guests of the city of Boston yesterday afternoon. They are in the United States for the purpose of inspecting electric railways, with a view to supplanting horse power by electricity on Dublin tramways. Yesterday afternoon they were taken in carriages through the park system, and last evening a dinner was given in their honor. They will leave for New York this afternoon.

STABBED THE DEFENDANT.

Disappointed in Losing His Suit, Kennedy Sought Revenge.

Shamokin, Pa., Oct. 23.—During proceedings before Squire Rowe last evening, John Kennedy, being disappointed because his action against Warden Correll for assault and battery was dismissed on account of lack of evidence, stabbed him in the back and stomach, from the effects of which the latter will likely die. After a desperate struggle Kennedy was overpowered and lodged in jail.

No Corbett-Fitzsimmons Fight.

Hot Springs, Ark., Oct. 23.—Owing to the refusal of Fitzsimmons to fight Corbett on November 11, the champion, at a meeting with Fitzsimmons' people last night, declared that he would not fight at all and would go out of training. Fitzsimmons says he will claim the forfeit on the 31st inst. if the fight is not pulled off.

STRANGERS ON THE KEYS.

Capt. Johnson Thinks They Are Cuban Filibusters.

Washington, Oct. 23.—Reports received at the navy department from Capt. M. L. Johnson, commander of the cruiser Cincinnati, which is engaged in looking out for Cuban filibusters about the Florida Keys, are to the effect that parties of Cubans are gathering in the Keys, but not to any formidable extent. Whence they come Capt. Johnson has been unable to ascertain, although he has made every effort to do so. Groups of them, all strangers, have been noted from time to time, but there is nothing to indicate how they reached the keys, the presumption being that they came under cover of night. All of them are apparently engaged in fishing, turtle hunting or other peaceful occupations, but Capt. Johnson considers their actions so serious that he has deemed it worth while to make a report on the subject to the navy department. So far the Cincinnati has not been able to find any filibusters.

VERDICT FOR THE DEFENDANT

Karl Blessing Loses His Suit Against the N. Y., N. H. & H. Railroad.

New York, Oct. 23.—In the second trial of the suit of Karl H. Blessing, as administrator of the estate of Jacob F. Blessing, to recover $5,000 damages from the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad company for the death of Jacob F. Blessing, who was struck by one of the defendant's engines at Van Nest station, Westchester county, on Feb. 3, 1892, which was heard before Justice Wallace in the United States circuit court yesterday, the jury by order of the court returned a verdict for the defendant. The case was tried before Judge Townsend in May, 1894, when a verdict was given for the plaintiff for the full amount, which was reversed on appeal on a question of law.

AMERICA'S CUP CONDITIONS.

Practically the Same as Those Which Governed Other Races.

New York, Oct 23.—The proposed conditions for the international races next summer between the Distant Shore and the American boat for the America's cup, which were mailed to Percy Thellusson, secretary of the Royal Victoria Yacht club, through whom C. R. Rose, the owner of the Distant Shore, has challenged, reached the other side last night. The conditions are practically the same as those laid out for the Defender-Valkyrie race and are, of course, subject to the approval and suggestions of Mr. Rose and the Royal Victoria Yacht club. The only marked change in the conditions is in the time limit which has been reduced from six to five and a half hours.

SAYS SHE STOLE $35,000.

A Noted Musical Instrument Manufacturer Wants His Wife Arrested.

London, Oct. 23.—Fontane Besson, a noted musical instrument manufacturer of this city, New York, Paris and St. Petersburg, has obtained a warrant for the arrest of his wife, who is now in Seville, Spain, on the charge of stealing $35,000 from him. Mrs. Besson left London last August, taking her daughter and the money with her. An English detective has gone to Seville to arrest her, when proceedings for her extradition will be taken. It is understood that she denies having stolen the money, claiming that the manufacturing business conducted under the firm name of F. Besson & Co., is really hers and that the money is the proceeds of the business.

WILL SEND A TEAM.

Philadelphia Cricketers To Visit Great Britain Next Season.

Philadelphia, Oct. 23.—A meeting of the sub-committee of the Associated Cricket clubs of Philadelphia was held yesterday afternoon. The object was to decide upon the question of sending a cricket team to England next season and to outline the plans. All the members of the committee expressed themselves as being heartily in favor of such a project, and on a vote being taken it was decided to send a team. The committee will hand in a favorable report to the general committee this week, and its action will be ratified.

Game Protector Pond After Offending Marketmen at Canton, N. Y.

Albany, Oct. 23.—Chief fish and game protector Maj. W. A. Pond wrote to President Davis of the state fish, game and forest commission yesterday, telling him that he had opened a box containing twenty-two partridges and a saddle of venison at Canton, St. Lawrence county. The penalty for the partridges is $25 for each bird killed before November 1, and Mr. Pond is after several offending marketmen in that locality.

Run Away With Fire Apparatus.

While the Westfield hook and ladder truck, attached to a team of horses in charge of Driver Fred Barber, was en route to Somerville to take part in the firemen's parade this morning, the king pin, which keeps the pole in position, broke, allowing the pole and the whiffletree to fall on the horses feet, cutting them severely. They ran away and were captured in Bound Brook. A telegram was sent at once to Westfield and another team was furnished. Mr. Barber was not injured, nor the truck damaged.

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family has need of it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once and you will never regret it. For sale by Reynold's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

SHE'S HERE.

I've seen the coming woman—yes,
She's here. I saw her come.
And though so long prepared for her
She really struck me dumb.

When dreamily abstracted once,
The street I'd nearly cros't,
I heard a cycle bell ring loud,
And then my balance lost.

The coming woman'd hit me with
Her wheel, and, full of dread,
With streaming eyes was wailing now,
"Pray tell me, are you dead?"

I felt her soft arm stealing 'neath
My neck, then opened wide
My eyes, to see her kneeling, fair
And sweet, close at my side.

I felt great trepidation and Quick pulsing of my heart
And throbbing at my temples, for
She gave me such a start.

Sparkling Music Comedy.

"Little Trixie," which plays at Music Hall tomorrow evening, is a sparkling musical comedy that has met with success wherever it has been given. Everywhere praises of its entertaining features are sounded and it is endorsed by the press and public in all the large cities as one of the very best. She is a talented impersonator, a sweet singer and a wonderfully graceful dancer.

Dykeman Druggist, Catskill, N. Y., says that Dr. King's New Discovery is undoubtedly the best cough remedy: that he has used it in his family for eight years, and it has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. A BIRD FESTIVAL.

What a Traveler In China Witnessed One Day In April.

A writer in Our Animal Friends describes a festival that she witnessed in China. She says:

Paak-taai is, I must explain, one of the most popular Chinese gods. He is supposed once to have lived on earth, to have been fond of birds and very kind to them. Every year, in the month of April, a celebration is held in his honor. This festival, which I saw in the great southern city of Canton, lasts for three days. Shops are closed and services held every morning and afternoon in the god's fine temple. On the second evening a curious and brilliant procession passed through the principal streets.

First marched the bearers of huge white lanterns emblazoned with Paak-taai's name and titles. They were followed by about 100 boys carrying richly embroidered banners. Then came the "history trays." These were wooden platforms covered with clay figures arranged to represent different scenes in Paak-taai's life. He was shown feeding birds, setting their broken legs and teaching them tricks.

The figures were skillfully modeled and beautifully dressed and painted, but the "history trays" were eclipsed by the next division of the procession. Thousands of lanterns were borne aloft on poles, each being the life size imitation of some bird. There were long legged storks, stately peacocks, gorgeous golden pheasants, "snow" pheasants, with long jet black tails, great vultures and eagles, then at last glittering kingfishers, tiny tits and reedlings. All the lanterns were lit, many covered with the real feathers of the birds imitated, and they made a very odd and very pretty show.

After the birds rode boys of all ages, mounted on queer little Chinese ponies. They wore fantastic dresses and had their faces painted black, white and red, with here and there a dash of gold. Some had gilded chins and eyebrows, others gold noses and ears. The older boys were enjoying the fun immensely, vying with each other in puffing out their cheeks and making all sorts of queer faces, but many of the little fellows were more than half asleep, and in danger of rolling off the backs of their steeds. Then more lanterns, more banners and a dreadful band of (so called) music ended this amusing pageant.

Sailing Ship Routes.

The longest way around is often the shortest way to a vessel's destination. Sailing ship routes on the United States north Atlantic pilot charts clearly show, for example, how unadvisable it would be for a navigator bound to England from the equator to make directly for his destined haven. In mid Atlantic there is a region of high barometric pressure, around which the winds circulate in the same way as the hands of a watch. Hence, on the eastern side, where northerly winds prevail, the outward bound sailing ship has a fair wind. On the western side of the north Atlantic, however, where southerly winds are probable, the vessels bound to Europe are favorably situated.

It is for this reason that the outward bound vessels make a fairly direct track, while those homeward bound are compelled to make a wide sweep to the westward out of the straight line. Again, old sailing ships in ballast, bound to Canada for a cargo of timber, will actually sail right around this central Atlantic area of high barometric pressure rather than contend against the persistent westerly winds of higher latitudes. Maury first drew attention to the desirability of adopting this longer route in order to obtain a quicker passage. Ships of this description bound westward steer southwest from the English channel, as though bound across the equator, until the twentieth parallel of north latitude is reached, then steer due west before the easterly winds of that region, gradually turn to the northward as the American coast is approached and thus have a quicker and finer passage than would be possible along the fiftieth parallel.—Chambers' Journal.

THEATRICAL.

New York is at this moment enjoying itself with comic opera as it hasn't done for many a day. W. S. Gilbert's new book, "His Excellency," the brightest and most interesting, from every standpoint, of all the librettos from his satirical and sparkling pen, was produced at the Broadway Theatre last Monday night and made the most remarkable hit ever achieved by a comic opera in the metropolis. The costumes, the funny situations and the crisp and witty dialogue, together with the music and the quaint characters invented by Gilbert, set the "first-nighters" to laughing and and applauding in a most unaccustomed way. It is all right for a playmaker to outdo himself now and then, but for Gilbert, whose "Bab Aallads," and "Patience," and "Pinafore" and "Pirates of Penzance," etc., kept causing the world to wonder at and admire and enjoy him all the more each time he came before it, to absolutely knock into a cocked hat all previous efforts in the comic opera line was beyond expectations, and when he accomplished this with "His Excellency" the laudations were loud, and, of course, the inevitable result was a revival of the Gilbert craze that attended the original "Pinafore" and "Patience" performances.

George Edwards, the English manager, has sent over an unusually strong company, picked from the best talent to be found in London, and this organization gives an exceptionally fine performance. New York is quick to recognize merit and liberal in rewarding it. When it says a thing is good it is good beyond question.

FACTS ABOUT MILK.

GERM CHANGES AND CONTAMINATION OF THE VALUABLE FOOD.

Information Important to Women—Housewives and Mothers Should Be Versed In Milklore—Sterilization and Pasteurization Simple Matters.

The present activity in enforcing the law for milk inspection is a point of great satisfaction to all persons intelligently interested in the health of the city. It emphasizes anew, too, the prolific source of danger which is harbored in this fluid, than which in its unadulterated and sterilized state no article of food is more valuable and life sustaining.

To this easy possibility of contamination must be added the equal ease and about as serious menace of its adulteration. "Doctored milk," said a physician whose work lies in the east side tenement districts, "has been a Herod in this city that has annually slain thousands of children through infantile summer complaint and second summer diarrhea."

Against these grave indictments, however, is the grandly overbalancing knowledge that pure, microbeless cow's milk is an ideal food for the human system, and in the case of children more natural and life sustaining ofttimes than the real nature's food that is secreted in the mother's breast. Since, then, it is so imperative that milk must be consumed, it is equally imperative that its various stages and conditions as affecting its nutritive and health giving value should be understood. In Boston you are expected to eat "educated" crackers, which means that you must be educated to the cracker that is made from whole wheat. By the same token educated milk only should be used, or, better, every house mother should be educated to the knowledge of what milk is proper to be consumed by the members of her kingdom.

It is said that the English and American peoples are about the only nations who seem to profit nothing by experience. They continue to drink milk uncooked and without protection from infection. It is true, though strange, that nearly every savage nation on the globe that uses milk at all has some method of protection, more or less effective.

Experience is often a better teacher than science—that is, if her teachings are considered—as, for example, the French dairymaid always scalds her milk before churning. Not because she knows anything about sterilization, but because she knows her butter will be better. She does not know that heating stops the growth of a kind of bacteria which would, if allowed to develop, reduce the richness of the milk by changing the fat globules into other properties. Observation has taught her, also, the effect of warm and cold weather upon milk. But little she dreams that cold merely stops the growth of bacteria, while warmth develops them.

The way milk is often served in Naples is another illustration of the way results may teach, with no knowledge of the causes which accomplish them. If the customer choose, he may order the milking done at his own door, in which case a freshly washed cow, with a tidy milker, appears, while he stands by and sees the fluid drawn and receives it unwatered and clean.

Milk, as used in large cities, is a very different article from that used by primitive man, who followed his flock about and to whom the contaminations of the stable and other modern surroundings were unknown. It is seldom perfectly fresh, pretty sure to be adulterated and almost always dirty. It is stated that somewhere in the Union there is a dairy where the cows and dairymen are obliged to "take a bath and part their hair in the middle" before milking hour. However true this may be, it is presumably a regime for the securing of clean milk, but scarcely a sufficient one.

A large number of yeasts and molds grow in milk. Kumyss is merely the production of lactic acid and alcohol, by the growth of the yeast plant. Some yeasts coagulate milk, while molds, which are a form of decay, give that peculiar flavor so much desired in Roquefort cheese.

All these germ changes in milk are, however, items of slight interest to the majority of persons so long as they are not disease producing. Could we be sure of perfectly clean milk from a perfectly healthy cow the laity might dispense with bacterial knowledge and information relating to germ growth and transformations. As this is almost an impossibility, even on one's own farm, much less in cities and towns supplied by tradespeople, we must lend our attention and take out our pocket dictionaries and fathom the meaning of new adjectives as the scientists tack them before or after the simple word of four letters.

Things that appear very difficult and mysterious are sometimes very simple "when you know how."

The writer was approached recently by a perplexed young mother for an explanation of the several terms now being applied to milk. She had a notion that some chemical was added to produce these various conditions. This error was equaled by her beautiful faith that milk which could be procured direct from a country farm must be pure. That the average country farm dairy is conducted on methods long since pronounced questionable by science was a revelation when it was explained to her.

Another surprise to this seeking woman was to be told that sterilization and Pasteurization were accomplished by simply raising the temperature of the milk to a sufficient degree of heat to destroy any disease germs which might be in the milk, chilling it suddenly to arrest the process at this stage and keeping it closely covered and protected from reinfection until it was used.

Until we are assured of absolute purity we should resort to a protection. Science has unmistakably established the importance of this. By heating the daily supply to 167 degrees F., in a double boiler, and then cooling rapidly, there need be no fear of disease germs for at least 48 hours. The process renders the infinitesimals quite harmless.—New York Times.

Prehistoric Egyptian Giants.

In 1881, when Professor Timmerman was engaged in exploring the ruins of an ancient temple of Isis on the banks of the Nile, 16 miles below Najar Djfard, he opened a row of tombs in which some prehistoric race of giants had been buried. The smallest skeleton out of some sixty odd which were examined during the time Timmerman was excavating at Najar Djfard measured 7 feet 8 inches in length and the largest 11 feet 1 inch. Memorial tablets were discovered in great numbers, but there was no record that even hinted that they were in memory of men of extraordinary size. It is believed that the tombs date back to the year 1043 B. C.—St. Louis Republic.

CLEVELAND IN ATLANTA

The President the Guest of the Exposition.

Twenty Thousand People Greet Him at the Railroad Station—Driven Through Lanes of Humanity to His Hotel—His Speech at the Dinner in His Honor.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 23.—President Cleveland and his party of cabinet officials arrived at 4.05 yesterday afternoon, promptly on schedule time. Twenty thousand people were massed in the streets which converge at the Union station. The carriages for the visitors grouped in the front of the Markham house. It was an orderly crowd and the police had very little trouble in keeping an open way from the palace cars to the carriages. Mr. Cleveland was greeted with cheers when he stepped upon Georgia soil. He was ushered into a carriage drawn by four white horses. President Charles Collier of the exposition, Vice-President W. A. Hemphill and Mayor Porter King of Atlanta, took seats beside him.

Through Lanes of Humanity.

Secretaries Carlisle, Lamont, Herbert, Smith and Morton and Postmaster General Wilson, with lady members of their families, and General Passenger Agent Turk of the Southern railway followed quickly in other carriages, escorted by members of the exposition board of directors. The party was driven through two lanes of humanity along Wall to Pryor street and then north to Peachtree and on to the Aragon hotel, where they are quartered. It was probably as large a crowd as was ever seen at the Union station here, not excepting the occasion of Mr. Cleveland's first visit here in 1887. The president smiled and bowed as he passed up the familiar streets, seeming to recognize a number of people in the throng. The trip down was without special incident.

Entertained at Dinner.

Last night at 8.30 o'clock the president, the cabinet members and 100 prominent citizens were entertained at dinner by Mayor King at the Aragon hotel. The table was in the design of the letter "C." Mayor King sat in the centre of the outer line with President Cleveland on his right and Vice-President Stevenson on his left. Governor Atkinson of Georgia sat directly in front of the mayor, with Secretary Carlisle on his right and Secretary Lamont on his left. The other secretaries were in the immediate vicinity of the president and vice-president. The dining room was elaborately decorated with tropical plants and the national colors. The dinner was intended to be a representative one and the guests included the state, county and city officials and the jury of awards at the exposition.

President Cleveland's Speech.

When the toast, "The President," was given Mr. Cleveland bowed in acknowledgement and said, in part: "I know not hardly how to reply to this and shall attempt to do but little more than to return thanks for the kindly attention that has been shown. Ever since my visit to your city I have been reminded constantly that I was in a country of hospitality. Nothing reminds me more of this fact than now. Hospitality develops into fraternity and the hospitality, as shown between the people of the north and south, has developed a fraternity which knows no section."

The Ladies at the Play.

While the gentlemen were at dinner the ladies of the cabinet party were the guests of Mrs. Secretary Smith at the Grand Opera house, witnessing the production of "1492." The boxes were tastefully draped with the national colors and flags of foreign countries.

Exposition's Greatest Day.

To-day will be the greatest day at the exposition. Atlanta is jammed with visitors from all parts of the county, but chiefly, of course, from the adjoining states. Business of all kinds will be suspended. In the first place the mayor has issued a proclamation appealing to the citizens of Atlanta to abandon all business and attend to the proper reception of the president of the United States and his cabinet. The city offices will be closed and all business houses are requested to suspend operations.

Programme for To-Day.

Mr. Cleveland will leave for the exposition grounds about noon to-day. He will not have a military escort; he will review the troops from a stand in front of the government building. He will make his address from this stand and not in the auditorium, as at first announced. He will see the government building first and then all the party will have a lunch at the Piedmont Driving club. In the afternoon the guests will be escorted through all the buildings. In the negro building there will be a reception for that race. At night there will be fireworks at the grounds, a reception downtown, and at midnight the party will leave for Washington.

Convicted of Counterfeiting.

New York, Oct. 23.—In the United States circuit court before Judge Brown yesterday David Carmine, Barney Curran and Thomas McKenna, members of the "Horse Market gang," were convicted of having sold and passed counterfeit silver dollars. They were remanded for sentence. William Jarvis, one of the gang, pleaded guilty.

Indemnity Lands for the N. P.

Washington, Oct. 23.—The secretary of the interior approved for patent a list of indemnity lands of the Northern Pacific railroad company containing 289,231 acres in Lewiston, Mont., land district, and 148,502 acres of indemnity lands for the same company in the Fargo and Bismarck districts, North Dakota.

Must Not Use the Mails.

Washington, Oct. 23.—The postoffice department has issued an order denying the use of the mails to the Kansas Mutual Coupon Investment company of Kansas City, Kas., for conducting a lottery business. Also against the British American Loan syndicate of Chicago.

Defaulting Postmaster Arrested.

Washington, Oct. 23.—Chief Inspector Wheeler of the postoffice department has been advised of the arrest at Harrisonburg, W. Va., of W. P. Moore, defaulting postmaster of Roanoke, Ill.

HUMBLING AN EGOTIST.

BY J. AUBREY TYSON.

In this manner the last two weeks passed away. The morning of the 11th of September dawned clear and bright. This was the day on which Fate, invited by Singleton, was to preside at the interview which should determine the future relations of Miss Berkley and her egotistical wooer.

Singleton went shooting; Miss Berkley remained at home.

CHAPTER II.

Singleton, in the fields, confessed that he had never before had such execrable luck with his gun. Miss Berkley, in the library, acknowledged that never before had the hours seemed so tardy, and so unpromising of better things. Was Singleton coming, or wasn't he? Well, he knew what her answer would be, so there was no necessity of his appearing. Still, she believed in a man adhering to his word, no matter what the consequences. These were her reflections in the morning. In the afternoon she wondered just how much Singleton cared for that Colchester woman. Perhaps he was calling on her then. What was there in Mr. Singleton that pleased Mrs. Colchester? She did not know, and tried to ascertain by comparing Singleton with some other young men of her acquaintance. She recalled his words, actions, mental and physical characteristics, habits, virtues, and those vices which she had contrived to unearth. The result was that she thought a great deal about Singleton that afternoon; but why did the man not come? She was growing impatient about something. Was it Singleton's delay? Certainly not. She would not care in the least if she never saw him again; there she stopped—to think this over a little more. She wondered how he would act and look and feel after it was all over. About three o'clock she began to feel unwell—a sort of nervous attack, she thought. That was the reason she had occasional crying spells. The persistency of these attacks made her irritable. That was the reason she scolded the maid who announced Capt. George Plympton. She wasn't "at home" to Capt. George to-day. At five o'clock the maid tremblingly informed her that Mr. Singleton had called. Should she tell him Miss Berkley was not at home? No, she should not. So Singleton came in, and had the bad form to lay his hat, stick and gloves on the drawing-room table.

BUT WHY DID HE NOT COME?

As they seated themselves each was conscious of a sense of restraint. For several moments both were silent. Then Miss Berkley made an attempt to open conversation by asking her suitor if he had been shooting, and if shooting was as good this year as it had been last year. Singleton admitted that he had been shooting, and that game was about as plentiful as it had been the year before. They next attempted to discuss the merits of Trilby, but this topic proved as short lived as the previous one had been: so after two or three more ineffectual efforts to appear at ease, they relapsed into an uncomfortable silence.

"Miss Berkley," began Singleton. The critical moment was at hand. Singleton's face was pale, and his gaze sought Miss Berkley's eyes. She appeared to have become suddenly interested in the texture of a rug at her feet, and her fingers toyed nervously with the fringe on the arms of her chair. Dame Fate had reported for duty.

"Miss Berkley, three months ago, after having known you only three weeks, I asked you to be my wife. You refused me. We have now known each other for nearly four months, and have had ample time to reconsider what we then said. I have reflected seriously on what I am about to say, and having, during the past three months, learned to regard you more earnestly and devotedly than before, I will now take the liberty of repeating my proposal. Will you be my wife?"

Miss Berkley rose and, with averted face, made her way slowly towards the window. Singleton rose also, but did not follow her. Thus for several moments they stood in silence. Why did not the lady answer him? Surely the egotist was at her mercy now. One little word—the simplest in the language—would humble all his conceit and satisfy her curiosity. She has but to speak that word and turn her head to see how Arthur Singleton would look in the presence of defeat. Why did she not say it?

The little onyx clock on the mantel ticked joyously—tick after tick—until sixty were told. Then it started on another sixty.

"You do not answer me," said Singleton quietly.

Ah, but she did! A moment later he had his answer. It came gently—it was scarcely more than a whisper—but it came.

"No."

Will you try it again, Singleton, or have you had enough? Not so irresistible with the ladies as you thought, eh Singleton? Well, go buy a box of bonbons—the best that can be bought—there's a good fellow. She won them fairly. Miss Berkley still continued to gaze out of the window. Did she wonder how Singleton looked now? No, she had not turned her eyes in his direction; but she knew. His face was pale, his lips were compressed, and there was an expression of overwhelming disappointment in his eyes. She knew it all. Singleton advanced and extended his hand. How it came to pass that hers found a place in his she never knew. But she will never forget that smile which she then saw on Singleton's lips. It was not a cheerful one.

"I have lost," faltered Singleton. "Good-by."

"Good-by!" exclaimed Miss Berkley softly, in a tone of surprise.

"Yes, good-by," he returned. "Three months ago you said that a rejected lover would find it difficult to maintain the position of a disinterested friend with respect to the woman he loves. I did not believe you then, but in the course of three months a man may learn many bitter truths. I now admit that you were right."

Miss Berkley smiled. Singleton thought it was a smile of triumph, and released her hand.

"Come and see me to-morrow afternoon," said Miss Berkley gently, as Singleton turned away.

"I start for Paris in the morning," replied Singleton, a trifle coldly.

"For Paris!" exclaimed Miss Berkley, whose features now wore a startled expression.

"Yes, I shall join some friends of mine there, and travel the continent a bit."

Singleton turned towards the table, and, appropriating his hat, gloves and walking stick, started for the door. But Miss Berkley was at the door and, what is more, she had her back against it—thus cutting off his retreat.

"I'll not let you go till you promise to call on me to-morrow," pouted the lady.

"I have said that I leave for Paris in the morning."

"Then postpone your departure. Will you call to-morrow?"

"Perhaps," said Singleton, after some hesitation.

"That is no promise," replied his fair captor, stamping a dainty foot petulantly.

A dark flush mantled Singleton's brow, and there was an ominous gleam in his eyes.

"I beg of you to let me pass, Miss Berkley," he said with frigid politeness.

"Don't be angry with me, Mr. Singleton."

That Singleton was angry, it would have been vain to deny. He felt that, being beaten, he should at least have been permitted to depart with the honors of war. He laid his hand on the knob of the door and a moment later felt Miss Berkley's hand fall gently upon it.

"DON'T BE ANGRY WITH ME, MR. SINGLETON."

"You need not send me those bonbons, Mr. Singleton," faltered the lady, as her eyes sought the well-handled but insensible knob; then, as Singleton remained silent, she looked up and realized, for the first time in her life, that the face of an angry man is no pleasant object. A profile view may be interesting to a student of human nature, perhaps, but a full-faced view should be avoided when practicable. Miss Berkley now confronted the full-faced presentment, and didn't find it altogether agreeable.

"If you will leave me your address, I'll—I'll send you the bookmark by post," she said a little feebly. Then, withdrawing her hand from the door knob, she continued: "You may go now, if you want to, Mr. Singleton."

Having thus spoken, Miss Berkley abandoned her position at the door, and made her way dejectedly toward the window. Singleton for a few moments looked as if he had taken leave of his senses.

"Do you mean—?" he exclaimed.

"I mean that I haven't much confidence in your ability to select bonbons, still it would have been graceful in you to have let me win them—would it not?" and she turned towards him saucily.

Singleton, dropping his hat, stick and gloves, rushed across the floor, and clasping the lady in his arms he—well, he kissed her, and she let him.

THE END.

The life of a medical missionary in China is filled with difficulties and one of which may become a source of positive danger at any time.

In the making of a diagnosis many perils lurk. The fever thermometer, the tongue depressor or the stethoscope may be remembered as an evil implement in the hands of the foreign woman calling down upon the patient a bad spirit if he should happen to die even at some far distant time, while the use of more complicated instruments in examining the throat, nose or eye is advisable only in selected cases.

In prescribing medicines not only is the fear of a future accusation of poisoning ever present, but the possibility that it may prove to be a reality. Thus a bottle of liniment curing the venerable grandmother of rheumatism may be lent to a neighbor stricken with smallpox as an infallible remedy, or the entire contents of a vial of toothache medicine be administered in one dose to a teething infant. And without exception the heathen Celestial reason that if a small portion of medicine is of any benefit the whole bottleful taken at once, multiplies its usefulness in a corresponding ratio. Therefore, if not previously warned, experience soon teaches the missionary to make it an infallible rule never to dispense a poisonous remedy or one which could do harm if the entire quantity were taken at once. Liniments and toothache drops compounded of non-poisonous drugs may not be highly potent, but they are at least harmless.

When it is absolutely necessary to administer a powerful remedy several times or for several days in succession, the doctor puts each dose up in a separate vial, powder or capsule, and, leaving them at the dispensary with a trained American nurse or other foreign helper, directs that a servant or child of the patient be sent there for one every three hours, or three times a day, as the case may require, otherwise it would all be taken at once or divided among ailing neighbors.

In rare instances, where the sufferer belongs to the household of a great dignitary or is otherwise of especial importance, the doctor may remain herself or leave her nurse to administer the drafts, but this can rarely be done in a country where one treats 20,000 or 30,000 patients annually.

To guard the closets containing drugs against depredations the utmost precautions are necessary. As there is no privacy in China, any attempt in that direction producing suspicion of hidden evil perilous to the welfare of a foreigner, the curious natives peer into the open doors of a dispensary, and even the well one crowd inside during dispensing hours to observe proceedings. They watch the curious foreign woman mixing various powders and potions seemingly in a haphazard fashion, with the passionate desire to do likewise, which will be gratified if the closet is ever found unlocked. Meanwhile there is some satisfaction in attempting to extract a powder from the table, a bottle from the closet or even a little dust spilled from a paper bag, attempts seldom successful. The incentive is usually opium, though it may be mere curiosity.

In the matter of drugs the most faithful servant in the mission hospital can never be trusted, nor can the native assistant nurses, no matter how carefully trained, be allowed, as a rule, to handle or administer medicine.

The complications and responsibilities usually attendant upon grave operations are in China multiplied a thousand-fold. For reasons explained above, an operation must never be done in private, but in a room where it is possible for the natives to observe the mysterious rites from outside posts of observation. It is possible that they may take alarm at any stage of the proceedings, to be appeased only with great difficulty, and the death of the patient may be followed by an open revolt. On the contrary, if the operation is successful, people afflicted with all sorts of incredible surgical ailments in nowise resembling the preceding one are brought to the little hospital with the demand that they also be relieved.

Against the administration of an anæsthetic there is the greatest prejudice, the condition of temporary unconsciousness produced by it being beyond Chinese comprehension. In the majority of cases, however, it is easily dispensed with, the stoicism or the insensibility to pain of the average Chinese being remarkable. He or she will open the mouth and submit to having every tooth extracted without a grimace or a groan, and it is with apparent enjoyment that one receives the thrusts of the long, sinuous acupuncture needle—acupuncture, universal panacea, the chief native surgical procedure—imbedded five inches in his swollen rheumatic knee again and again by a native surgeon.

The dread of smallpox and cholera displayed by foreigners fills the Celestial mind with surprise, and any show of absolute fear with the utmost contempt. "Why be afraid of smallpox," they ask, "when thousands of Chinamen die from it every year? We know there is nothing to fear from it." In these cases the forlorn hope of the Chinese leech is the famous red pills—lingo pao you y tan, the supernatural treasure for all desires—globules of the bigness of a pin's head, whose composition is secret and whose curative properties are in Chinese eyes unequaled. Advantage is taken of the fact that the powder when puffed up the nose acts like snuff in producing sneezing to prognosticate a case of cholera or other illness. If a pinch will not produce one sneeze, the man will die in a short time; if he sneezes once, he will live at least one day longer; if twice, two days; if 20 times, 20 days, and thus the ratio continues.

During an epidemic of either of those contagious diseases patients so afflicted are daily brought to the hospital, asking for admission, but the reasons for their rejection fall upon uncomprehending and dissatisfied minds. It is utterly impossible to establish any form of quarantine or to prevent members of infected families from going wherever they desire, while the physician has great reason to congratulate herself if she succeeds in excluding them from visiting the dispensary and hospital wards.—Philadelphia Times.

French housemaids have a pet superstition that it is unlucky to kill a "money spinner," i. e., spider, and therefore spare many webs in situations where they can be left without suspicion of negligence.

A single spider web, though much finer than a hair, is composed of several hundred filaments of infinitesimal fineness.

ONLY A LITTLE MOLE.

BUT SEE WHAT WONDERFUL THINGS MAY BE TOLD ABOUT IT.

His Underground Home Shows That He Possesses Remarkable Skill as a Builder. He Has Some Characteristics That Are Not So Commendable.

There is a certain little friend of ours who builds his residence in very quiet and retired places, for he does not court attention. Indeed he rather seems to avoid it. He builds a fortress, but he is not a warrior. He drives long tunnels, but he is not a miner. He can calculate numbers and distances, though he is not a mathematician. He never makes a mistake in his angles, though he has not studied geometry. He sometimes digs wells, but he is not a professional well digger.

Nobody calls him the king of beasts, but he can fight with more than the ferocity of the lion or the tenacity of the bulldog.

The little friend to whom I allude is the mole.

Ever since farming came into fashion mankind has been the sworn enemy of molekind and has waged relentless warfare against the little genius of the dark. The traps that have been set, the poison that has been left in those underground highways, the cleverly contrived little homes that have been turned inside out by cruel spades—it would take a volume to tell of them! And yet the little animal that runs his long tunnel straight down the potato ridges is well worth studying.

The round little body with its velvety fur, the long, elastic snout and the broad "paddles" armed with strong claws are familiar to every one by reason of the traps and snares above mentioned, but people who think that "blind as a mole" expresses total blindness reckon without their host. Deep under the sheltering fur are two tiny points of eyes, which are somewhat discomposed by the bright glare of day, but which are sharp and bright enough to see all that is to be seen in the dusky shadows underground.

It is much the fashion, too, to compare people that are mean and sneaking with moles, but this is a manifest injustice. The mole lives underground because that is his home. He drives his tunnels as men send pioneers and build railroads into new countries, and he is full of courage, with nothing of the sneak in his disposition.

And such a little builder as he is, with only his nose for auger and his queer little paddles for shovel and spade. There is the mound of earth, for instance, in which he makes his fortress. The tunnels that he bores all over the farm lead back into the fortress, where he intrenches himself in time of danger. If you were underground, like him, and could follow him through those dark passages, you would find yourself all at once in a circular gallery. How did the little home builder ever manage to draw that circle, I wonder?

And there are five passages from this gallery, leading upward in a slanting direction to another and a smaller gallery near the roof, and the little geometrician laid this off also with invisible compasses, for it is a circle like the lower gallery. Leading from this gallery are three passages, slanting downward into a large, domed room, and there is his moleship's stronghold, where he sits at ease, as though he were in a moated castle with the drawbridge up.

To reach his retreat you must follow along some tunnel that leads into the lower gallery, you perceive, and then you must take one of the five passages to the upper gallery, and then you must take one of the three passages downward into the stronghold, and all that time he would have heard you coming, for his ears are of the sharpest, and before you could think he would be far away.

Who taught him to draw his fairy circles and hollow out his dome shaped roof and smooth those earthy walls without plaster or cement or trowel? Who taught him to make the five passages at equal distances apart? Who showed him how to make the three other passages at equal distances between them? Who taught him to count at all, this tiny creature, shut out from the sunlight and working his laborious way through unknown regions beneath our feet?

But, after all, this many chambered castle is not the end of his resources. He provides a nursery for his little ones, too, and carpets it with soft, dried grasses for their repose, and he places the nursery at some point where two or three tunnels meet, so that the mother and the babies may have the more chances for escape if hard pressed by the enemy. What a reasoner this little home builder seems to be, with his plans that look so far into the future!

If you examine the skeleton of the little burrower, you will find that its shoulder blades are out of all proportion to the remainder of its anatomy, so large are they and strong, projecting above the backbone. The bones of the fore legs are short and curved and strong, and there were powerful muscles in the neck and shoulders which gave those paddle feet their terrible tearing power.

Even when a mole is detected above ground he must be wary and swift of foot who can capture the little miner, so rapidly does he work those formidable paddles and sink out of sight. If one can get near enough to thrust a spade or a board beneath him, he may be caught, but given a "fair field and no favor" and the mole is sure to have the better of the race.

I am sorry to say that the manners of this underground householder are not up to the standard required by civilization, and that he is not at all versed in table etiquette. When he succeeds in running down a worm, he pounces upon his prey with a savage ferocity astonishing to see and tears it with teeth and claws and becomes altogether a very disagreeable animal.

And when he meets another mole with whom he does not happen to be on friendly terms I am sorry to say that they fall upon one another with a vindictive fury impossible to describe. What terrible battles they have underground there, those cruel and bloodthirsty little duelists, who shall say?

But we may congratulate ourselves that the mole is not so large as the lion. If he were and had strength and ferocity in proportion, he would devastate so much of the earth that puny, insignificant man would be skulking in caves or housing in tree tops.—Julia Truitt Bishop in Philadelphia Times.

Water For Babies.

An infant should have all the water it will drink, provided the water has been boiled or sterilized. The vessel it is kept in should be subject to a good washing in scalding water every day, filled with the boiled water and set away in a cool place. It should be served to baby in a bright, shining silver spoon. Absolute cleanliness saves many a little life.

And then imagine and wonder how we can afford to give away a moquette rug or parlor table with a parlor suit for $20, $30, $40 or $50.

THE VAN BUREN-REINHART NUPTIALS AN ELABORATE AFFAIR.

The Ceremony Performed in Grace P. E. Church by Dean Rodman---Reception Afterwards at the Bride's Home.

The bright crescent moon was sinking in the west last evening when, amidst a throng of relatives and friends, Miss Caroline Allison Reinhart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Reinhart, and Edward Morris Van Buren, son of Mrs. Daniel T. Van Buren, were united in marriage by Dean E. M. Rodman at the Grace P. E. church.

The elite of Plainfield society and many guests from out of-town were present at the ceremony and filled every pew in the church, while many were forced to remain standing in the side aisles. The floral decorations in the church were most beautiful. The wedding was a green and white one, and the decorations consisted principally of white chrysanthemums, with smilax and palms. At the head of every pew in the middle aisle was a bunch of white chrysanthemums tied with a white satin ribbon. The chancel was a perfect bower. Palms were massed on the sides and rear, while overhead long streamers of smilax hung down. White chrysanthemums were artistically distributed through the bank of green.

The Episcopal service was used and was most impressive from the moment the singing of the choir was heard in the distance until the door closed on them as they passed out after the newly-wedded couple.

The bride's gown was a beautiful one of white satin, the waist of which was embroidered with pearls and Rhine stones, trimmed with applique lace. She wore a long tulle veil. On the way to the altar, she carried a white ivory prayer book in her hand, a gift of the groom, and returned with a bunch of lillies of the valley in her hand.

The maid of honor was Miss Mary Anderson Reinhart, sister of the bride. She was gowned in white silk trimmed with bands of gold embroidery and wore a short veil. She carried white chrysanthemums. The five bride maids were all dressed alike and they looked charming as they slowly moved down the aisle to the soft strains of the organ. They all wore white organdie over light green silk and long tulle veils, while each carried a large bouquet of white chrysanthemums. They were Miss Katherine Reinhart, sister of the bride, Miss Emilie Varet Reinhart, of New York, cousin of the bride, Miss Eleanor G. Bosher, of Richmond, Va., Miss May L. Evans, of Plainfield, and Miss May G. Waring, of Plainfield.

Laurens H. VanBuren, brother of the groom, was the best man. The chief usher was Fred W. Walz, of this city. The others were James L. Helfenstein, of New York, cousin of the groom, Whitfield Pressinger, of New York, Louis B. Ostrander, of New York, Howard W. Beebe and Wm. N. Runyon, of this city.

The service began with singing by the choir in the distance; then the bridemaids slowly came down the middle aisle to greet the bride. The choirsters, each wearing a small bunch of white chryanthemums, headed the bridal party and the grand strains of Lohengrin's march resounded through the church as rendered by the regular organist, Mrs. Freeman, and the well trained voices of the boy singers. Next came the bridemaids, the maid of honor and the bride on the arm of her father. The groom and the ushers next took their places.

The opening reading and prayer being over, the bride and groom followed the rector into the green and white bower prepared for them and there Rev. E. M. Rodman pronounced them husband and wife "until death do us part." The responses of the bride, though low, were clear and distinct. Then arm in arm, Mr. and Mrs. VanBuren moved slowly down the aisle to the door where they entered the coach awaiting them. The maid of honor and the best man followed and then the bridemaids and ushers, while the choir sang that grand wedding march of Mendelssohn's. As the last note of the singing died away on the evening air the crowd that completely filled the church gradually worked its way to the street.

The reception given by the bride's parents at their beautiful home on Belvidere avenue was beyond a doubt the most complete affair ever witnessed in Plainfield.

The interior of the house was transformed into a garden of rare beauty. The reception hall was exquisitely decorated with smilax, caught up with LaFrance roses, yellow and white chrysanthemums, while in the recesses were a profusion of palms and autumn leaves.

The parlor decorations were perhaps the most admired. The ceiling studded with greens, white chrysanthemums and intermingled with different colored incandescent lights, shedding their soft mellow glows on the charming throng, was a picture beyond description.

The library was tastefully arranged with smilax and American beauty roses.

A picturesque portion of the decorations were the staircase and upper halls, where choice palms, white chrysanthemums and autumn leaves blended in presenting one grand scene.

The dining room also received special attention and the table was daintly spread with all the necessary requisites arranged in the most sumptuous manner.

During the hours of the reception the house was thronged with wealth, beauty and culture, all doing honor to the fair bride and her handsome husband.

In one of the delightful recesses, behind stately palms and rare flowers, Lander's orchestra was seated and rendered throughout the evening a programme of the choicest selections, which added grace and dignity to the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. VanBuren were showered with the best wishes and congratulations of their friends for a life of complete happiness and boundless success.

On the third floor a large room was entirely devoted to the exhibit of presents. An attempt to give an adequate description of them would be fruitless. They consisted principally of silverware and cut glass. A complete silver service in an elegant cabinet was a gift of the bride's parents. Another beautiful gift to the bride was a gold enamel watch studded with diamonds, from S. W. Williams, vice-president of the Central Railroad.

A choice painting from the bride's uncle, C. S. Reinhart, who is an artist, was exquisite. The other presents included a silver tea set, Bohemian glassware, French, English and Dresden China, Russian enamel ware, banquet lamps, statuary, silver trays, ladles, a set of gold spoons, a silver punch-bowl, and lace fans trimmed with mother-of-pearl and gold.

The groom's present to the bride was a diamond fleur-de-lis pin and a white kid prayer book, trimmed with silver.

The supper served by Maresi was undoubtedly the best ever given in Plainfield and was simply perfect in every particular.

Among those present at the reception were:

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Reinhart, the Misses Reinhart, Mrs. Daniel Van Buren, Laurens Hardy VanBuren, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Shepard, Miss Shepard, Rudd Shepard, Burritt Shepard, Dr. and Mrs. E. W. COUNTY SUNDAY-SCHOOL ASSOCIATION IN SESSION TODAY.

Field Secretary Says There Is as Much Difference Between Temperance and Intemperance as Heaven and Hoboken.

The fifteenth annual convention of the Union County Sunday-school Association was called to order this morning at 10:30 in the Seventh-Day Baptist church by President Rev. J. A. Owens, of Elizabeth.

Fifteen minutes was then devoted to devotional exercises, conducted by Secretary J. H. Manning of the Y. M. C. A. Miss Carrie Dewey presided at the organ and D. E. Titsworth acted as precentor.

Following the devotional exercises Dr. Lewis, on behalf of the church and the Plainfield members, gave all a hearty welcome. The response was given by the president, who thanked the church on behalf of the association for its hospitality.

A conference on "Advance Movements in Our County" was then conducted by the president. Reports from various in the county gave evidence of much being done along the lines of Sunday-school work. At this point E. E. Anthony, of this city, was chosen secretary pro tem.

A most admirable address was then given by Rev. C. H. Mead, Field Secretary of the National Temperance Society, on the subject of "Temperance in the Sunday-school." Among other things he said that the best way to save a boy was not to ruin him, and the best way to save a man was not to knock him down.

The church must be alert to its duty in this work. There is as much difference between temperance and intemperance as there is between Heaven and Hoboken. The saloon is after your boy and the church and Sunday-school should be after him, too. In Syracuse one day 1,800 men were counted in five hours going into three saloons. This calls for concerted action on our part.

The reports of township secretaries was then called for, but out of thirteen secretaries only one responded, R. P. Greaves, of Westfield. The president then announced the following committees:

On Nominations — C. Converse, Union; W. Porter, Summit; D. E. Tisworth.

On Resolutions—Dr. Lewis, Plainfield; M. Clark, J. L. Clayton, Westfield.

On Secretaries Reports—R. P. Greaves, Edward V. Brown, Westfield; E. E. Anthony, Plainfield.

On Enrollment—George R. Cornwell, Miss Josephine Petrie, Plainfield.

A recess was then taken till two o'clock, for lunch.

AN IMPORTANT DECISION.

Judge Rice Decides an Important Point Raised By Judge Coddington.

By a decision made by Judge Rice at New Brunswick Tuesday on a point raised by Judge W. A. Coddington, of this city, an important change has been made in the usual method of filing an appeal from a justice's court.

The case of W. H. Cole against Charles W. Johnson came up before Judge Rice, and W. A. Coddington moved to dismiss the appeal as the appeal bond and affidavit were not filed on the same day. He was opposed by C. T. Cowenhoven and Geo. W. DeMeza. The Judge denied the motion and gave a lengthy opinion in which he stated that the statute provided that before the appeal is granted the bond and affidavit must both be filed, but there are no requirements, as it was formerly, that they should both be filed on the same day.

STREET RAILWAY SETTLES.

REFUSED AT FIRST BUT FINALLY PAID THE DAMAGES.

Reed & Coddington Brought the Suits for Blume and Kline and Have Received the Check for Settlement in Full.

Sometime ago Reed & Coddington brought suit in the Supreme Court against the Plainfield Street Railway for August C. Blume. They soon after brought another case in the Supreme Court against the same company for Henry L. Kline. Blume sued for $2,000 and Kline for $1,000 for damages received by one of the cars of the company running into the two men on different dates. The two suits were entirely separate. Blume's accident happened last winter when he was driving up Somerset street with his uncle.

The car came from behind and he alleges that the motorman neither gave warning or slackened the speed of the car. The horse ran away and threw Blume out, knocking him insensible. He also received other injuries from which he has been suffering since and produced an aggravation of an old trouble that had been almost cured.

Kline was also hurt in the winter and alleges that no warning was given him. He was in a wagon with which the car collided and he was thrown between the whiffletree and the body of the wagon, badly injuring his shoulder and side.

The company refused to settle in either case and placed the matter in the hands of their attorneys, Depew & Parker, two prominent Newark lawyers.

The cases were adjourned last term and came up for hearing this term, but just before the trial, the company settled both cases to the entire satisfaction of all. Yesterday Reed & Coddington received checks from the company's attorneys in full settlement of both cases. This makes three cases that Reed & Coddington have brought against the company and in every case have secured a higher amount for their clients than they agreed to settle for at the start. The other case was of Valentine Swody, who received a favorable verdict at the Circuit Court at Elizabeth.

FELL INTO SCALDING WATER.

Maxwell Rosenburg Tumbled Into His Mother's Wash Tub.

Death by fire is a terrible way to die but to be scalded to death is worse. Little Maxwell Rosenburg, the two-year old child of Abram Rosenburg, who lives near Berkeley Heights, in the Passaic Valley, had a narrow escape from that kind of death yesterday morning.

The little child was playing about the room while his mother was preparing to do the family washing. She had just filled a large tub with scalding water and turned away to other duties when she heard a stifled scream and a splash. She turned and to her horror, saw her little son struggling in the tub of water. Mrs. Rosenburg rushed to the rescue and dragged the child from the water.

Dr. Westcott, of Scotch Plains, was immediately sent for and found the child very severely scalded. He hopes to save his life, although the escape from death was very close.

Mr. Rosenburg is a farmer and peddler in the Passaic Valley.

UNCLE DAN'S RIG GONE.

A Stranger Hires a Horse and Buggy and Fails to Return.

A man giving the name of James Smith and his home in Germantown, Pa., walked into "Uncle" Dan Roberts' livery stable yesterday morning about 8 o'clock and said he wanted to hire a horse and buggy to drive to Samptown. His wife was there and he desired to bring her home.

Harry Roberts let him have a chestnut sorrel horse, 15½ hands high, main on top of head cut close, and a full spring black buggy with red stripes.

Since then he has not been seen or heard of. The man is described as having a dark complexion, with Spanish cast of features; scar under one eye; height five feet eight inches and wore a black derby and blue overcoat. When writing or reading he uses eye glasses. He is slightly round shouldered. He is about thirty-five years of age.

The matter has been placed in the hands of Chief Grant and he is busy at work on the case.

KING AND QUEEN ENTERTAIN.

Blatz, and A. G. Vogeler made speeches appropriate to the occasion. Dancing was then started and continued till a late hour.

Was It Three Cents?

The News, with its characteristic disregard for truth, stated in its account of the Second ward Democratic primary Monday evening, that a collection of thirteen cents was taken up for Janitor Hope. At the time Mr. Hope remarked that the Republicans, though over twice in numbers, gave ten cents less, which would be, according to The News, the enormous amount of three cents.

"Many of the citizens of Rainsville, Indiana, are never without a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house," says Jacob Brown, the leading merchant of the place. This Remedy has proven of so much value for colds and croup in children that few mothers who know its worth are willing to be without it. THE DEMOCRATS NOMINATE.

THE COUNTY CONVENTION HELD AT ELIZABETH YESTERDAY.

A Strong Ticket Named—The Delegates Enthusiastic and Harmonious—Synopsis of the Resolutions Offered and Adopted.

The Democratic county convention held at Elizabeth yesterday was an enthusiastic one. The organization was given in The Press of yesterday. Ex-Senator Marsh in assuming the chair said he did not propose to abuse Republicans or say of them, as the campaign speakers had said of Democrats, that one-third of them were either thieves or corruptionists. He was satisfied from the intelligent faces before him that Democrats were not quite as bad as painted by their political enemies. He reminded the convention that its duty was to nominate men whose record it would have no need to blush for. If this were done then Union county would be found in November where it formerly belonged—in the Democratic fold.

Jas. E. Martine, of Plainfield, chairman of the Resolutions Committee presented the resolutions, which were unanimously adopted. They indorsed the Democratic principles, President Cleveland and Candidate McGill. The resolutions went on:

We arraign the Republican party of this State as having hampered by every means in its power the possibility of casting the full Democratic vote, through the repeal of the Werts law, and the enactment of a personal registration law.

We denounce the unnecessarily burdensome and annoying naturalization law, designed to hamper just naturalization.

We urge a pure and an unbiased ballot and the largest measure of personal liberty to the citizen consistent with good government.

We commend the Democratic minority of the last Legislature for its efforts in resisting the aggressions of the corporations that have assumed control of the Republican organization in New Jersey.

We denounce and condemn the effort of the Republican legislators to drag the judiciary of New Jersey through the mire of party politics as a menace to the orderly administration of justice.

We favor the enactment of legislation that will prove beneficial to the labor interests of the State, and point with pride to the record of the Democratic party on the question of enacting the laws demanded by organized labor, and pledge the support of the nominees of this convention to all such laws.

City Clerk Manning nominated ex-School Commissioner Samuel Williams, of Elizabeth, for Assemblyman; ex-Assemblyman Kelly nominated School Commissioner William H. Wolfeskeil, Elizabeth; W. J. Lansley nominated J. E. Febrey, of Elizabeth; Dr. Silvers, on behalf of Rahway's entire delegation, nominated Nathan E. Mead, jr., of that city. Westfield nominated John B. Green. The other townships and Plainfield made no nomination.

The first ballot resulted: Green, 164; Mead, 133; Williams, 130; Williams, 130; Wolfeskeil, 43; Febrey, 18; James W. Durand, 2.

On motion of ex-City Attorney Connolly, of Elizabeth, the nomination of Samuel Williams, Nathan E. Mead and John B. Green were made unanimous.

Dr. Thomas E. Dolan, of Elizabeth, received the unanimous vote of the convention for Coroner.

The secretaries of the convention were City Clerk Manning, of Elizabeth, and Charles M. Carman, of Summit.

James E. Martine, of this city, made an address that was enthusiastically received. Mr. Martine commenced his address by saying that "the same old gang," and he was glad to be one of them, had nominated a grand patriot and a peerless statesman as their standard-bearer. That Alexander T. McGill would be elected Governor every fair-minded citizen must admit. The Republican candidate for Governor, John W. Griggs, was scored in a masterly manner for his connections with the race tracks and his record while a paid servant of the people from Passaic county in the Legislature was shown not to be altogether in his favor.

Mr. Martine's speech was a spirited one.

HE HAD A GREAT TIME

The President Royally Entertained at Atlanta.

Reviewed Troops, Made a Speech and Saw the Sights—Visited the Fish Exhibit, But Did Not Fish. Foreign Bands in the Midway Greet His Approach.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 24.—The exposition management is to be congratulated on its ability at entertaining a president, and President Cleveland and party departed from this beautiful southern city delighted with their reception here. At the exposition grounds the president reviewed a gorgeous military parade, shook hands with hundreds of people, made an address, was banquetted, and saw the sights.

The President's Speech.

President Cleveland, after being introduced by President Collier of the exposition company, spoke in part as follows:

"Mr. President: On my own behalf and for my colaborers in the executive branch of our government who have accompanied me, I thank you for your kind words of greeting. We are here to congratulate you and your associates upon the splendid success of the exposition you have set on foot and the evidences you have gathered, chiefly illustrative of southern enterprise, southern industry and southern recuperation. But we are also here to claim a share in the pride in your achievement. No portion of our countrymen wherever found can exclusively appropriate the glory arising from these surroundings. They are proofs of American genius and industry which are joint possessions of all our people, and they represent triumphs of American skill and ingenuity in which all our citizens from the highest to the humblest have a proprietary right.

Outgrowth of American Liberty.

"It seems to me the thought may be suggested as not inappropriate to the occasion, that what we see about us is an outgrowth of another exposition inaugurated on American soil more than a century ago, when a new nation was exhibited to the civilized world, guaranteed and protected by a constitution which was ordained and established by the people of the United States, with the declared purpose of promoting their general welfare and securing the blessings of liberty to themselves and their posterity.

Influence of Free Institutions.

"The success which has attended this exposition of products and manufactures is not altogether due to the quality of the soil or the character of the people in any of the contributing states, but it rests largely upon the fact that these states are members of a beneficently governed nation, whose natural resources and advantages everywhere have been developed and improved by the influence of free institutions, and whose people have been stimulated and encouraged by the blessings of personal liberty.

Promote General Welfare.

"I hope I may therefore be permitted in conclusion to suggest, as a most important lesson taught by this occasion, the absolute necessity to our national health and welfare, and consequently to our individual happiness as citizens, of a careful discrimination in our support of policies and in our advocacy of political doctrines between those which prompt the promotion of the public welfare and those which simply seem to serve selfish or sectional interests. If we are to enjoy the blessings our government was framed to fairly and justly bestow, we shall secure them in due time by cultivating a spirit of broad American brotherhood and insisting upon such conduct as will, within the spirit of the golden rule, promote the general welfare."

The Fish in Danger.

After closing his speech a luncheon and rest refreshed the president, who had been fatigued by standing so long and shaking hands. He was then conducted through the different buildings to see the sights. Uncle Sam's building is the most popular on the grounds, and the fisheries exhibit always has the largest crowd. When Mr. Cleveland was seen approaching that display a committeeman remarked to the president that the fish had better hunt deep water. The Midway was packed with spectators when the presidential party was driven through. Chinese, Dahomeyans, Indians, Japanese and representatives of a dozen other nations lined up to see the procession pass. The speilers forgot to speil, but the Egyptian and Mexican bands attempted something supposed to be "Hail to the Chief."

Homeward Bound.

The president and his party, except Secretary Smith, left Atlanta at 12:40 this morning for Washington. The president looked a little tired, but he said he was feeling all right. He travels in Mr. Pullman's car Wildwood and the train is exactly the same as the one that brought the party south. An immense crowd of people saw the president off. The train is due in Washington late tonight.

An additional issue of Japanese 5 per cent loan bonds to the amount of 10,000,000 yen has been ordered by the finance department. These bonds will go into the market, but will mostly be awarded to wounded soldiers and families of the slain.

Mangled in a Threshing Machine.

Dunkirk, N. Y., Oct. 24.—Frank Watson of Arkwright Center was caught in a threshing machine on his farm yesterday afternoon and before the machinery could be stopped he was shockingly mangled. He died an hour later.

W. C. T. U. CONVENTION.

Close of a Very Successful Meeting of White Ribboners.

Baltimore, Oct. 24.—The most successful convention ever held by the W. C. T. U. and in many respects the most important ever held by women in any age or in any country had a brilliant closing last night. The perfect organization and well arranged methods of work has given unquestionable proof of the ability of the white ribboners to conduct the business of such a convention with the best possible results. The greatest variety of topics has been before the convention and disposed of with ability and dispatch. The main issues, however, were not lost sight of and Miss Willard and the delegates generally believe the society has taken a long step toward the creation of public sentiment for the enactment of laws to abolish the sale of liquors and to prohibit the "social evil." The place for holding the next national convention was not decided upon. The executive committee will decide and it is the general belief that Los Angeles, Cal., will be selected.

INTERNAL REVENUE RECEIPTS.

A Decrease of over Twenty Million Dollars in Three Months.

Washington, Oct. 24.—Commissioner Miller has compiled the receipts of internal revenue for the three months of the current fiscal year. They show total receipts to have been $37,744,478, a decrease as compared with the corresponding months of last year of $20,300,630. The principal sources of revenue were: Spirits, $18,852,028, a decrease of $21,302,364, as compared with the corresponding months of last year; tobacco, $8,075,545, an increase of $460,000; fermented liquors, $10,389,100, an increase of $792,630; oleomargarine, $338,334, a decrease of $137,504; miscellaneous, $89,470, a decrease of $113,902. The heavy decrease in revenue from spirits was caused by the withdrawals during the months of July and August of last year to escape the increased tax on whiskey put on by the new tariff bill which went into effect August 28, 1894. The receipts for September, 1895, were $5,882,251 greater than for September, 1894.

MAY PARDON HER.

Gov. Morton Interests Himself in the Case of Mrs. O'Hearne.

Albany, Oct. 24.—Governor Morton has interested himself in the case of Mary O'Hearne of Harlem who was sentenced by Judge Jerome in New York city to three months' imprisonment for selling a glass of whiskey one Sunday since the Roosevelt Sunday prohibition policy has been in force. He is awaiting an answer to a letter written to District Attorney Fellows and Judge Jerome to see if there is any objection to his exercising executive clemency and if justice would not be satisfied with the punishment she has already undergone. If the answers are not unfavorable Governor Morton will issue a pardon in the case.

ROSE'S BACK DOWN

Probably Scared Off by British Press Comment.

The Attacks Made Upon Him in England Enough To Dishearten Anybody—New York Yacht Club Surprised at His Action—No Danger of the Sport Waning.

New York, Oct. 24.—Yachtsmen were greatly surprised when it became known that Charles D. Rose had withdrawn his challenge for a series of races in 1896 for the America's cup. The cable message received by the New York Yacht club, which read as follows, partly explains Mr. Rose's action: "Owing to the general impression that my challenge might be construed as an expression of opinion on the result of the last race, I much regret having to ask you to withdraw the same. Charles D. Rose."

Scared Off by the British Press.

Commodore James D. Smith of the New York Yacht club, speaking of the matter said: "While I don't wish to offer an opinion until I learn more about the facts, yet I am greatly surprised at Mr. Rose's action. I presume the comments of the English press on the challenge caused him to withdraw. It doesn't make the slightest difference, however, as the coming or going of any two or three men will not affect the grand international sport of yacht racing. I shall, doubtless, see all the correspondence in a few day, and shall then have something to say."

Conditions Had Been Announced.

It so happened that this announcement that the challenge was withdrawn came on the very day when the America's cup committee announced the conditions for the match, the date of the first race being suggested for July 23. In a statement containing these conditions the committee said: "We take this opportunity to express our appreciation of the spirit of the challenge, and of the confidence which Mr. Rose has so courteously shown in our committe. We shall look forward to a most interesting contest, and, meanwhile, we hope that Mr. Rose will consider that any service we can render him will be a great pleasure to us."

Enough To Dishearten Anybody.

London, Oct. 24.—The receipt of the cable dispatch from New York announcing that Charles D. Rose had withdrawn his challenge, issued through the Royal Victoria Yacht club for a series of races for the America's cup next year, did not cause as much surprise as might have been expected. The attacks made upon him in the English press were enough to dishearten anybody and it is now generally believed that the question of a challenge for races in 1896 will be left in the hands of Lord Dunraven and the Royal Yacht squadron, as it is not thought likely that any other club will take up the challenge.

THE ARMENIAN REFORMS.

Steps for Carrying Them Out—Another Riot—Twenty-four Killed.

Constantinople, Oct. 24.—The grand vizer, Kiamil Pasha, has communicated to Shakir Pasha the scheme for reform to be introduced in the vilayets of Erzeroum, Bitlis, Van, Sivas, Mamuretulaziz and Dairbekir. The high commissioner has been instructed to maintain a scrupulous watch over the execution of the reforms and report the results by letter to Constantinople. The communication also defines in detail the functions of the high commissioner relative to the amnesty to be granted to political prisoners and the return of Armenian emigrants and exiles. Disturbances of a serious nature are reported from Kerasun. The Turks attacked the Armenians inhabiting the village of Senlus, in the district of Mudania. Twenty-four persons were killed on both sides.

Bordentown, N. J., Oct. 24.—Some of the household belongings of Mrs. Delia Parnell, mother of the late Charles Stewart Parnell, were sold at auction yesterday. Much sympathy was expressed at the sale for Mrs. Parnell. Some articles which Mrs. Parnell prizes highly because of associations were not put up to be bid upon, but will be sent to New York, which will be her home in the future. Some of the articles sold for a mere song, while the aged owner stood by and shed tears at the loss of so many of her cherished possessions. The total of the day's sale scarcely reached $500.

The man who feels that he is "breaking down," experiences loss of strength, sleep, and appetite, should at once take that greatest of concentrated food preparations. It is not a medicine, but a builder-up of brain, nerve, and flesh tissue. By its strength-giving properties, and its action as an invigorator of each of the great life-maintaining organs of the body, it stops the decline, and gives to the prematurely broken-down sufferer a new lease of life, wherein poor health is an unnecessary adjunct if its use is continued.

FOUGHT IN MID-AIR

Terrible Plunge of a Buffalo Workman.

Struck at a Fellow Mechanic, Missed His Mark and Fell Headfirst Through the Beams in the Tenth Story—His Life Miraculously Saved by a Rope.

Buffalo, Oct. 24.—Edward Jacobs and Frank J. Connors, iron workers employed on the big Ellicott square building, had been quarreling for several days over the ownership of some tools. The argument was resumed at the noon hour yesterday while the men were standing on a small beam in the tenth story. Suddenly Connors, who was standing near the shafting, saw Jacobs coming toward him walking on one of the iron scantlings. When he was within a few feet of him Connors recognized in Jacobs' hands the tools over which they had been disputing. He yelled "You've got them tools now, you whelp." "You lie," said Jacobs. Connors stepped out on the beam and the men began striking at each other. The beam was ten inches wide and below them was the net-work of beams, ten stories of them. A fall promised death. The other workmen dared not interfere. Jacobs struck Connors in the breast and Connors replied with a staggering blow.

Shot Down Head First.

Jacobs aimed another blow, but Connors dodged back and the impetus of his own blow carried Jacobs beyond his balance and he fell with a great cry of terror, head first inside the building. His leg struck a beam at the eighth floor and this changed the direction of the fall, throwing him toward the shafting. Past the eighth floor he went like a shot, turning over and over. Between the seventh and eight floor the elevator rope has a loop. In some way or other Jacobs grabbed it. With a last effort of nervous force he threw his leg into the loophole and hung. He was taken down, faint and sick from the fall and removed to the hospital where it was found he was suffering from a bad contusion on the leg and a bad cut on the head. These injuries and the terrible shock caused by the fall were the only injuries.

PRIZE-FIGHT LAW VALID.

Sports, However, Seem To Be Pleased at the Arkansas Court's Decision.

Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 24.—The prize-fight law is valid. That was the decision handed down in the supreme court here yesterday. Chancellor Leatherman of Hot Springs was overruled and the sheriff of Garland county was ordered to rearrest Corbett.

Sports Seem To Be Pleased.

Hot Springs, Ark., Oct. 24.—According to President Babcock of the Athletic association the statutes regarding prize fighting in this state are now clearer than at any time since Corbett's arrest. A misdemeanor under the laws of this state is punishable only by a fine of $1,000 to $1,500 without imprisonment, and in the case of a fight only the principals are subject to arrest. Leading members of the club contended that it would be good business policy to turn over to the state two or three thousand dollars for what would to all intents and purposes be a license to fight as the men could not be arrested until the overt act had actually been committed.

Corbett Not Under Bail.

Corbett was absolutely released from the custody of the sheriff after Chancellor Leatherman's decision and was not required to even find bonds for his appearance, should the appeal to the supreme court be adverse to his position. In the opinion of several members of the local bar, he cannot, even under the decision, be again arrested for conspiring to commit a breach of the peace. The future of the situation, so far as the legal point of view is concerned, rests entirely with States Attorney Teague. He can either delay proceedings until after the fight or prevent it.

Fitz Will Be on Hand.

Martin Julian, however, regarded the situation with equanimity and said to the United Press last night: "Let it be understood first of all that I am not indulging in a bluff. I have the guarantee of the city of Hot Springs, signed by Mayor Waters, that if Fitzsimmons is brought here he shall not be molested. If he is alive nothing on earth shall prevent my having him in this city on Thursday next."

Corbett's Ultimatum.

James J. Corbett gave out the following last night: "Unless Robert Fitzsimmons or his representatives agrees to the referee before 12 o'clock to-morrow (Thursday) and deposits $10,000 by 12 o'clock Friday, rendering this fight absolutely certain, I declare the match off. This is positively my ultimatum."

GEO. W. REYNOLDS DEAD.

One of the Best Known Country Journalists of His Day.

Oneonta, N. Y., Oct. 24.—George W. Reynolds, a veteran editor and publisher, died yesterday at Franklin, Delaware county, aged 77 years. He was a native of Kartright and was one of the best known country journalists of his day, editing the Franklin Visitor, Binghamton Standard, Oneonta Herald, Oneonta Press and Oneonta Spy in New York state, Newsletter in Exeter, N. H., and Melrose Journal and Clinton Times in Massachusetts. He served in the union army one year, attaining the rank of captain, and was postmaster in Oneonta under President Grant.

Lynched by Cattlemen.

St. Louis, Oct. 24.—A special from Hennessy, Okla., says that Jim Umbra and Mexican John, members of Zip Wyatt's gang, have been lynched by cattlemen. The two men had stolen cattle.

Going Home To Vote.

Washington, Oct. 24.—Secretary Carlisle will leave Sunday for Kentucky where he will register and return again in time to vote for Hardin, the democratic candidate for governor.

Legislative Librarian.

Albany, Oct. 24.—Edward D. Durand, a post graduate of Cornell university, has been appointed from the non-competitive civil service list as legislative librarian in the state library

WISCONSIN FOREST FIRES.

Flames Still Raging—Many Farm Houses Burned.

Green Bay, Wis., Oct. 24.—Forest fires are still sweeping across Kewaunee and Ahnapee counties and part of Brown county between Green Bay and Lake Michigan, the burning district extending over a territory thirty to fifty miles long and ten to twenty miles in width. West and southwest of this city a large territory is also in flames. The wind is blowing a gale from the south and fires are spreading in all directions. Few detailed reports of losses are received, but between thirty and forty farm houses, with barns, crops and machinery have been destroyed. No towns or villages are reported in danger. The woods are dry as tinder and the soil is baked to a depth of two or three feet. Continued dry weather with no decrease in the velocity of the wind is certain to add many thousand dollars to the loss, as wells and streams are dry and there is no protection against fire. North of the city the lowlands extending to Peshtigo have been burned over and there is no longer danger in that direction though in the woods west of the bay fires are still burning fiercely. That territory is thickly settled by farmers and reports of the progress of the fire are anxiously awaited.

PATHETIC SCENE IN COURT.

Children Cried When Given to a Divorced Father.

Rochester, N. Y., Oct 24.—A pathetic scene occurred in the circuit court yesterday. Some months ago William Cox was awarded a divorce from his wife and the custody of his two children, a boy aged five and a girl aged seven. Mrs. Cox's parents, who have had the custody of the little ones, refused to give them up, claiming that the father merely wanted them to annoy the mother, and that the children did not want to live with him. Judge Davy ordered the children brought into court, and in accordance with the decree handed them over to the father. As the little girl and boy were brought up the aisle their cries were heart-rending and the boy, resisting, refused to walk to his father. "No; no; no!" he cried lustily. The little girl also wept bitterly. Mrs. Kelsey, the grandmother, was overcome and sank, fainting, into a chair. The boy was lifted into his father's arms and the little girl was led away by her grandfather Cox, crying bitterly. Justice Davy and many others were observed to wipe their eyes.

BURNED AT SEA.

The City of St. Augustine a Total Loss—Crew Probably Saved.

New York, Oct. 24.—Captain Downs of the Ward line steamer Orizaba, in port here from Mexico and Havana, reported that on October 22, at 2 a. m., when off Hatteras, he saw a vessel on fire. He bore down to her, and stood by till daylight, when she proved to be the steamer City of St. Augustine, Captain Gaskill, hence for Jacksonville. The vessel was a mass of flames, and apparently had been burning for some time. As she was burnt to the water's edge. The Orizaba steamed around the wreck and seeing no signs of life, proceeded on her voyage. The steamer's crew had evidently been picked up by some passing vessel. The City of St. Augustine was built at Wilmington, Del., in 18[illegible], and hailed from St. Augustine. She registered 396 tons, and has been engaged in the lumber trade between this port and St. Augustine. Ray & Fickett of South street were her agents.

BOYS TO FIGHT REBELS.

Over 1,200 Spanish Troops Embark at Montevedio for Cuba.

Washington, Oct. 24.—According to a letter received at the navy department from the commander of the United States steamer Yantic, the steamship San Francisco left Montevideo on Sept. 16 with more than 1,200 Spaniards enlisted for service in the Spanish army in Cuba. About a hundred were deserters from the Spanish service who re-enlisted to secure pardon, while others were from Uruguay. Nearly all the volunteers were boys. They did not formally embark on shore, but when on board the vessel each presenting a paper tendering his services to Spain. The San Francisco has no Spanish flag or other insignia of nationality.

CONSECRATED DEACONESSES.

Six Women Received in the Evangelical Lutheran Synod.

Baltimore, Oct. 24.—Six women were last night consecrated as deaconesses of the general synod of the Evangelical Lutheran church. Six others were accepted on probation of two years, to be devoted to fitting themselves for the calling. Those who entered upon their duties last night are: Augusta V. Shaffer, Delaware, O.; Lucy Eyster, Hanover, Pa.; Sophia Jepson, Des Moines, Ia.; Emma Steen, Richmond, Ind.; Jennie Christ, Peabody, Kas., and Lena Casewurm, Plymouth, Pa. Four of them have received their instructions at Kaiserwerth Germany.

TOOK HIS OWN LIFE.

Now Learned That the Marquis of Waterford Committed Suicide.

Dublin, Oct. 24.—John Henry de la Poer Beresford, fifth marquis of Waterford, died at his home, Curraghmore house, Waterford, yesterday. He was 51 years old.

London, Oct. 24.—The Central News Dublin correspondent telegraphs that John Henry De-la-Poer, fifth Marquis of Waterford, whose death was announced yesterday, committed suicide by shooting himself in the head with a revolver. Ten years ago the marquis met with a serious accident in the hunting fields and has since been an invalid which finally weakened his mind.

NEWPORT ELECTION.

Mayor Doyle Re-elected — Republican Gains.

Newport, R. I., Oct. 24.—Mayor P. J. Boyle was yesterday re-elected with a plurality of 344. The republicans gain two votes in joint convention by taking three out of four representatives in the city council. The old school committee was re-elected except for the last place where the republican and democratic candidates were a tie.

Men of sporting proclivities are wagering ten to seven that Tammany Hall carries New York at the coming election.

With such harmony and enthusiasm as was evinced at the county convention yesterday, the Democrats of Union county go into the campaign with a good omen for success at the polls on election day.

The candidates selected are men of the highest integrity and character, and their election to the offices for which they have been nominated will ensure that the interests of Union county will be looked after in an able and conscientious manner. Though they have strong opponents in the Republican standard bearers, their unquestioned loyalty to the party should bring to them the vote of every Democrat, and their personal popularity in which they reside will doubtless attract not a few votes from their Republican friends.

A VALUABLE FIND.

A Lad Discovers a Diamond Brooch—Is Restored to Its Owner.

In the excitement of leaving Grace church last evening after the VanBuren-Reinhart wedding, Mrs. Taylor, of Roselle, dropped a valuable diamond brooch. A little boy found it in the street and turned it over to Sergeant Kiely. Mrs. Taylor did not discover her loss until she reached home. She spent the night in worrying, and this morning telephoned to the Plainfield police who turned her sorrow into joy. She came to Plainfield at once and took possession of her property.

—The Opportunity Circle of King's Daughters, will hold a sale of home-made preserves, jellies, cakes and candy, also fancy and useful articles, in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church on Saturday afternoon, October 26th.

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chambertain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family has need of it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once and you will never regret it. For sale by Reynold's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

People Who Assisted to Make the Nuptial Event Complete in Detail.

The service at the VanBuren-Reinhart wedding last evening was especially fine. The decorations at the church called forth great praise. They were arranged by Mrs. L. J. Denton, of Hillside avenue, and consisted of a floral avenue of white chrysanthemums, tied with white ribbons extending from the door to the chancel which was decorated with beautiful palms, chrysanthemums and southern smilax.

The large number of carriages at the wedding made it no easy matter to handle them, but Frank Hedden, aided by a corps of assistants, performed that duty in a manner satisfactory to all. There were one hundred and ninety-three cariages at the church.

Other Weddings.

At noon yesterday Miss. Florence Isabel Quereau, daughter of Frank W. Quereau, formerly of Fanwood, was married to Edward Q. Field, at her father's residence in New York city, by the Rev. Edward H. True, rector of All Soul's Church, Fanwood.

Stansbery, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Walsh, of Fanwood; Dr. and Mrs. Lyon, of Plainfield, and a large number of relatives of both parties, viz.: Mr. and Mrs. Samuel B. Field, Mrs. Charles Field, Miss Field, the Misses Quereau, of Brooklyn, and others from Hackensack and New York city. The presents noticeable were numerous and costly and in all respects the wedding was one of the prettiest. The happy couple departed on their bridal tour amid many demonstrations of hearty congratulations on the part of all the wedding guests.

The maid of honor was Miss Minnie N. Onderdunk, of New York, and the best man R. M. F. Luyster, of New York.

ST. VITUS' DANCE!

Childhood's Terrible Nerve Disease.

Getting Fearfully Common---Epidemic Among Children.

How It Comes On and How To Detect Its Approach.

Nerves of Children Delicate and Must Be Fed.

Dr. Greene's Nervura Makes Them Strong and Well.

The sign of nerve disorders in children are plain. There will be a pale look, darkness under the eyes, pinched features, and restlessness, irritability and nervousness. The appetite is irregular, the sleep restless and disturbed, with tossing from side to side, starting in sleep, gritting the teeth; there is indisposition to play, the child remaining quiet and inactive, and complaining of feeling tired. These are the first symptoms and should be attended to at once, in order to check serious trouble.

If St. Vitus' dance or fits are to result, there will be an unnaturally rapid winking of the eyelids, an involuntary twitching of the face, hand, arm, leg or some portion of the body, the pale pinched look will be more marked, and the nervousness will grow rapidly worse. If treatment is delayed, there is fearful danger of serious and fatal prostration of the nervous system.

If parents will give their children suffering from any of the above symptoms, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, they will be as rejoiced as Mrs. F. B. Danforth, of 10 Everett St., Malden, Mass., whose little daughter has been cured by this wonderful medicine of severe St. Vitus' dance.

MARY E. DANFORTH.

"The winter my little daughter was seven," she says, "she had a long run of rheumatic fever. Then the St. Vitus' dance came on, and she got so bad she could hardly walk or talk. Several doctors treated her, but they did not help her.

"I tried several remedies, and as I built up her general health she slowly gained, but never got entirely over it. The next year it came on again in a worse form than before.

"I tried Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and I could see a change for the better before she had taken the first bottle. She took three bottles regularly, and since then I have given it to her when she got tired and was restless at night, but there is now no sign of the St. Vitus' dance about her in any way, and I trust she will never be troubled with it again.

"I recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura to all those who are suffering in a similar manner."

It is only necessary to say that Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless, and may be given to sleepless, restless infants, nervous children, or the most delicate invalids with absolute assurance of beneficial results. It is indeed a wonderful medicine for children, because it makes them strong, healthy, vigorous and well.

It has what no other remedy has, a well known physician responsible for its good action and effects. It is the discovery and prescription of Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th street, New York City, the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, and he can be consulted in all cases without charge, personally or by letter.

A Household Treasure.

D. W. Fuller, of Canajoharie, N. Y., says that he always keeps Dr. King's New Discovery in the house and his family has always found the very best results follow its use; that he would not be without it, if procurable. G. A. Dykeman Druggist, Catskill, N. Y., says that Dr. King's New Discovery is undoubtedly the best cough remedy: that he has used it in his family for eight years, and it has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. Why not try a remedy so long tried and tested. Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c. and $1.00.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury.

THEY HADN'T FORGOTTEN HIM.

And He Spent the Night In the City Lockup.

There was a fight on the Boulevard some time ago and one of the participants, a colored man named Sherman Jennings, escaped. Last evening Sherman appeared around his old haunts again, but the police were on the lookout and the fighter spent last night in jail. This morning he came before Judge Coddington and was given his choice between paying a fine or going to jail for twenty days.

Fire in a Bed.

Fire was discovered in George Bremmer's house on Harrison street yesterday afternoon about 3:30 by George Wise who happened to be driving by. He noticed smoke coming from the top story front window. He notified Street Commissioner Emmons who sent in an alarm from Box 158. The gong only sounded once and it puzzled the firemen but the indicator registered correctly. The hose carriage was taken to Rockview avenue near the brook, but there was not enough house to reach the house.

Additional hose was sent for, but the fire was out by the time it got there. The fire was discovered in a bed in the room occupied by a man named Anderson, who boarded there with a painter named Volkmer. There was no one in the house at the time, but Volkmer was working across the street and he hastened to the house to save his goods.

Anderson's goods were all destroyed, including his bed and bedding. No one is able to account for the origin of the fire.

"The Honorable."

A lady complained to a shopkeeper because in sending parcels to her, he would address her as "The Honorable." "Don't mention it, ma'am. It doesn't signify at all." "But it does signify. My parcels may go to the wrong person. I am not 'Honorable.'" "We, madam, have always found you so."—London Spectator.

Obedience.

The first law that ever God gave to man was a law of obedience. It was a commandment pure and simple, wherein man had nothing to inquire after or to dispute, for as much as to obey is the proper office of a rational soul acknowledging a heavenly superior and benefactor.—Montaigne.

PUNTS AND KICKS.

The series between the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. and the Westfield Club has finally been definitely settled and the first of the series will be played at Drake's Park, Westfield, instead of Plainfield, next Saturday. The second game will be played at the Crescent Oval on election day.

The Y. M. C. A. eleven, which is to play on Saturday, has at last been chosen and will be as follows: Right end, Volney F. Green; right tackle, Edgar I. Serrell; right guard, Raymond A. McGee; centre, Thomas A. Cuming; left guard, Edward Brown; left tackle, Thomas U. Smith; left end, Clarence Peck; quarter back, George Schoonmaker; right halfback, Fred H. Freeman; left halfback, George Cathcart; full back, Louis Darling. Substitutes, William L. McClure, Arthur B. Crane, VanR. Schuyler, George Snediker, Warren Rice and Alfred Perrin.

Louis Waring will be unable to play with the team as he has resumed his position with the Elizabeth Athletic Club. It is hoped that the difficult question of who is to play centre will be answered in the person of Samuel Hall, of the Elizabeth Athletic Club.

The players and their friends will leave on the 2:30 train from here Saturday afternoon.

—Be sure to see "Little Trixie" at Music Hall tonight. It is replete with new and novel features.

A BUSINESS SECRET.

HOW THE CITY MERCHANT COMES OUT ON "BARGAIN DAY."

The Art of Cutting Prices So as to Draw Big Crowds and Make Big Profits—Hints to Storekeepers That Patrons Will Read With Interest.

The writer of this article recently made a trip from one city to another. The first city was one of what we call moderate enterprise. The merchants made no particular boast of setting the world afire, but were all supposed to be doing a fair amount of business at a good living profit. The city to which he went was one of unusual size, which has the reputation of being one of the most enterprising in the country. The stores have grown to enormous proportions and have the name the world over of being the cheapest and most liberal of any others. Yet when the writer came to the larger city and began to look into the inside workings of business and noticed the different prices at which goods were sold he found that, although the stores had the name of wonderful bargain givers and were known everywhere by the name of great price cutters, still, taking the stocks as a whole, these stores in the larger cities in nearly every instance sold goods at a higher price than they were sold in the smaller towns, and almost without exception the gross profits which the merchants made on the goods were from 15 to 25 per cent higher than the merchants in the smaller city could get. This set the writer to wondering how it was that these large stores should have the name everywhere for enterprise and low prices, while the stores in the smaller city, which sold the cheaper, were as a rule called high priced and old fogy.

As the subject was investigated a little more closely, however, he began to notice that there were some instances in which these large stores sold goods wonderfully cheap, much cheaper, in fact, than the goods could be even manufactured at. For instance, in one case, a certain store advertised the well known fiber chamois dress lining, which usually sells at 25 and 35 cents a yard, for 8 cents. These goods cost a great deal more than this selling price, and what could be the object in taking so popular an article and cutting it down with one blow to one-third and perhaps one-fourth of what it sells for in many stores? The writer thought he would see what information could be gained on the subject.

On inquiring of the manager how the business was he replied that it was splendid. "We are offering the people some bargains today which they cannot resist." "But," the writer asked, "how can you afford to sell these goods which you advertise at so much less than cost?" The reply was: "Oh, that is only done to bring the people in the store. They will not come unless there is some unusual inducement held out to them, but when they do come they buy enough goods at a regular profit to more than make up for the loss which we sustain on the linings."

A further careful examination into the matter and visits to several other stores where sales were being conducted in a similar manner showed that these larger stores drew almost their entire trade through holding out such inducements to the people. The merchants in this larger city make a totally different practice of price cutting from the merchants in the smaller place. The merchants in the latter city sell their goods all around at a reasonably cheap price. They make no very great profit on any line of goods and gain no particular reputation for selling cheaply, for the people naturally expect that every thing should be at a moderately low price, and they are never startled by having any very remarkable bargain offered them. Just the opposite to this, the stores in the larger city make a good round profit on nearly everything they sell except those articles which they hold out as special inducements to buyers.

The people of this city are kept in constant excitement on account of the real sensations which these stores make week after week. They will select some well known and staple article and sell it for probably a half or a third of what it usually costs to make it. On the sales of these goods they, of course, calculate to lose a considerable sum, but they gain the attendance of enormous crowds at their store, and the liberal profits which they make on other goods far more than compensate for the loss on the goods which they hold out to the public. A thought, therefore, presented itself to the mind of the writer as to whether the small city was not making a mistake in its methods of doing business.

The larger city is day after day and year after year gaining a greater reputation as a business center simply because there is not a day in which some store is not practically giving something away to the public. These larger stores handle possibly from 10,000 to 50,000 different objects. Out of this whole number of objects there will be possibly from 10 to 20 which are sold at a loss, but these are at such a manifest loss the people are really surprised and are so pleased at getting these things cheap they overlook the fact that they are more than making up for the loss on other goods which they purchase. This is what may be called progressive merchandising. In the smaller town, if a merchant was getting up a sale of ladies' hosiery, and had, say, three or four different lines which he wished to mark down, he would probably mark each line with a 10 or 15 per cent reduction all around. This reduction, while it would make the goods all very cheap, would probably only draw a few buyers who were really in need of the goods and who knew the real value of the qualities offered. If the same sale was gotten up in the larger city which we have mentioned, the store would probably make only a very slight if any reduction on the majority of ladies' hosiery, but would take one kind and cut the price squarely in two, or perhaps even make it one-third of the usual selling price. For instance, if one line consisted of black hosiery which regularly sold for 35 cents a pair, it is very probable that the store would mark these down to 10 or 15 cents a pair, even though they may have cost as much as $3 a dozen. This kind of a reduction would create some excitement and bring a crowd of people to the store, and while the loss on the one article might be quite heavy the sales of the other goods at the regular price would make the average loss on the whole very much less than would be the case where the store in the smaller city made an all around reduction in price.—Dry Goods Chronicle.

Economy.

Brown—I understand your wife is a great saver, especially on little things.

Jones—Yes, she is. Why, if she can get a 10 cent article that will last her a lifetime at three for a quarter, she always buys a quarter's worth in order to save the difference.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

DARK FOR DURRANT

Miss Cunningham Testifies for the Prosecution.

She Tells of an Interview with Him in Jail and of Damaging Statements He Made—Testimony as to Hallucination and the Effects of Inhaling Illuminating Gas.

San Francisco, Oct. 24.—The prosecution made more holes in Durrant's case yesterday. Miss Carrie Cunningham, the reporter who alleges that she got a statement regarding the body in the belfry from Durrant, was called yesterday. She was questioned about the envelope shown her by Durrant, on which she says was written a request that it should not be opened except on his conviction, but her testimony concerning it was not allowed. Miss Cunningham said that she had interviewed Durrant on Oct. 2, and District Attorney Barnes asked her:

Sticks to the Belfry Story.

"In the course of that interview did he say to you: 'When I was fixing the sunburners I heard a noise and followed it to the belfry and saw her on the second landing. She was murdered on the second landing?'" "Yes, he made that statement to me," replied the witness. She further said she was speaking about Blanche Lamont when he made the statement. Barnes then read from Durrant's testimony, in which he said that such a story had been brought to him and that he had refused to either affirm or deny it, and had told Miss Cunningham that such a story, if published, would get him into trouble, as she had with the "Sweet Pea" girl story, and that he had sworn her to secrecy. "Did anything of the kind take place?" he asked.

No Mention of Sweet Pea Girl.

Miss Cunningham replied: "No mention of the "Sweet Pea Girl" was made at all. I gave a note to Mr. Durrant asking him to please tell me the whole story and I promised I would be a witness for him and tell his story on the stand. He said 'will you promise me not to tell this story?' He said I was not to tell any one without his consent. I told him it was a good newspaper story—that it was a corker, and he said, 'you won't publish it without my consent?' I said I would not. He said to me, 'put up your hand.'"

Said There Was No Blood.

"Did you say to him in an interview you had on the 5th of October 'are you sure it was the second landing where you saw Blanche killed? Is not that a little to one side of the gallery?'" "Excuse me," said the witness, "he did not tell me he saw her killed." Barnes then reframed his question leaving out that portion relating to the killing and closing: "And did Durrant not reply 'no, you can look directly into it.' Did you then say 'oh, yes, it was on the second landing where the blood fell on the covered picture frame.' Did he then reply that there wasn't any blood at all and that the spots had been analyzed and found to be only water. Did such a conversation take place?" "Such a conversation took place. It wasn't exactly as you stated. Those were not quite his words about the blood. He said there was not any blood—not a bit." Miss Cunningham was cross-examined at length, but her testimony was unshaken.

Testimony as to Hallucination.

Dr. K. H. Mayes from the Insane asylum at Stockton gave testimony as to hallucination which showed that the old ladies who said they saw Durrant on the way to church were probably not victims of it. He was also questioned as to the effects of an experience such as that of Durrant's at the sunburners would have on a person. With the measurements about the sunburners and the facilities for ventilation in view he said a man to have worked over the burners two minutes would have become insensible. He also said that gas instead of making a person inhaling it pale, as Durrant was, would flush him. The witness further testified that the removal of a person to the fresh air after having been subjected to gas would not cause a revival in the time it is alleged to have done in Durrant's case.

The Case Nearing the End.

District Attorney Barnes announced at the close of the day's proceedings that he might put on one more witness and would then close his case. Assistant District Attorney Peixoto will begin his opening address to-day. The prospects are good that the case will go to the jury at the end of next week.

FORTS TO PROTECT RAILWAY.

Inhabitants of Remedios Will Aid Gen. Campos.

Madrid, Oct. 24.—A dispatch to Imparcial from Havana says the inhabitants of Remedios have agreed to defray the cost of the erection of five small forts to initiate the plan of Gen. Campos for the protection of the railway between Caibarian and Santo Espiritu.

Rebels Fire a Station.

Havana, Oct. 24.—A band of rebels yesterday attacked and set fire to the station at Hato Nuevo, in the province of Matanzas. Several houses were burned.

SENATOR QUAY IN NEW YORK.

Several Other Big Republican Guns Also in the Metropolis.

New York, Oct. 24.—United States Senator Quay of Pennsylvania arrived at the Fifth Avenue hotel yesterday afternoon. He said that his visit had no particular object. Senator Quay professed to be ignorant of Senator Carter's presence in town, but he thought it not unlikely that he would meet him while here. Russell A. Alger of Michigan, a presidential possibility, is also in town.

Too Late To Run for Senator.

Binghamton, N.Y., Oct. 24.—It has just leaked out that owing to tardiness in filing his certificate of nomination the name of Emanuel Bronner, democratic candidate for senator from the 38th district, will not appear on the ballots.

C., M. & St. P. Earnings.

Chicago, Oct. 24.—The earnings of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad for the third week of October were $862,051, for the same period last year, $699,060; increase, $19,991.

scrofula

Any doctor will tell you that Professor Hare, of Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, is one of the highest authorities in the world on the action of drugs. In his last work, speaking of the treatment of scrofula, he says:

"It is hardly necessary to state that cod-liver oil is the best remedy of all. The oil should be given in emulsion, so prepared as to be palatable."

He also says that the hypophosphites should be combined with the oil.

Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil, with hypophosphites, is precisely such a preparation.

CHAPTER I.

"He has opened his eyes. Look!"

"Put him in the skin again. He will be a strong dog; on the fourth month we will name him."

"For whom?" said Amoraq.

Kadlu's eye rolled round the skin-lined snow house till it came to fourteen-year-old Kotuko sitting on the sleeping bench making a button of walrus ivory. "Name him for me," said Kotuko, with a grin. "I shall need him some day."

Kadlu grinned back till his eyes were almost buried in the fat of his flat cheeks, and nodded to Amoraq while his puppy's fierce mother whined to see her baby wriggling far out of reach in the little sealskin pouch hung above the warmth of the blubber lamp. Kotuko went on with his carving and Kadlu threw a rolled bundle of leather dog-harnesses into a tiny little room that opened from one side of the house; slipped off his heavy deerskin hunting suit, put it into a whalebone net that hung above another lamp and dropped down on the sleeping bench to whittle at a piece of frozen seal meat, till Amoraq, his wife, should bring the regular dinner of boiled meat and blood soup. He had been out since early dawn at the seal holes, eight miles away, on the ice at the edge of the floe, and had come home with three big seals. Half way down the long, low snow passage or tunnel, that led to the inner door of the house, you could hear snappings and yelpings, as the dogs of his sleigh team, released from their day's work, scuffled for warm places.

When the yelpings grew too loud, Kotuko lazily rolled off the sleeping bench, and, picking up a dog whip with an eighteen-inch handle of springy whalebone, and twenty-five feet of heavy plaited thong, he dived into the passage where it sounded as though all the dogs were eating him alive; but that was no more than their regular grace before meals. When he crawled out of the far end of the passage half a dozen furry heads followed him with their eyes as he went to a short gallows of whale jaw bones, from which the dog's meat was hung split off the frozen stuff in big lumps with a broad-headed spear, and stood, his whip in one hand and the meat in the other. Each beast was called by name—the weakest first and woe betide any dog that moved out of his turn, for the tapering lash would shoot out like thonged lightning and flick away an inch or so of hair and hide. Each beast simply growled once, snapped once, choked once over his portion, and hurried back to the protection of the snow passage, while the boy stood on the snow under the blazing northern lights and dealt out justice.

The last to be served was the big black leader of the team, who kept order when they were harnessed, and to him Kotuko gave a double allowance of meat, as well as an extra crack of the whip.

"Ah!" said Kotuko, coiling up the lash. "I have a little one over the lamp that will make a great many howlings. Sarpok! Get in!"

He crawled back over the huddled dogs, dusted the dry snow from his furs with the whalebone beater that Amoraq kept by the door; tapped the skin-lined roof of the house to shake off any icicles that might have fallen from the dome of snow above, and curled up on the bench. The dogs in the passage snored and whined in their sleep, the boy baby in Amoraq's deep fur hood kicked and choked and gurgled, and the mother of the newly named puppy lay at Kotuko's side, her eyes fixed on the bundle of sealskin—warm and safe above the broad, yellow flame of the lamp.

And all this happened far away to the north; beyond Labrador, beyond Hudson's strait, where the great tides throw the ice about, north of Melville peninsula—north even of the narrow Fury and Hecla straits on the north shore of Baffin land, where Bylot's island stands above the ice of Lancaster sound like a pudding bowl wrong side up. North of Lancaster sound there is nothing we know anything about except North Devon and Ellesmere Land; but even there live a few scattered people next door, as it were, to the very pole.

Kadlu was an Inuit—what you call an Esquimau—and his tribe, some fifty persons all told, belonged to the Tununirmiut—"the country lying at the back of something." In the maps that desolate coast is called Navy Board inlet; but the Inuit name is best, because the country lies at the very back of everything in the world. For nine months of the year there is only ice as hard as rock, snow, and gale after gale, with a cold that no one can realize who has never seen the thermometer go down even to zero. For six months of those nine it is dark, and that is what makes it so horrible. For the three months of the summer it only freezes every other day and every night, and then the snow begins to sweep away to the southerly slopes, and a few ground willows put out their wolly buds, a tiny stone crop or so makes believe to blossom; beaches of fine gravel and rounded stones run down to the open sea, and polished bowlders and streaked rocks lift up above the granulated snow. But all that goes away in a few weeks, and the wild winter locks down again on the land; while at sea the torn and powdered ice tears up and down the offing, jamming and ramming, and splitting and hitting, and pounding and grounding, till it all freezes together ten feet thick from the land outward to deep water.

In the winter Kadlu would follow the seals to the edge of the land ice and spear them as they came up to breathe at their blow holes. The seals must have open water to live and catch fish in, and in the deep of winter the ice would sometimes run eighty miles without a break from the nearest land. In the spring he and his people retreated from the thawing floes to the rocky mainland, where they put up tents of skins and snared the sea birds or speared the young seal basking on the beaches. Later, they would go south into Baffin land after the reindeer and to get their year's store of salmon from the hundreds of streams and lakes of the interior, coming back north in September or October for the musk ox hunting and the regular winter sealery. This traveling was done with dog sleighs, twenty and thirty miles a day, or sometimes down the coast in big skin "woman boats", when the dogs and the babies lay among the feet of the rowers, and the women sang songs as they glided from cape to cape over the glassy cold waters. All the luxuries the Tununirmiut knew came from the south—driftwood for sleigh runners, rod iron for harpoon tips, steel knives, tin kettles that cooked fish much better than the old soapstone affairs, flint and steel and even matches, colored ribbons for the women's hair, little cheap mirrors and red cloth for the edging of deerskin dress jackets. Kadlu traded the rich, creamy-twisted narwhal horn and musk ox teeth (these are just as valuable as pearls) to the southern Inuit, and they in turn traded with the whalers and the missionary posts of Exeter and Cumberland sounds, and so the chain went on till a kettle picked up by a ship's cook in the Bhendy bazar might end its days over a blubber lamp somewhere on the cool side of the arctic circle.

Kadlu, being a good hunter, was rich in iron harpoons, snow knives, bird darts and all other things that make life easy up there in the great cold, and he was the head of his tribe, or, as they say, "the man who knows all about it by practice." This did not give him any authority, except now and then he could advise his friends to change their hunting grounds, but Kotuko used it to domineer a little, in the lazy, fat Inuit fashion, over the other boys when they came out at night to play ball in the moonlight or to sing the childs' song to the Aurora Borealis.

But at fourteen an Inuit feels himself a man, and Kotuko was tired of making snares for wild fowl and kit foxes, and most tired of all of helping the women to chew seal and deerskins (that makes them supple as nothing else can) the long day through while the men were out hunting. He wanted to go into the quaggi, the singing house when the hunters gathered there for their mysteries, and the angekok, the sorcerer, frightened them into the most delightful fits after the lamps were put out and you could hear the spirit of the reindeer stamping upon the roof, and when a spear was thrust out into the open black night it came back covered with hot blood. He wanted to throw his big boots into the fire with the tired air of a head of a family, and he wanted to gamble with the hunters when they dropped in of an evening to play a sort of homemade roulette with a tin pot and a nail. There were hundreds of things that he wanted to do, but the grown men laughed at him and said: "Wait till you have been in the buckle, Kotuko. Hunting is not all fat!"

Now that his father had named a puppy for him, things looked brighter. An Inuit does not waste a good dog on his son till the boy knows something of dog driving; and Kotuko was more than sure that he knew more than everything.

If the puppy had not had an iron constitution he would have died from overstuffing and overhandling. Kotuko made him a tiny harness with a trace to it and hauled him all over the house floor, shouting: "Aua! Ja aua! (Go to the right!) Choiachoi! Ja choiachoi! (Go to the left!) "Ohaha!" (Stop). The puppy did not like it at all, but being fished for in this way was pure happiness beside being put to the sleigh for the first time. He just sat down on the snow and played with the sealhide trace that ran from his harness to the pitu, the big thong in the bow of the sleigh. Then the team started and the puppy found the heavy ten-foot sleigh running up his back and dragging him along the snow, while Kotuko laughed till the tears ran down his face. Then there followed days and days of the cruel whip that hisses like the wind over ice, and his companions all bit him because he did not know his work, and the harness chafed him, and he was not allowed to sleep with Kotuko any more, but had to take the coldest place in the passage. It was a sad time for the puppy. The boy learned, too, as fast as the dog; and a dog sleigh is a heart breaking thing to manage. Each beast is harnessed—the weakest nearest to the driver—by his own separate trace, which runs under his left foreleg to the main thong, where it is fastened by a sort of button and loop which can be slipped by a turn of the wrist, thus freeing one dog at a time. This is very necessary, because young dogs often get the trace between their hind legs, where it cuts to the bone. And they one and all will go visiting their friends as they run, jumping in and out among the traces. Then they fight and the result is more mixed than a wet fishing line next morning. A great deal of trouble can be avoided by scientific use of the whip. Every Inuit boy prides himself as being a master of the long lash; but it is easy to flick at a mark on the ground, and difficult to lean forward and catch a shirking dog just behind the shoulders when the sleigh is going at full speed. If you call one dog's name for "visiting" and accidentally lash another the two will fight at once and stop all the others. Again, if you travel with a companion and begin to talk, or by yourself and sing, the dogs will halt, turn round and sit down to hear what you have to say. Kotuko was run away from once or twice by forgetting to block the sleigh when he stopped, and he broke many lashings and ruined a few thongs before he could be trusted with a full team of eight and a light sleigh. Then he felt himself a person of consequence, and on smooth, black ice, with a bold head and a quick elbow, he smoked along over the levels as fast as a pack in full cry. He would go twenty miles to the seal holes, and when he was on his hunting ground he would twitch a trace loose from the pitu and free the big black leader, who was the cleverest dog in the team. As soon as the dog had scented a breathing hole Kotuko would reverse the sleigh, driving a couple of sawed-off antlers that stuck up like perambulator handles from the back rest deep into the snow, so that the team could not get away. Then he would crawl forward inch by inch and wait till the seal came up to breathe. Then he stabbed down swiftly with his spear and running line, and presently would haul his seal up to the lip of the ice while the black leader came up and helped to pull the carcass across the ice to the sleigh. That was the time when the harnessed dogs yelled and fought with excitement, and Kotuko laid the long lash like a red-hot bar across all their faces till the carcass froze stiff. Going home was the heavy work. The loaded sleigh had to be hunted among the rough ice, and the dogs sat down and looked hungrily at the seal instead of pulling. At last they would strike the well-worn sleigh road to the village and toodle kiyi along the ringing ice, heads down and tails up while Kotuko struck up the "Aiyu tivun tai-na tau-na ne-taina," the song of the returning hunter, and voices hailed him from house to house under all that dim, star-litten cold.

When Kotuko, the dog, came to his full growth he enjoyed himself too. He fought his way up the team steadily, fight after fight, till one fine evening over their food he tackled the big black leader (Kotuko, the boy, saw fair play with the whip) and made him second dog of him, as they say. So he was promoted to the long traces and he ran round him and snapping at his heels. He would even, and this for a sleigh dog is the last proof of bravery, he would even stand up to the gaunt Arctic wolf, whom all dogs of the north as a rule fear beyond anything that walks the snow. He and his master—they did not count the team of ordinary dogs as company—hunted together day after day and night after night—fur-wrapped boy and savage, long-haired, narrow-eyed, white-fanged yellow brute. All an Inuit has to do is to get food and skins for himself and his family. The women folk make the skins into clothing and occasionally help in trapping small game; but the bulk of the food, and they eat enormously, must be found by the men. If the supply fails there is no one up there to buy or beg or borrow from. The people must die.

KIDNEYS CURE SICKNESS

Sick Kidneys the Cause of a Hundred Diseases.

How Kidneys Cause Disease by Not Attending to Their Duties—How They Can Cure Diseases by Purifying the Blood—Our Blood Filters—How to Cleanse Them.

Your lungs supply air to your blood.
Your heart pumps it all over your body.
Your kidneys filter it.
You would die if any of these three great organs stopped their work.
But if any one is more important than the others, it is the kidneys.
If your heart is the cause of one disease, your kidneys are the cause of twenty.
Treating the kidneys is a great help in some lung and heart diseases.
But treating your lungs or your heart will never benefit your kidneys.
When you feel dull, ambitionless, dizzy, tired, nervous, have pain in your back, headache, chilly sensations, evil forebodings, puffiness of the eyelids, swelling of the feet and ankles, when you are losing flesh and sleep, you may be sure you have kidney trouble.
As soon as the kidneys fall sick they stop doing their work. They stop filtering the blood.
This is worse than ever.
There is poison in unfiltered blood.
The poison is what causes so-called "blood diseses," such as Rheumatism, Gout, Anæmia, Chlorosis, Neuralgia, Eruptions, etc.
The kidneys cause these diseases.
The kidneys can cure them, if they are themselves first cured.
They can be cured with Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills.
The wonderful action of Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills on the kidneys lies in the great curative powers of the Asparagus plant.
You can test its tonic action on your kidneys by eating a dish of it.
But this action is a thousand times strengthened in Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills.
They contain the active ingredient of Asparagus, extracted by a special process. They are strong. They act instantly.
They give immediate relief.
They cure in a very short time.
But they are perfectly harmless, purely vegetable, and contain nothing injurious to health.
Kidney troubles are dangerous.
Bright's Disease is the worst of them.
Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills will cure Bright's Disease.
They will cure all other kidney troubles.
They tone up and strengthen the sick kidneys. They give them fresh life and strength. They give them energy to begin work again as if they had never been sick.
As soon as the kidneys are well, your otner diseases will begin to go.
Your pains and aches in your limbs, muscles and joints, your headaches, your pale cheeks, your pimples and eruptions will all disappear.
Not because Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills are really attacking each one of these troubles, but because they have cured your kidneys, and your kidneys are beginning again to purify and filter your blood.
If you will try Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills you will find that they will take effect after a few doses. You will feel at once how much good they are doing you, and you will go on until you are cured.
This is a severe test, but Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills will stand it.
They are for sale at all druggists or mailed prepaid on receipt of price, 50 cents per box.
Write for interesting pamphlet "A Filter for Your Blood," mailed free on request. Hobb's Medicine Co., Chicago or San Francisco.

WHERE SWEETS WILL BE SOLD.

But Best of All They Will be Served by Sweet Girls.

The ice-cream and soda water booth at the coming Kirmess for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital bids fair to be one of the most attractive of the many that are being planned by the ladies in charge of the affair. Mrs. Lapsley will be in charge of the booth, with Miss Edith Allen as an able assistant, and these two ladies have been able through the generosity of H. P. Reynolds and Caterer Stephenson to devise a plan by which an ample supply of good things in the soda and ice-cream line will be secured without running the chance of overstocking the booth. The prices will be moderate and the profits sure. Mrs. Lapsley and Miss Allen will be assisted by a large corps of young girls so that no one will have to wait long for his or her sweets.

are doing all the business. Our stock is the largest, prices are the lowest and terms the easiest in the city. Just give it a passing thought that you can get an antique oak bedroom suit, 8 pieces, for $15, $20, $25 and $30, including a woven wire bed spring and a mixed mattress. No house in the city offers such inducements.
And then to think again that you can get tapestry Brussels carpet for 50, 60, and 70 cents a yard, made and laid with paper, which is a saving of 15c per yard. Where is there a house in the city that will offer such bargains?
And then imagine and wonder how we can afford to give away a moquette rug or parlor table with a parlor suit for $20, $30, $40 or $50.
Some of our competitors say that our ads are too much sameness and that this ad. is old. Well, we will admit it, but as long as it does the business and saves the people money we will continue to run it.

POLITICS OF SUNDAY-SCHOOL

REV. H. C. CRONIN WOULD EDUCATE BOYS WHILE THEY ARE BOYS.

Let Him Train the Children and He Cares Not What the Laws Are—End of the Sunday-School Convention—The Officers.

The afternoon session of the Union County Sunday-school Convention was largely attended by Sunday-school workers from all parts of the county.

The opening exercises were in charge of Rev. W. A. L. Jett, pastor of the Reformed Episcopal church of Murray Hill. Miss Jessie Utter, the organist, presided, and D. E. Titsworth led the singing.

Two branches of Sunday-school work was then reported by the County Secretary, Rev. C. S. Converse, of Union. He showed that the county was doing much in Sunday-school work, that there was an increase of interest in all of the departments and that the financial outlook was better. The different schools appeared to be waking up to the importance of the work and the future prospect was gratifying. Of course, there were drawbacks and in some localities and much more could be accomplished, which he hoped would be.

Next came the report of the State Secretary, Rev. E. M. Fergusson. As a speaker Mr. Fergusson is exceedingly interesting. He told those present just what they wanted to know, that is, what is being done throughout the State and he told them even more, what they ought to do. He said that New Jersey stood second to none in the State in Sunday-school work, and other States throughout the Union were seeking points from this State. New Jersey, he also said, had raised $18,756 among one hundred and one schools during the past year. He strongly advised schools giving two per cent toward the State work, and said that $300 was needed from this county this year, and he urged that the work be done this year along more definite lines.

Following this Mrs. Ella D. Pettit, conducted a conference on the subject of primary unions. This work has become a great factor in New Jersey Sunday-schools, and is now being recognized as such.

Miss Nettie Beeching, of Washingtonville, gave a thoroughly interesting talk on the formation of the Plainfield Union, which is now six weeks old and doing efficient work.

Mrs. Powlison, Mrs. Harold Serrell and Miss May Howlett each told in a few words the great benefit the union had been to them.

A large number present promised to go home and at once organize a union.

Perhaps the most interesting and novel portion of the programme was the illustrated talk given by Miss Julia Dimock, of Elizabeth, on "Little Children of Other Lands."

Miss Dimock used a blackboard and sand map. Her talk was chiefly along the lines of foreign missions. In the use of the sand map she illustrated the life of Christ from his birth to the resurrection, in an intensely interesting manner. Minature models of children were shown and bright, short stories were told of each. A small ship was also exhibited upon which were placed flags of all nations. The talk throughout was one of great profit.

State Secretary Rev. E. M. Ferguson followed with a helpful talk on the "Intermediate Department," after which Rev. E. B. Cobb, D. D., pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, of Elizabeth, conducted a consecration service, which closed the afternoon session.

Vice-President, Wm. D. Porter, of Summit, presided at the evening session which was called to order at 7:30. Rev. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of the Trinity Reformed church, had charge of the devotional exercises, which were given twenty minutes. The church choir assisted in the service. Rev. C. S. Converse, chairman of the nominating committee, then presented the following list of officers which were chosen to serve the Association for the coming year: President, Rev. J. A. Owen, Elizabeth; Vice-Presidents, Wm. D. Porter, Summit; D. E. Titsworth, Plainfield; Corresponding Secretary and Treasurer, Rev. C. S. Converse, Union; Recording Secretary; R. W. Woodward, Elizabeth; Member of State Executive Committee, W. D. Murray, Plainfield. Executive Committee, John M. Dudley, Elizabeth; Rev. W. A. L. Jett, Murray Hill; James H. Durand, Rahway; Joseph G. Coleman, Elizabeth; Rev. Wm. Hoppaugh, Springfield; Edward N. Brown, Westfield.

The treasurer, Rev. C. S. Converse, reported that there was a balance of $168.56 in the treasury, and George Cornwall, chairman of the Enrollment Committee, stated that there were one hundred and forty-nine delegates present.

In the absence of Rev. William Hoppaugh, of Springfield, R. W. Woodword took charge of the "Question Box." Many of the delegates sent in questions regarding different branches of Sunday-school work and Mr. Woodword in an able manner answered the queries in the ten minutes alloted to the subject.

Rev. H. C. Cronin, pastor of the Third Presbyterian church of Jersey City, was introduced and made the address of the evening. His subject was "Importance of the Sunday-school to the Church and State." In part, he spoke as follows: The future of our State rests entirely on what our boys and girls make it.

Just now there is a considerable amount of earnestness shown on account of election. You come in contact with a Republican and he will tell you how his party is going to save the State. You meet a Democrat and he will tell you that unless his party is retained in office the State will go to the dogs. The Prohibitionist tells you that if his party gets the control everything will come out all right.

The fact is the desired result will come through neither of the three parties. There are lots of good things told voters before election that never mature after. It's all right when office is at stake. Let me train the children of the people and I care not what your laws are. Children are like clay ready to receive the impression we make on them. Teaching in a Sunday-school is no small thing, as some people think it is. Every good thing this country has today has come through Sunday-school politics. Train your children for Jesus Christ, and it will affect the whole country.

When I was living in the west I secured an annual pass on a railroad simply because I intended organizing Sunday-schools along the road, which was a desirable thing for the company. People will not live long in localities where there are no churches or Sunday-schools. It has been said that Ingersoll objects seriously to the use of the Bible. Why doesn't he go where there is no Bible. The best town in the world is the one where the Bible is freely used. The spirit of Plymouth Rock has placed America where she is today, not her natural beauty or cultured people.

More than half of the boys and girls of New Jersey are not in Sunday-school, and 11,000,000 of them in the United States are the same way. Satan has more boys and girls in his school than the Lord. There is a place in Jersey City where I would not let my daughter go for all the money in the Jersey City banks put together, because there is no religious observance and the Bible is never seen there. Shall we let our boys sow their wild oats and have a good time and then at the age of thirty get up a big revival for the purpose of seeking him and bringing him into the fold, or shall we train him in youth and carefully guard him? This question I leave for you mothers to decide.

The meeting was then brought to a close by the singing of a hymn and the pronouncing of the benediction.

The invitation from the Westfield Congregational church, extended by Edward N. Brown, was accepted and the convention will meet at that place next year.

The following will be of interest, showing the condition of the Plainfield Sunday-schools in the aggregate for the past year:

Number of schools, 18; officers and teachers, 424; scholars, 3,764; average attendance, 2,471; united with church, 153; benevolent contributions, $2,462.32; raised for County and State work, $35.83; total contributed for all purposes, $4,552.70.

In the county there are 17,218 scholare and 8,162 officers and teachers. $18,756.08 has been contributed for all purposes.

Experience of Earning Money.

Thursday, October 31st, at the W. C. T. U. rooms, will be held an experience meeting, when members and friends will relate their experience in earning a dollar. An interesting programme has been arranged. All are invited to be present.

An Industrial Fair.

Great preparations are being made for an industrial fair to be held at Hope chapel the third week in February. It promises to be the greatest affair ever held in the chapel.

Every mother should know that croup can be prevented. The first symptom of true croup is hoarseness. This is followed by a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given freely as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the cough has developed it will prevent the attack. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues.

MRS. HALL ON SCHOOL SUFFRAGE.

A Paper Read at the State Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of this city, talked on the topic of "School Suffrage" at the annual meeting of the State Federation of Women's Clubs at Newark yesterday, and handled it in a manner that proved beyond dispute the wisdom of the choice which gave it to her. After reciting the history of the Suffrage act of 1887, which permitted women to vote at school elections, and was afterward declared unconstitutional, Mrs. Hall stated that in her opinion women were not only qualified, but entitled to vote for measures in which they were so greatly interested. A petition to re-establish the right of suffrage was presented to the last Legislature, and through the efforts of a hard-working coterie of noble women the tardy law-makers passed it almost at the hour when adjournment was taken. Similar efforts would be in order at the next meeting of the Legislature, and when the question is finally presented to the people for ratification the women of New Jersey should exert all their influence to secure its final adoption.

WATS DE MATTER.

Two Cullid Ladies Just Have a Regular Tug-of-War.

At five o'clock yesterday afternoon fully two hundred people were attracted to Craig place by de circus widout a big brass ban, and nuffin to pay fer a front seat, an de partic'lar object ob attractshun whar two cullid ladies, Sarah and Carrie, in a genuine tug-of-war. Sarah wid smiles all over her face held the winning hand. De cause ob de circus was dat Carrie owed Sarah three dollars which she could not pay at present, but it seems she had money to buy dress goods, so Sarah was bound to have de money or de dress. De audience was very much amused as Carrie would say, "I 'clare Sarah I'se gwine to have dat dress or die right yare in de street." So determined was Sarah, dat she would have let her die before she would let go, but a good cullid gentlemen came along and advised Sarah to let Carrie have de dress, which she did but it will probably end in de courts. W'ats de matter, dat's w'ats de matter.

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chambertain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family has need of it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once and you will never regret it. For sale by Reynold's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

TICKLED THEIR RISIBILITIES.

HOPE CHAPEL PEOPLE ENTERTAINED BY A FUNNY MAN.

Emil Closs Was the Principal Entertainer, Though Several Local Ones Added Much to the Pleasure of the Evening.

Hope chapel was filled with an enthusiastic audience last evening who turned out to hear Emil Closs, in his humorous selections, and such home talent as was present. The crowd came to laugh and they did laugh until their sides ached. Closs' great specialty is pantomime, and some of his representations took the house by storm.

The programme opened with a piano solo by Miss Firstbrook, after which Rev. Mr. Newell made a few remarks on the Young Men's League and the entertainer that was to come. Then Mr. Closs was introduced and kept his hearers in roars of laughter. Interspersed between his different selections were a violin solo by Hugh Gray, piano solos by Miss Helen Hall, a piccolo solo by Thomas Randall, vocal solos by Mrs. W. A. Westphal, and a recitation by George Leighs. The numbers were all excellently rendered and called forth loud applause.

The last of the first part consisted of a few remarks by Councilman W. A. Westphal which, on the programme, was headed "Comicalities." His sayings were bright and witty and some of his original jokes caused much laughter and applause. He made a few witty remarks about local characters and then came to the old subject of the mother-in-law. Politics and finances were spoken of and he ended with a rediculous story of a trip through France.

The entertainment was very successful from every point of view and the promoters estimate a clear profit of about $50. The energetic committee that arranged the programme, consisted of Arthur Leland, George E. Firstbrook, Benjamin E. Eddy.

The members of the Ladies Society, of St. Peter's German Lutheran church, of Grove street, entertained a number of their friends last evening, when they celebrated their third anniversary at the home of Mr. and G. Sutterlin, of Greenbrook road. The president of the society, Mrs. Charles Smith, made a short address, which was followed by a few remarks from the treasurer, Mrs. Scheidecker, and Mrs. G. Sutterlin, secretary.

After the completion of business, a generous collation was served, which was followed by choice selections of vocal and instrumental music.

The pleasant event came to a close about midnight.

Mr. Williams Declines to Run.

PUNCHED ANNIE'S JAW.

Then Her Escort Objected and Carter Started to Lick Him.

The promoters of the dance of the Victor Wheelmen at T. A. B. Hall last evening almost had a fight on their hands, but they acted with promptness and fired the offending colored man out doors, when Officer Vanderweg saw that he had a lodging place for the night. Everyone that saw the scrap had a different story to tell, but the one told by those who took part was that Walter Carter and Annie Lee had words over something and Carter struck Annie in the jaw so that, as she told Sergeant Kiely this morning, she knew it. George Potter was with her and told Carter not to strike her, so Carter punched him and a lively fracas followed. Then Captain Israel Jones of the club appeared on the scene with his assistants and assisted them to the door.

Big Cut in Meat Prices.

The greatest cut ever known in Plainfield in the prices of meat are those mentioned in the advertisement of the Eagle meat market on the fifth page of today's Press. Mr. Arnold, the proprietor of this market, has been in business in Plainfield for a number of years and people know him only as a merchant who deals in nothing but first-quality meat, and when ho once acquires a customer he generally retains them by his fair and honest dealing. A comparison of his prices with other dealers show that he is the lowest by about ten per cent.

House Quarantined.

Anna, the eight-year-old daughter of William Bodine, of Pearl street, is ill with scarlet fever. The house has been quarantined and Dr. Tomlinson is inattendance.

"Many of the citizens of Rainsville, Indiana, are never without a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house," says Jacob Brown, the leading merchant of the place. This Remedy has proven of so much value for colds and croup in children that few mothers who know its worth are willing to be without it. For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, corner of Park and North avenues.

LEARNING TO BE IN ORDER.

PROGRESSIVE WOMEN STUDYING PARLIAMENTARY RULES.

In Their Meetings the Members Will Alternately Take Turns in Occupying the Presiding Officer's Chair—The Questions.

One of the most unique and interesting of class drills was that of the Parliamentary Club held yesterday morning in the Y. M. C. A. building. After a short study on the origin and first use of the word "parliament," embodying a description of the English House of Lords and Commons; a synopsis of the life of Lieut. Roberts, whose rules of order the club use for reference; and mention of other authors on parliamentary laws, whose works are of note in the United States, the class was cross-questioned as to the duties of a chairman, the four occasions which gave him power to vote, and the proper methods of adopting a constitution and by-laws. The question box was a feature of great amusement, giving evidence that either the members themselves were determined to solve the simplest problems of parliamentary law or else their husbands and brothers, with little time after business hours for such study, desired to get useful information on the subjects in this easy way.

The Vice-President who, in the absence of the President, conducted the class drills, then introduced the members whose privilege it was to preside during the transaction of business.

Amid the cheering Chautauqua salute Mrs. S. H. Cahoone took the chair and assured the members that the honor of being first on the list was due entirely to the alphabetical order of things, and not of rank in the study of parliamentary laws. She presented the club with a gavel of marvelous size and exquisite beauty, decorated with the National colors.

The club wish to call attention to article 3 of the constitution, "Any woman may become a member whose name is presented to the club by the executive committee. She shall also endorse the constitution and pay the initiation fee."

The general officers constitute the executive committee and the secretary will promptly notify any who are elected members after their names are brought before the club, and of the date of the next meeting to which they will be most cordially welcomed.

Only non-residents will be admitted as visitors to the class drills.

Emulating Dan McGinty.

While crossing the dam over Tier's Lake yesterday Dan VanWinkle tried to emulate the renowned Dan McGinty by going to the bottom of the sea. The difference, though, between the Plainfield Dan and the Dan of the song is that the former saved himself from going way down by catching hold of a projecting board. However, he was obliged to change his suit of clothes.

Went On a Raid.

The famous cow belonging to Mrs. John Burke, of Plainfield avenue, broke loose Tuesday evening after a long period of captivity. A DAY OF WRECKS

Several Lives Lost in Railroad Accidents.

Two Killed and Nine Injured at Trimmers Rock, Pa.—Fatal Rear-End Collision at Hyde Park, Mass.—An Engine Upsets with Death as a Result.

Newport, Pa., Oct. 25.—The breaking of an axle of a car of an eastbound freight train on the Pennsylvania railroad at Trimmers Rock, about two miles east of here yesterday, threw several cars of the freight directly across the passenger track and wrecked the westbound mail train from Philadelphia for Pittsburg that was speeding by at the time, causing the death of two men and the injury of nine others. The dead are: Daniel Wolfkill, engineer of the mail train, and Joseph U. Haines, fireman of mail train. Wolfkill and Haines both resided in Altoona, Pa.

Physicians Kept Busy.

A number of physicians and the Harrisburg fire department hurried to the scene on a special train. In the meantime a wrecking crew had arrived and the two mail cars that had not been broken with the rest of the train, were pulled away from the burning wreck. When the relief train from Harrisburg arrived, the fireman had but little to do, as the four mail cars and their contents were nearly consumed, but the physicians were kept busy attending to the injured, who were hurriedly sent to Harrisburg. The wrecking crews at once started to clear the track and within a few hours trains were running again as usual past the scene of the wreck.

Like a Rat in a Trap.

Down in the canal the bodies of Engineer Wolfkill and Fireman Haines were buried beneath the weight of the massive engine. The wrecking crews worked unceasingly and finally came to the body of Wolfkill. The body was only slightly bruised and the man had evidently been drowned like a rat in a trap in the waters of the canal.

Haines' Body Found.

It was not until last night that the body of Fireman Haines was found. One leg was cut off and the body was otherwise badly mutilated. Both bodies were prepared for burial and taken to Harrisburg.

Mail Matter Destroyed.

Both men were married and leave a widow and two children each. Wolfkill was one of the oldest engineers in the employ of the railroad company, while Haines was but 27 years old. With the exception of a few sacks directed to Louisville, Ky., St. Louis, Oregon and one or two other points the mail in the wrecked cars was destroyed. The sacks saved were in the end of the car that fell into the canal, but the letters in them are badly damaged from water.

REAR-END COLLISION.

Two Persons Killed and Others Hurt at Hyde Park, Mass.

Hyde Park, Mass., Oct. 25.—A tailend collision between the Sharon and Providence trains, by which two persons were killed, three or four seriously injured and some twenty others more or less bruised, occurred directly in front of the Hyde Park station of the Providence division of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad last night. After the accident occurred all the physicians in town were summoned as quickly as it was possible to reach them, and the depot was temporarily converted into a hospital and everything done to relieve the sufferings of the injured and make them as comfortable as possible. Two persons, one a brakeman on the Sharon train, the other a woman, were found to be probably fatally hurt, being terribly injured about the head and body. No other train hands, so far as known, were injured. The passengers were mostly men, and their injuries for the most part were in the nature of bruises or contusions, caused by being thrown to the floor or against the seats by the force of the collision. Congressman Elijah A. Morse was a passenger on the Sharon train. He received some slight cuts on his fingers but otherwise was uninjured. He occupied one of the rear seats in the train and received a thorough shaking up, his escape from death being very narrow.

Saratoga, N. Y., Oct. 25.—R. They were out riding and Mr. Rourke attempted to cross in front of the engine despite the warning of the flagman. The carriage was hurled fifty feet through the air. Mr. Rourke's skull was crushed and his wife was injured about the head and chest. Her spine is also affected and her life is despaired of.

The Engine Upset.

Mifflingtown, Pa., Oct. 25.—The upsetting of an engine on the Tuscarora Valley railroad at East Waterford resulted in the death of Machinist Jerome Noble of the road, who was crushed, and the serious scalding of William Pannebaker, an engineer. The latter's life is despaired of.

A parade through the streets followed and a breakfast at the Charleston hotel. The visitors were then taken on a steamer to see the forts in the harbor and the phosphate works. There was a banquet at 6 p. m. last evening and at 8 o'clock the governor and his escort marched to the depot, followed by an immense crowd of the local soldiers and civilians and started for Richmond. The president led the party after alighting from the train through the Pennsylvania railroad station to the sidewalk, where the carriages were awaiting to convey them to their homes. WORKING GIRLS.

WILLING, ABLE, AND AMBITIOUS,

But Often Held Back by an Illness They do not Understand.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

A young and intelligent working-girl of Brooklyn, N.Y., graphically pictures the working-girl's life.

Day in and day out, month after month, she toils. She is the bread-winner of the family, and must work that others may live. Rain or shine, warm or cold, she must get to her place of employment sharp on time. With the sunshine and gladness all crushed out of her life, she goes on until she falls.

Oh! this pictures only one of thousands. Some work in cramped positions, but the great majority of working girls, so to speak, live on their feet.

Among the latter the symptoms of female diseases are early manifested by weak and aching backs, pains in the lower limbs and lower part of the stomach. The "monthly period" is irregular: with some profuse, with others a cessation. The sure symptom, leucorrhœa, is present, and with faintness, weakness, loss of appetite and sleep. She may be sure that a womb trouble assails her. She knows not where to go for aid.

Miss Mary Smylie, of 2078 Susquehanna Avenue, Kensington, Philadelphia, Pa., urges her fellow working-girls to have faith in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She says: "I am a working-girl, and must stand eleven hours every day. I have suffered terribly from painful menstruation and kidney trouble; and my head was so dizzy I could hardly see. I began to take your Lydia Pinkham's Compound some time ago. It was highly recommended to me by a friend. Now I feel like a different girl: no more aches and pains. I am praising it to every one. Our Druggist sells lots of it.

THE REPUBLIC OF CUBA

New Government Established by the Rebels.

Formally Organized on Sept. 19. Salvador Betancourt Is Chosen President—News Received with Great Joy by the Army Under the Command of Gen. Maceo.

New York, Oct. 25.—The Cuban delegation in this city has received a letter from Major General Jose Maceo, dated at Guantanamo Oct. 5, in which he advises the delegation that he has received official dispatches from General-in-Chief Gomez, informing him that the general government of the Republic of Cuba was formally organized September 19 in Camaguey. General Maceo adds that the news has been received with great joy by the division of the army under his command.

The New Government.

The officers of the government are: President of the republic, Salvador Cisneros Betancourt of Puerto Principe; vice-president of the republic, Barcloma Maso of Manzanillo; secretary of war, Carlos Roloff of Santa Clara; secretary of foreign affairs, Rafael Portuondo y Tamayo of Santiago de Cuba; secretary of the treasury, Severo Pena, of Sancti Spiritus; secretary of the interior, Santiago Canizare of Remedios; general-in-chief, Maximo Gomez; lieutenant general, Antonio Maceo.

THE CUBAN REBELLION.

Lieut. Gallego and His Crew Soon To Be Tried for Cowardice.

Havana, Oct. 25.—Lieut. Gallego, who surrendered the small dispatch boat Dos de Mayo at Aserradero bay, near Santiago de Cuba, recently to a number of insurgents who attacked the patrolling craft unexpectedly, has arrived here with the crew of his vessel, consisting of twelve men. They are under arrest and will be tried by court martial. Five telegraph offices will soon be opened between Cienfuegos and Santiago de Cuba. They will be of great importance in conducting the military movements in that region. Confirmation has been received here of the report that a body of men was seen lately around Camarioca, on the Canimer river, province of Matanzas. They are supposed to have belonged to a recently landed filibustering expedition, but no details regarding them have as yet been made public. The insurgents have thrown a train from the track in Placetas.

HIS DRAMATIC ACT.

An American Kills Himself on a Paris Hotel's Steps.

Paris, Oct. 25.—Francis Hinton, a well-known and wealthy iron man of Milwaukee, has committed suicide in a dramatic manner here. His act is attributed to mental depression. He was standing on the steps of the hotel at which he was sojourning, when he suddenly drew a revolver from his hip pocket and without saying a word fired a bullet into his brain. For a time the horrified spectators were unable to do anything. When the police and a physician reached the scene the latter pronounced Mr. Hinton dead, and the body was taken to the police office in rue d'Anjou. A bundle of banknotes was found in one of the pockets of the deceased's coat.

SHOT A BURGLAR.

Mr. Bullinger of Hackensack Hit His Man, But He Escaped.

Hackensack, N. J., Oct. 25.—Eugene Bullinger, who lives at the junction of Myer and Park streets, this place, was awakened from his sleep early in the morning by the moving of a window sash in his house. Picking up his revolver, which was lying near at hand, he ran down the stairs just in time to see a man about to enter the open window. Mr. Bullinger fired and the burglar dropped to the ground. He escaped, but investigation showed that he had left a trail of blood behind him. Mr. Bullinger thinks that he wounded the man in the shoulder.

JAMES W. WILCOX DEAD.

For Years He Manufactured U. S. Bank Note Paper.

Philadelphia, Oct. 25.—James M. Wilcox, who for many years was engaged in the manufacture of United States bank note paper at Glen Mills, Pa., in which business he introduced many original and useful ideas, and who later was the president of the American Cement company, is dead at his home at Haverford, Pa.

B. R. TATE DEAD.

Collector of New London During Cleveland's First Term.

New London, Conn., Oct. 25.—Benjamin R. Tate, 58 years old, is dead. He was a prominent merchant and collector of the port during Cleveland's first term.

Thrown from His Wagon and Killed

Gloversville, N. Y., Oct. 25.—Thomas F. Shibley, a prominent citizen of this city, was thrown from his wagon by his team running away while coming down Bleecker mountain, north of this city, and instantly killed.

Burglars at Stamford.

Stamford, Conn., Oct. 25.—The residence of Uriah Cummings on South street was entered last night by second-story thieves. Jewelry and valuables to the extent of $800 were taken. No clues have yet been obtained.

Chicago Football Team.

Chicago, Oct. 25.—The Chicago Athletic association football team started on its eastern trip yesterday. The C. A. A. will play its first game in the east with the Newton Athletic club at Boston to-morrow.

Beale's Resignation Accepted.

Washington, Oct. 25.—The president has accepted the resignation of Lieut. Joseph Beale, U. S. N. This makes the third resignation of a naval officer that has taken place within the past few weeks.

Secretary Olney in Washington.

Washington, Oct. 25.—Secretary Olney has returned to this city from Boston.

PAGUE COURT MARTIAL.

Plea of Insanity Will Be Urged in Mitigation.

Chicago, Oct. 25.—The court martial appointed to try the charges against Lieutenant S. S. Pague held its third sitting at Fort Sheridan yesterday, and the examination of the first witness called for the defense indicated that the plea of insanity would be urged in mitigation of the offense. Captain Norton Strong, assistant surgeon at the post, was in medical charge of the accused just prior to the shooting, and testified that in his opinion the lieutenant was not responsible for his actions. On the morning of the affair he was quiet and rational, but seemed to possess no will power or sense of personal responsibility. He regarded this condition as the result of acute alcoholic mania. Post Surgeon Girard stated that about three weeks before the trouble he had been attending the accused and had recommended that he take a course of treatment for alcoholism either at the post or elsewhere. Eleven more witnesses will be called for the defense and the case will probably be concluded early next week.

JAPAN PROTESTS.

Does Not Like Russia's Dictation Regarding Korea.

London, Oct. 25.—A special dispatch from Shanghai says that a Russian squadron of fifteen ships has left Vladivostock for Chemulpo and Fusan. The Japanese fleet in Formosan waters, it is stated, has been recalled, and it is announced that several British warships have been ordered to sail for Korea. Japan's reply to the demand of Russia that the former evacuate Korea is said to be couched in pacific but firm language and protests against the undue dictation of Russia in Korean affairs. It is regarded at Shanghai as certain that Russia will permanently occupy Fusan. The Shanghai dispatch also says that the situation is grave and that preparations for the expected struggle are visible on all sides.

SONS OF TEMPERANCE.

Connecticut Grand Lodge Elects Officers at Bridgeport.

Bridgeport, Conn., Oct. 25.—The grand lodge Sons of Temperance held its annual session in this city yesterday and elected grand officers as follows: Grand worthy patriarch, Dwight M. Cuttle, New Haven; worthy assistant, Miss Nettie A. Wells, Bridgeport; scribe, Mrs. A. E. Leeds, New Haven; treasurer, C. M. Hart, New Haven; chaplain, Rev. A. V. Abbott, Westhaven; conductor, Miss Annie Reiman, Hartford; sentinel, Miss Adeline Saunders, New Haven; superintendent of loyal crusaders, Miss Imra Welde, New Haven. The next annual session will be held at Westhaven, and the semi-annual at New Canaan. There are thirty-three divisions in Connecticut with a membership of 2,004.

ST. JOHNS SMUGGLERS.

Determined Effort Being Made To Quash the Indictments.

St. Johns, N. F., Oct. 25.—Popular suspicion is now practically confirmed that a determined attempt is being made to quash the smuggling prosecutions. It is feared the attempt will be successful, despite the taunts and demands of all sections of the press. No further arrests have been made since Saturday. It is announced to-day on reliable authority that a postponement of all the cases has been decided upon for another fortnight, after which they will be resumed and vigorously pushed forward. This is regarded as a subterfuge to enable the convenient dropping of them.

COURTSHIP UNDER DIFFICULTY

Threats Failing To Keep Cheney from His Fiance, He Was Shot.

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 25.—Fred Cheney, a prominent young man of Fairport, was shot at from ambush last night while on his way to call on his fiance, Miss Gage. The ball grazed his forehead and passed through his hat. He had been accosted on two previous times on his way to the house and ordered not to repeat his visits, but on refusing to do so was promptly knocked down. Who his assailant was is not known nor is any motive known for the mysterious assault.

Massillon, O., Oct. 25.—The miners of this district who have been on strike have been returning to work for several days without the consent of their organization leaders and the strike is practically ended. Work has been resumed at the same terms as those at which the miners of the state at large have been at work.

Ex-Senator Fred Marsh says that Union county will give McGill 300 majority.

Judge Magie has put a legal definition on the condition of a man who is drunk by terming it "voluntary illness."

Republican papers are taking great delight in circulating the report that Augustus Cutler refuses to support Chancellor McGill. But a far different aspect was shown last night when Mr. Cutler was chairman of a ratification meeting at Morristown and eulogized the Democratic ticket in the highest terms.

The tabulation of the New Jersey state census of 1895, which was taken last May, will not be completed before December. One of the noticeable things which the census will show will be the geat decrease in the proportion the Irish and the German population will bear to the total foreign-born population. When the law was first passed providing for a State census, it was decided that German and Irish were the only foreign elements that need be separately classified, there were by comparison so few of the other nationalities. But the influx of immigration from other countries during the past few years will have the effect, particularly in the large cities, of bringing the total of this "scattering" column up to a pretty high figure. In the city of Newark the number of persons who will appear in the column of "foreign-born exclusive of German and Irish" will be much larger than the number of Irish and almost as large as the number of Germans.

District Epworth League Meeting.

At the meeting of the Elizabeth District Epworth League held yesterday in Somerville, Miss Leora Wenzel, of this city, read a paper on "Practical Work in Mercy and Help." "Personal Testimony in Devotional Meetings" was discussed by Walter McGee, and there was a cornet solo by Raymond McGee, and a vocal solo by L. S. Bond, all of this city. Steele, of Somerville, is counsel for Bowers.

UNIVERSITY EXTENSION.

Thoughtful People Consider Arranging a Series of Lectures.

The public meeting in the parish house of the Grace P. E. church last evening, called to consider the University Extension lectures, was held and the subject discussed. The general opinion was in favor of a course of lectures by Prof. Riggs, of Rutgers College, open to the public and to which all the public should be invited with only a small charge for admission. Another meeting will be held Tuesday evening.

It may not be generally known what University extension is. Following the examples set by the Universities of England, Rutgers' college, New Brunswick, inaugurated a similar system which has been gradually extended until now there are no less than thirty courses of lectures which the professors are prepared to deliver in any city in which even a few appreciative people can be found. These lectures are upon living questions that cannot fail to interest thoughtful persons.

THE COMSTOCK LODE.

STORY OF ITS DISCOVERY BY ONE OF THE SEVEN LUCKY MEN.

Thought They Had Struck a Bed of Iron Ore, and a Scheme Was Concocted to Make Them Continue So to Think—Some Were Skinned, but Others Held On.

"I was one of the seven men who discovered the Comstock lode," said John E. Clarke, once familiarly known as "Ophir Jack." "Joe Winters and I were working near Forest City, making small returns, when I heard of placers over near Gold Hill, and I gave Joe money and told him to go there and buy a claim. He bought an interest for $150. There were seven in the party—old man Comstock, Pat McLaughlin, Pete Reilly, Emanuel Penrod or Manny, as we called him; Kaintuck Osborne, Joe Winters and myself. We had no tents and slept in our blankets under a big spruce tree. We were making anywhere from $1 to $6 a day where we were working. Going back and forward between the spruce tree and our rockers, we for a long time passed over what was afterward the Ophir mine without paying any attention to the bright sand at that point. One day Comstock, in passing, said:

"'Boys, this sand looks very bright.' And he picked up a double handful and carried it to one of our rockers.

"Just as soon as the water struck it we saw that what we had for weeks been carelessly walking over was the richest sand we had ever seen or heard of. You may be sure we were not long in changing the base of our operations. We constructed an ordinary V shaped chute to carry water from the spring about a quarter of a mile away and went to work. The 'bulge' of soft, disintegrated ore was about 12 feet across and nearly circular. Its edges were clearly defined and went down with a slight dip to the east. The dirt was extraordinarily rich, some of it running as high as $6 an ounce. Our washings were measured almost literally by the bucketful. We divided our wealth by weighing it on a common set of grocers' scales. It was not long until our rich strike became generally known and miners came from all directions during the following winter, and the town of Virginia City, named after a drunken, worthless miner called Virginny, rapidly sprang into existence.

"But no one found dirt like that we struck. The great crowd skipped out as lively as it came when the Piutes went on the warpath in the spring of 1860. I feel like laughing every time I think of that event. Major Ormsby, who kept a store and the overland stage station, when he heard about the Indians, said, 'Whenever they see me, boys, those Indians will quiet down.' He got together all the miners who had guns and pistols and marched for the seat of war. By the time they found the Indians the men had shot away all of their ammunition at rabbits and birds, and when the Piutes showed up the miners, instead of seeing the Indians running, skipped themselves, and most of them didn't stop until they were back in California.

"We were not disturbed, however, and soon afterward at the depth of about nine feet our mine 'petered out.' The soft, easily washed dirt and sand stopped short on a bed of hard, dark gray rock of ore that we all thought was iron ore. Then the discovery of the real Comstock lode was made under somewhat extraordinary circumstances. It must be remembered that in those days we did not know much about mining and did not have any facilities at the camp for testing. We were not exactly down in the mouth about the mine running out, for we had each made a handsome stake; but, while we all thought we had run into a bed of iron, we had sense enough to reflect that if it was iron, where did the pocket we had worked come from? I insisted that we have the stuff assayed. I hired a train of pack horses, and after digging about 2,500 pounds of the rock I placed it in charge of a man named Judge Walsh and gave him money to take the rock to San Francisco and have it assayed.

"While he was gone we did nothing. In about three weeks Judge returned, and in a very matter of fact way confirmed our original opinion that we had struck iron ore.

"'There's a little gold in it,' he said, 'and a little silver, but it don't amount to anything and isn't worth working.'

"The fact was, as we afterward learned, that the ore Walsh took with him assayed over $13,000 to the ton, and the 2,500 pounds produced a total of over $16,250. The men in Frisco who heard about it were so astonished that they could scarcely believe the report. A scheme was concocted to depreciate the 'find' and get control of it. I never could discover all of the details, but Judge Walsh was to report to us that our mine was of no account, and the others in the plot were to quietly buy up the claim. The ore was stored in Davidson's bank, and a suit in replevin had afterward to be brought to get it.

"While we all had no reason to doubt the truth of Walsh's report, the fact that he brought no certificate of the assay with him caused some talk, but in those days we were careless. In a few days two mud wagon loads of men came, and they quietly began trying to buy out our interests. Joe Winters and I had a sixth between us. In a short time McLaughlin sold his one-sixth for $5,000, and Comstock, Penrod and Osborne for about the same amount. They offered Reilly $10,000 for his one-sixth, and when he, after consideration, refused, they increased the offer to $20,000. He didn't take that, either, and I think he afterward got something like $40,000 in all.

"Winters got rather nervous and wanted to sell, but I told him it looked very suspicious for those men to be so anxious to buy the mine so soon after Judge Walsh had come back. We refused to sell. When they found they could not get our sixth, they began developments. Some one called it the Ophir, and the mine ever after has gone by that name. It paid dividends from the very start. The vein was about 6 feet wide, and for 300 feet the ore continued to maintain its almost unexampled richness. I notice by the last report that a total of $4,514,240 in dividends has been paid."—San Francisco Chronicle.

Hat and Cap Riots.

The "Hat and Cap riots" were political difficulties in Sweden during the reign of Adolph Frederick. They began in 1720 and ended about 1771. The Hats or Chapeaus were the French party, who wished to modernize the country by adopting the ideas, manners, customs, political and military usages of southern Europe.

She Never Thought of That.

"Why, Jeanne, however came you to marry that man? You are 18 and he is 36, just double your age. When you are 40, he'll be an old fellow of 80."

WANTS DURRANT TO DIE

Great Closing Effort of the Prosecution.

Scathing Arraignment of the Prisoner—Dissecting the Evidence. District Attorney Peixotto Asks for a Verdict of Murder in the First Degree.

San Francisco, Oct. 25.—Both sides in the Durrant case closed yesterday without introducing any more testimony of importance and Assistant District Attorney Peixotto immediately began the opening address to the jury. The address, which occupied five hours in the delivery, was able and covered the case in all its details. It consisted in part of a scathing arraignment of the defendant which moved him and his mother for the first time since the trial began.

Dissecting the Evidence.

Counsel took up the evidence and dissected it. He began with reference to Blanche Lamont, her character and habits. He referred to the fact that she attended school on Powell street on the afternoon of April 3, and that a man supposed to be Durrant was seen waiting outside of the school house for her and afterwards escorted her thence. He then said he would take the girl in the company of the defendant from the school house where he was seen lying as it were in wait for her on that journey from which she never returned. She had been seen to get on the car by a schoolmate who knew her well, and been seen by the two other schoolmates in the defendant's company on the car.

Seen To Enter the Church.

Then trace of the two was lost until Mrs. Crezatt, who knew Durrant well, saw him with the girl on a car in the vicinity of the church where the murder was committed. There the defendant had alighted from the car with the girl. He had been seen by two other witnesses about the same time going toward the church with a young lady, and one of these witnesses, Mrs. Leak, had seen them enter the church. Then he disappeared from mortal sight and took the girl into the church from which she never again emerged alive. He took her to the belfry and there murdered her.

Finding of the Body.

He described the finding of the body laid out in the tower, nude and with blocks about it in the manner of dissecting room practice to which the defendant had been used, and applied a parallel in the case of a female nurse in England who was convicted of a murder, the body having been found in a field laid out in the way she had been used to laying out dead bodies. The presence of the body in the church showed that the girl was in the church at the time of the murder. She could not have been killed elsewhere and the body taken thither. Who was in the church at that time? George King and Theodore Durrant.

Narrowed Down to Two Men.

Besides these two there were but the pastor and the janitor who had keys to the church and access to it at all times. It then narrowed down to King and Durrant. An investigation showed that King could not have been the murderer. King was on the first floor of the church but a few minutes, playing a piano. Where was Durrant?

Asks for the Death Penalty.

Counsel then went over the testimony again, summing it all up and showing, as he hoped, to the satisfaction of the jury that the murderer of Blanche Lamont was the man on trial for it. He asked them to find for murder in the first degree with the death penalty.

Address of the Defense To-day.

At the close of the address Gen. Dickinson of the counsel for the defense presented an affidavit as to the continued illness of Attorney Deuprey of the defense and asking for a continuance till Monday which was denied. Dickinson will to-day make the address for the defense.

CHAPTER II.

An Inuit does not think of these chances till he is forced to. Kadlu, Kotuko, Amoraq and the boy baby, who kicked about in Amoraq's fur hood and chewed pieces of blubber all day, were as happy together as any family in the world. They came of a very gentle race—an Inuit seldom loses his temper and almost never strikes a child who did not know exactly what telling a lie meant, still less how to steal. They were content to drag their living out of the heart of the bitter, hopeless cold; to smile oily smiles and tell queer ghost and fairy tales of evenings; and eat till they could eat no more, and sing the endless woman's song: "Amna aya, aya amnah ah! ah!" through the long, lamp-lighted days as they mended their clothes and their hunting gear.

THE OLD WOMAN TOLD GHOST STORIES

But one terrible winter everything betrayed them. The Tununirmiut returned from the yearly salmon fishing and made their houses on the early ice to the north of Bellot's island ready to go after the seal as soon as the sea froze. But it was an early and savage autumn. All through September there were continuous gales that broke up the smooth seal ice where it was only four or five feet thick and forced it inland and piled a great barrier some thirty miles broad of lumped and ragged and needly ice over which it was impossible to draw the sleighs. The edge of the floe off which the seal were used to fish in winter lay perhaps twenty miles beyond this barrier and out of reach of the Tununirmiut. Even so, they might have managed to scrape through the winter on their stock of frozen salmon and stored blubber and what the traps gave them, but in December one of their hunters came across a tupik, a skin tent, of three women and a girl nearly dead whose men had come down from the far north and been crushed in their kajaks (their little skin hunting boats) while they were out after the long-horned narwhal. Kadlu, of course, could only distribute the women among the huts of the winter village, for no Inuit would dare refuse a meal to a stranger. He never knows when his own time may come to beg. Amoraq took the girl, who was about fourteen, into her own house as a sort of servant. From the cut of her sharp-pointed hood and the long diamond pattern of her white deerskin leggings, they supposed she came from Ellesmere land. She had never seen tin cooking pots or wooden-shod sleighs before; but Kotuko, the boy, and Kotuko, the dog, were rather fond of her.

Then all the foxes went south; and even the wolverine, the growling, blunt-headed little thief of the snow, did not take the trouble to follow the line of empty traps that Kotuko set. The tribe lost a couple of their best hunters, who were badly crippled in a fight with a musk ox, and that threw more work on the others. Kotuko went out, day after day, with a light hunting sleigh and six or seven of the strongest dogs, looking till his eyes ached for some patch of clear ice where a seal might perhaps have scratched a breathing hole. Kotuko, the dog, ranged far and wide, and in the dead stillness of the ice fields Kotuko, the boy, could hear his half-choked whine of excitement above a seal hole three miles away as plainly as though he were at his elbow. When the dog found a hole the boy would build himself a little low snow wall to keep off the worst of the bitter wind, and there he would wait ten, twelve, twenty hours for the seal to come up to breathe, his eyes glued to the tiny mark [illegible] above the hole to guide the [illegible] of his harpoon, a [illegible] his feet and the tutareang—the buckle that the old hunters had talked about. This helps to keep a man's legs from twitching as he waits and waits and waits for the quick-eared seal to rise. Though there is no excitement in it, you can easily believe that the sitting still in the buckle, with the thermometer perhaps 40 degrees below zero, is the hardest work an Inuit knows. When a seal was caught Kotuko, the dog, would bound forward, his trace trailing behind him, and help to pull the body to the sleigh where the tired and hungry dogs lay sullenly under the lee of the broken ice.

A seal did not go very far, for each mouth in the little village had a right to be filled and never bone, hide nor sinew was wasted. The dog's meat was taken for human use and Amoraq fed the team with pieces of old summer skin-tents raked out from under the sleeping bench, and they howled and howled again, and waked to howl hungrily. One could tell by the soapstone lamps in the huts that famine was near. In good seasons when blubber is plentiful the light in the boat-shaped lamps would be two feet high, cheerful, oily and yellow. Now it was a bare six inches: Amoraq carefully pricked down the moss wick when an unwatched flame brightened for a moment, and the eyes of all the family followed her hand. The horror of famine up there in the great cold is not so much dying as dying in the dark. All the Inuit dread the dark that presses on them without a break for six months in each year, and when the lamps are low in the houses the minds of people begin to be shaken and confused.

But worse was to come.

The underfed dogs snapped and growled in the passages, glaring at the cold stars and snuffing into the bitter wind, night after night. When they stopped howling the silence fell down again as solid and as heavy as a snow-drift against a door, and men could hear the beating of their blood in the thin passages of the ear and the thumping of their hearts that sounded as loud as the noise of sorcerers' drums beaten across the snow. One night Kotuko, the dog, who had been unusually silent in harness, leaped up and pushed his head against Kotuko's knee. Kotuko patted him, but the dog still pushed blindly forward, fawning. Then Kadlu waked and stared into the glassy eyes. The dog whimpered as though he were afraid and shivered between Kadlu's knees. Then the hair rose about his neck and he growled as though a stranger were at the door; then he barked joyously and rolled on the ground and at Kotuko's boot like a puppy.

"What is it?" said Kotuko, for he was beginning to be afraid.

"The sickness," Kadlu answered. "It is the dog-sickness." Kotuko the dog lifted his nose and howled and howled again.

"I have not seen this before. What will he do?" said Kotuko.

Kadlu shrugged one shoulder a little girl crossed the hut for his short stabbing harpoon. The big dog looked at him, howled again and slunk away down the passage while the other dogs drew aside right and left to give him ample room. When he was out on the snow he barked furiously as though on the trail of a musk-ox, and barking and leaping and frisking passed out of sight. This was not hydrophobia, but simple plain madness. The cold and the hunger and above all the dark had turned his head; and when the terrible dog-sickness once shows itself in a team it spreads like wild-fire. Next hunting day another dog sickened and was killed then and there by Kotuko as he bit and struggled among the traces. Then the black second dog who had been the leader in the old days suddenly gave tongue on an imaginary reindeer track, and when they slipped him from the pitu he flew at the throat of an ice-cliff, and ran away as his leader had done, his harness on his back. After that no one would take the dogs out again. They needed them for something else and the dogs knew it and though they were tied down and fed by hand their eyes were full of despair and fear. To make things worse the old women began to tell ghost-tales and to say that they had met the spirits of the dead hunters lost that autumn who prophesied all sorts of horrible things.

Kotuko grieved more for the loss of his dog than anything else, for though an Inuit eats enormously he also knows when to starve. But the hunger, the darkness, the cold and the exposure told on his strength, and he began to hear voices inside his head and to see people, who were not there, out of the tail of his eye. One night he had unbuckled himself after ten hours waiting above a "blind" seal-hole and was staggering back to the village faint and dizzy—he halted to lean his back against a bowlder which happened to be supported like a rocking-stone on a single jutting point of ice. His weight disturbed the balance of the thing, it rolled over ponderously and as Kotuko sprang aside to avoid it slid after him squeaking and hissing on the ice slope.

That was enough for Kotuko. He had been brought up to believe that every rock and bowlder had its owner (its inua) who was generally a one-eyed kind of a woman thing called a tornaq, and that when a tornaq meant to help a man she rolled after him inside her stone house and asked him whether he would take her for a guardian spirit. (In summer thaws the ice-held rocks and bowlders roll and slip all over the face of the land, so you can easily see how the idea of live stones arose.) Kotuko heard the blood beating in his ears as he had heard it all day and he thought it was the tornaq of the stone speaking to him. Before he reached home he was quite certain that he had held a long conversation with her, and, as all his people believed that this was quite possible, no one contradicted him.

"'She said to me: 'I jump down. I jump down from my place on the snow.'" cried Kotuko, with hollow eyes, leaning forward in the half lighted mut. "She said: 'I will be a guide. She says: I will guide you to the good seal holes.' To-morrow I will go and the tornaq will guide me."

Then Angekok, the village sorcerer, came in and Kotuko told him the tale a second time. It lost nothing in the telling.

"Follow the tornait (the spirits of the stones) and they will bring us food again," said the angekok.

Now the girl from the north had been lying near the lamp, eating very little and saying less for days past, but when Amoraq and Kadlu next morning packed and lashed a little hand sleigh for Kotuko and loaded it with his hunting gear and as much blubber and frozen seal meat as they could spare, she took the pulling rope, and stepped out boldly at the boy's side.

HE TELLS OF HIS TORNAQ.

"Your house is my house," she said, as the little bone-shod sleigh squeaked and bumped behind them in the awful, silent Arctic night.

"My house is your house," said Kotuko, "but I think that we shall both go to Sedna together."

Now Sedna is the mistress of the Underworld and the Inuit believes that everyone who dies must spend a year in her horrible country before going on to Quadliparmiut, the Happy Place where it never freezes and the fat reindeer trot up when you call.

Through the village people were shouting: "The tornait have spoken to Kotuko. They will show him open ice. He will bring us the seal again." Their voices were soon swallowed up by the cold empty dark, and Kotuko and the girl shouldered close together as they strained on the pulling rope or humored the sleigh through the broken ice, in the direction of the Polar sea. Kotuko insisted that the tornaq of the stone had told him to go north and north they went under Tuktugiang, the reindeer—what we call the Great Bear.

No European could have made five miles a day over the ice rubbish and the sharp-edged drifts; but those two knew exactly the turn of the wrist that coaxes a sleigh round a hummock, the jerk that neatly lifts it out of an ice crack, and the exact strength that goes to the few quiet strokes of the spear-head that make a path possible when everything looks hopeless.

The girl said nothing but bowed her head, and the long wolverine fur fringe to her ermine hood blew across her broad, dark face. The sky above them was an intense velvety black, changing to bands of Indian red on the horizon where the great stars burned like street lamps. From time to time a greenish wave of the northern lights would roll across the hollow of the high heavens, flick like a flag and disappear, or a meteor would crackle from darkness to darkness trailing a shower of sparks behind. Then they could see the ridged and furrowed surface of the floe tipped and laced with strange colors, red, copper and bluish; but in the ordinary starlight everything turned to one frost bitten gray.

YOUR TIRED STOMACH.

"I have no appetite," you say, "and the little I do eat does me no good. At first it feels cold and dead in my stomach and by and by I have aches and pains that sometimes go to my chest and back. I feel weak, low spirited and out of sorts all over. I fancy the demon of dyspepsia has got me." That's the way you talk, and no wonder. But wait a moment. Let us reason together. Perhaps thus far your stomach is merely tired. You have been eating too much, eating the wrong things, and irregularly. You have given it too much to do, and like all living things, when overworked, it stops at length from sheer exhaustion. There may not be an actually diseased condition as yet. Still it is nature's warning, and you must heed it or worse will follow. "But I must eat or starve," you say. True enough; but safety usually lies in middle courses. Here is one for you. You don't need drastic purges or exciting stimulants. Your condition is one easily relieved if we go about it gently and sensibly. The tired stomach won't work under whip and spur. It has probably had too much of that already. What you require is something that is at once a food and a digester of food. Such an article is the Shaker Digestive Cordial, discovered and prepared by the Shaker Community of Mt. Lebanon, N. Y. Taken right after eating, so as to mix with the food, it does the stomach's work for it, gives it the advantage of further rest, strengthens you in a natural way, and soon enables the stomach to do full duty. There is nothing else like this simple, safe, certain and palatable remedy. Yet the Shakers respect your doubts and authorize druggists to sell a trial bottle for ten cents.

TALK OF THE TOWN!
AND EXPLANATION WHY

are doing all the business. Our stock is the largest, prices are the lowest and terms the easiest in the city. Just give it a passing thought that you can get an antique oak bedroom suit, 8 pieces, for $15, $20, $25 and $30, including a woven wire bed spring and a mixed mattress. No house in the city offers such inducements.

And then to think again that you can get tapestry Brussels carpet for 50, 60, and 70 cents a yard, made and laid with paper, which is a saving of 15c per yard. Where is there a house in the city that will offer such bargains?

And then imagine and wonder how we can afford to give away a moquette rug or parlor table with a parlor suit for $20, $30, $40 or $50.

Some of our competitors say that our ads are too much sameness, and that this ad. is old. Well, we will admit it, but as long as it does the business and saves the people money we will continue to run it.

DANCES FULL OF ANIMATION.

DESCRIPTION OF A PORTION OF THE KIRMESS ENTERTAINMENT.

Nearly Every Nationality Will Be Represented and Add Splendor and Picturesqueness to the Scene—The Chaperones.

Two weeks from Monday Plainfield is to see the beginning of the Kirmess, which promises to be one of the largest and most popular affairs that has interested Plainfield for a long time, if Plainfield is anything like the other cities of her size where the Kirmess has been held.

For the benefit of readers who are not versed in Teutonic etymology, it may be well to explain what a Kirmess is. The word is an abbreviation or corruption of "Kirmesse," which translated literally means simply Christmas Fair. In the middle ages when travel was slow and fraught with danger of pillage, each hamlet found it the cheapest, safest and most convenient commercial gathering as the merchants migrated in a body with their goods from one Kirmess to another, and by co-operation found their measures of defence against robbers more secure and the expense lighter. But as the dangers of traveling grew smaller and communication became easier, the Kirmess lost its distinctively commercial character, and merry-making became the most important feature. The Kirmess generally occurred in the fall, after the harvests had been gathered in, and to the untutored foreigner looked very much like a jolly Thanksgiving, coming at about that time. There was a long line of booths where the lovelorn swain might acquire the ribbons and gloves and gay colored kerchiefs with which he was wont to express the love that his lips were unwilling to avow. For a week the young folks were deeply engrossed in songs, dancing and courting, while the confusion of violins, laughing voices and dancing feet was incessant. And then old and young would reluctantly resume their wonted occupations.

Plainfield's Kirmess is to be based on the same plan. For a week, the young people, and the older ones too, will gather in the large hall of the Crescent Cycle Academy, which will then present a far different appearance. Booths on every side and bright costumed young folks flitting about in every direction. The principal part of the Kirmess will, of course, be the dances, and the dancers are now at work under the careful supervision of Miss Lila Agnew Stewart, preparing for it.

The dances are supposed to be national ones. Hungary is first represented in the Gypsy dance when twenty-four dancers in the red and black costumes of the Gypsy, with tamborine, will follow graceful and intricate figures. Mrs. Fred H. Andrews acts as chaperone in this dance.

The German harvesters have finished their work and come upon the stage in rustic dress to dance together. This dance, which is said to be one of the most graceful of all the dances, will be given by ten couples, chaperoned by Miss Emilie Schipper and Miss Millie Tracy.

The Spanish Senors and Senoritas in their gay costumes will whirl away in graceful figures, with tamborines and castenets. Mrs. James T. Scott will chaperone the twelve couples in this dance.

The Tarantelle is the dance of the Italian fisher lads and lasses, and is named after that horrible creature, the tarantula, not on account of its hideousness, for it is one of the most beautiful, but because one of the number is supposed to have been bitten by that deadly creature, and the rest try to drive away the effects of the poison with their swift rushing dance. Mrs. S. A. Cruikshank is the chaperone.

The Indian braves and their squaws give their national dances. The squaws at first listen for the arrival of the braves, who soon appear and give a full-fledged war dance armed with tomahawk and knife. This dance is a very picturesque one and furnishes plenty of chances for originality. The chaperone for the Indians is Mrs. Henry M. Blish.

The Highlanders appear in the Scotch dance or Highland Reel and dance as they do in bonnie Scotland, chaperoned by Mrs. J. F. McDonald and Mrs. W. A. Woodruff.

The sedate and courtly minuet is given by sixteen young people elaborately costumed after the fashion of the eighteenth century. Russia is represented by the military dance. The ladies in their close fitting gowns and the stalwart soldiers in uniform and top boots give a dignified but graceful rendition of the dance. These dancers are chaperoned by Mrs. George B. DeRevere and Miss Verdon.

The other dances are for the younger set of young people and will be described in a later issue of the Daily Press.

AFTER THE GAME.

Local Nimrods Shoulder Their Guns and Stalk Forth.

The first day of the open season for hunting was taken advantage of yesterday by nearly all the Nimrods of this section, and woods where game abound were alive with the gun-carrying squads of citizens until dusk put a stop to their expeditions.

Warren Townley, of Somerset street, one rabbit.

Jim Babbitt, fourteen rabbits. He also shot several panels of fence away.

Judge Coddington, J. F. McClintock and J. E. Beerbower—7 rabbits. $1.75.

Frank Day and Wm. Beekman bagged twenty-six rabbits at Whitehouse station yesterday.

W. F. Fulper and son Harry went in search of rabbits yesterday at Neshanic, and brought home nine.

W. J. Conroy and J. P. D. Kirch, of the borough, went to Warren township and brought home a few rabbits.

Ephraim Compton, of J. Fred MacDonald's grocery store, captured five cottod-tails yesterday by expert shooting.

Lew Smalley, of the borough, an old time sure-shot, gunned all day. Result, one rabbit, one squirrel and one pheasant

Fred Sandford and John Haberle yesterday and today had luck bagging "bunnies" in Bedminster township, Somerset county.

C. B. VanWinkle, of Coddington avenue, while out gunning for rabbits, yesterday, near R. V. Cadmus's, mistook his dog for a jack-rabbit and blew his head off.

A. J. Leader, A. I. Smally and S. B. Wheeler, all of the borough, left early yesterday morning for Lebanon, Hunterdon county, in quest of rabbits. They returned last evening with a big string of game.

Louis Schutt, of Duer street, and Charles B. Pope, of Summit avenue, are in Pike county, Pa., where they will spend ten days gunning. It is safe to say that they will bring home a great amount of game.

Theo. Smith carried an 8-lb. 12-bore breech-loading gun all day yesterday wandering through cornfields and underbrush and at his journey's end shot four tame pigeons belonging to Alex. Findley, of 123 East Second street.

"Sooner" Allen and Mike Seader fired eight times at a barnyard pheasant and missed every shot. They have hired the Independent Gun Club grounds and will practice all next week on a haystack, and then will hunt for that missed "bird."

Newt. Spencer made all necessary arrangements to enjoy yesterday shooting grey squirrels and rabbits on his brother-in-law's farm in Washington Valley, but was forced to forego the pleasure on account of someone stealing the dog the night before, that was to find the game for himself and a friend to shoot.

Frank Stover, Garry Wood and Charley Howard mistook one of Jos. Hyland's calves in the Short Hills yesterday for a deer, and all hands wasted their ammunition. Mr. Hyland blew the signal of distress through a fish-horn and the appearance of the neighbors made the trio hasten homeward.

'TWAS COLD AND DARK.

But the City Objected to a Bonfire For His Benefit.

The moon had gone down and it was cold and dark, last evening, when a Dutchman, under the influence of liquor, became tired of walking around and started to camp out in the middle of Grant avenue. He built a bonfire to keep warm with but the light attracted the attention of Officer Totten and he took the inebriated individual to a place of rest for the night. He will appear before Judge Coddington this evening charged with breaking the city ordinance regarding building bonfires in the street.

May Purchase a Parsonage.

The consistory of the German Reformed church will meet Monday evening to consider the proposition of purchasing the property at 102 Duer street, occupied by J. H. Whitenack and owned by B. J. Shreve, for a parsonage for their pastor, Rev. George Hauser.

—This afternoon and evening only you can get one lot of children's camel hair wool shirts all sizes from two to fourteen years old at the rediculous low price of 25 cents each at VanEmburgh & Son's.

Every mother should know that croup can be prevented. The first symptom of true croup is hoarseness. This is followed by a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given freely as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the cough has developed it will prevent the attack. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues.

FOUND IN ETERNAL SLEEP.

MRS. CONROY PASSED AWAY QUIETLY THURSDAY NIGHT.

Though She Had Been Ailing for Some Time Her Death Came Unexpected—A Member of the Park Avenue Church.

Death came silently and painlessly into the home of John H. Doane on LaGrande avenue Thursday night and removed from the cares of this world Mrs. Martha Conroy, mother of Mrs. Doane. Although Mrs. Conroy had been ailing for some time, her condition was thought to be improving and the suddenness of her demise brought the relatives a surprise of sorrow and affliction.

When Mrs. Conroy failed to appear at the breakfast table yesterday morning with the rest of the family, nothing strange was thought of it, as she frequently did not arise from her night's rest until the others had eaten their morning meal.

She failed to appear during the early morning hours, and towards noon her daughter became anxious as to the cause of her remaining in her room so long, but as Mrs. Conroy was in the habit of sleeping with the door locked she made no attempt to get in until her husband came for lunch. Then an admittance was gained to her apartment. The beloved mother was found in her bed as if resting in the quietude of slumber, but an investigation proved that was the sleep of the eternal, for some time during the night she had passed from this world into another.

Mrs. Conroy was born in New York in 1830, and moved to Plainfield with her husbend twenty-three years ago and has resided here ever since. Mr. Conroy died three years ago. She was a consecrated Christian woman, and when her health permitted, was an active worker in the Park Avenue Baptist church, of which she was a devoted member. The funeral services will be held from her late home at 423 LaGrande avenue, Monday afternoon at 2:30.

THE SPANISH BOOTH.

One of the Principal Features of the Coming Kirmess.

Mrs. S. A. Cruikshank, who has charge of the Spanish booth at the coming Kirmess will have associated with her Mesdames A. T. Slauson, T. H. Curtis, J. F. Wrechers, E. M. VanBuren, T. H. Hazell, M. S. Ackerman, the Misses Moore, Moser, Harriott, Patten, Lord, Kirkner, Horton, Meredith and others.

There will be cigars, cigarettes, candies and Spanish chocolate sold at the booth. The chocolate will be served by little boys and girls in costume. Nothing but the finest cigars will be sold and the candies will all be "home made" or Huylers. The ladies in attendance will all be in white, with the Spanish colors arranged as drapery, and will wear red roses in hair and as corsage bouquets.

There are two young men needed for the Italian dance. The next rehearsal is Monday evening at seven o'clock. Any who would like to join may report at the bicycle clubhouse on Sycamore street at that time.

Kean's Friends Are Wondering.

Ex-Congressman John Kean has not returned to Elizabeth yet from his trip to the Hot Springs. He was to come back Oct. 19th, and the look of anxiety of certain Republican leaders in Union county over his prolonged absence is painful to witness. It is hinted that Mr. Kean may get back just in time to vote.

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family has need of it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once and you will never regret it. For sale by Reynold's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

FILLED WITH INSPIRATION.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS STILL TALK OF THE STATE CONVENTION.

Intelligent and Helpful Comment on the Various Phases of the Big Gathering—Another Poem From Plainfield.

Christian Endeavorers who were not privileged to attend the State Convention at Atlantic City, but who were present at the Convention Rally held last night by the Christian Endeavor society of the Park Avenue Baptist church, listened to a very clear account of the convention, and received some of the spirit of earnestness and consecration which prevailed there.

Miss Emma V. Fish, president of the society, presided over the meeting, which was opened by the singing of the State hymn, and "Onward, Christian Soldiers," followed by a prayer by Miss Hawkins, secretary of the local Union. Six of the society's delegates to the convention then sang the following convention rally song, written for the occasion by Miss M. G. Morse:

From the glorious State Convention
Safely now we all have come.
With new hope and inspiration,
To our own beloved home.
Father, may we serve Thee better
For those days beside the shore.
And our lives be brighter, purer.
Than they e'er have been before.

Thou hast drawn us closer to Thee
Through the bright Convention days;
Thou hast given us showers of blessing;
Thou hast turned our hearts to praise.
May we spread the inspiration
Of that meeting by the sea.
Until all in our fair city
Shall be closer drawn to Thee.

Soon the swiftly-rolling seasons
Shall bring round to us the hour
When another State Convention
Waits the Holy Spirit's power.
Oh, our Father, bless our city;
Every heart prepare and fill;
Working, praying, pressing onward,
May we do Thy Holy will.

Mr. J. M. Hawkins described the Wednesday evening session in the convention hall, the Citizen's Rally, and the goodly showing made by the Plainfield delegation, in their white caps.

Miss Alice B. Spangenberg followed with an account of the Thursday morning consecration service, telling of the wonderful spirit of prayer which seemed to pervade the meeting and of the intense earnestness of the whole service.

The Baptist rally, held Thursday afternoon, was described by Miss Adelaide Runyon. It was held in the Baptist church, was led by Rev Mr. Cross, of Atlantic City, and was full of interest.

Mr. J. M. Hawkins next told of the Thursday evening session. President Dr. J. Clement French, delivered his annual address. He was received with the Chautauqua salute, and tremendous applause, and his talk on "The Pledge" was one of the strongest and most helpful parts of the convention. Miss Spangenberg followed with a few words concerning the service prayer meeting held Friday morning on the beach, an earnest, heart-felt service, and a fitting preparation for the great day of the convention.

The noon-day services at the Life Saving Stations were commented on by J. M. Hawkins. He spoke of the desolate stations in a wilderness of sand, where the Endeavorers were so warmly welcomed, and of the earnest, long-to-be-remembered meetings, where not only the Endeavor workers gave their testimony, but captain and crew added words which showed their allegiance to the Endeavorers Lord.

Mrs. W. S. Lowery gave an account of the Friday afternoon session, mentioning especially the report of the missionary superintendent, Miss Alice B. Spangenberg, the exciting moment when the announcement of the '96 convention was made, and the delightful Junior Rally.

The closing Enduement service of Friday evening was described by Miss Florence G. Hawkins, in a way that reached every hearer's heart. The account of that intensely solemn hour of earnest consecration and pledge for future work, fitly prepared the way for E. E. Anthony's appeal for a deeper, truer spiritual life—a life emptied of self, ready to be used by Miss Myra Runyon spoke concerning the Friday morning session in the hall, mentioning especially the magnificient singing, Rev. J. T. Kerr' address on "The Christian Soldier of the Twentieth Century," Mr. Spooner's report of the Junior work, and Rev. T. E. Murphy's rousing temperance address.

After the singing of "Sunshine in my soul," a short consecration service was held, conducted by Rev. J. W. Richardson. Heartfelt prayers, earnest words of re-consecration, and then the Mizpah benediction closed a meeting full of interest to all.

AN EVEN HUNDRED RAISED.

Financial Success of the Birthday Social Last Night.

It was not the birthday party of the Grace M. E. church, but rather a grand combination birthday party for all of the congregation that the Ladies Aid Society gave in the church last evening. But even if it was to celebrate the combined birthday of all, every one was given a chance to make a present to the Ladies Aid Society. Little bags had been sent around and were brought in containing as many cents as the giver was years old.

The programme opened with an introductory recitation by Miss Winnie Carroll. A well-rendered piano solo by Miss Libbie Joseph followed, after which Mabel Loomis recited the pretty little story of "Doris and Anthony" A violin and piano duet were delightfully rendered by Dyckman Winckler and Miss Carroll. Little Miss Reynolds, accompanied by Miss Carroll, sang "The Wooden Shoes" very sweetly. After a recitation by Miss Lizzie Hoagland, the programme ended with a vocal duet by the Misses Alice and Grace Carroll.

Rev. Mr. Randolph then stated the birthday offerings would be received according to months. Mrs. A. A. Taft and Miss Grace Carroll read selections appropriate to the different months and then Mrs. L. A. Hummer received the little bags. July proved to have the greatest number of adherents. After all the bags had been emptied and the contents counted, Rev. Mr. Randolph announced the total as $68, but some of the men in the church put in their contributions and the total rose to an even $100. Bountiful supplies of delicious cake were followed by cups of coffee.

There was a large number present at the sociable. The entertainment was arranged by a committee composed of Mrs. L. A. Hummer, Mrs. H. Carroll, and Mrs. Elmer Winckler, whose successful efforts were plainly shown. The committee who provided the refreshments consisted of Mrs. A. Most, Mrs. J. Garey, Mrs. John Carney, and Mrs. William H. Lunger.

Nominated a Coroner Over Again.

Union county Republicans blundered at their county convention when they nominated Dr. Charles B. Holmes, of Rahway, for Coroner. Dr. Holmes already held that office. He was elected last year, and his term does not expire for two years. The vacancy on the ticket will likely be filled by the appointment of Dr. F. M. Tiernan, of Roselle, who was Dr. Holmes's competitor at the convention.

Got Refreshments.

A wager was made a few days ago between Harrison Randolph and Wm. Ayers, expressmen, that neither dared to pull the other around the streets in a buggy. Randolph took up the bet which was for refreshments. Ayers got in the buggy at their stables on East Second street, and was taken through Park avenue, North avenue and back to East Second street. Randolph received his refreshments.

Bids for Bonds to Be Received.

At the special meeting of the City Council on Monday evening bids for furnishing the city $100,000 will be received.

Satisfied at Last.

The sewer committee is very well satisfied with the progress now being made by Contractor John Marsden.

"Many of the citizens of Rainsville, Indiana, are never without a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house," says Jacob Brown, the leading merchant of the place. This Remedy has proven of so much value for colds and croup in children that few mothers who know its worth are willing to be without it. SONS OF VETS HAVE PLEASURE

LIVING PICTURES, AND OTHER FEATURES OF THE PROGRAMME.

The Hoochie Koochie Band From New Brunswick Render Vocal Selections in a Pleasing Way—The Other Numbers.

The entertainment given by John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., in Grand Army hall last evening, was successful in every particular. The large room was filled to overflowing with an appreciative audience and several were unable to obtain admission.

A comedy sketch in two acts, entitled "The Dutchman's First Visit to Plainfield," was exceedingly funny and kept everyone in good humor. H. S. Thatcher took the part of the Dutchman; Charles Stephens that of the hotel keeper; Victor Lorton impersonated a colored waiter; while Fred Sutton and Edward Smith were transient boarders.

Following this, Wm. C. Force gave one of his pleasing banjo solos, accompanied by George Rogers on the piano. Mrs. Charles Steiner amused all with a quaint and very funny recitation. Emil Closs was then introduced and kept the audience in continuous laughter with his comical sketches. A feature of the programme was the cornet solo by Benj. La Vere, accompanied by Miss Lewis on the piano. The selection was finely rendered, as was also the recitation, "Barbara Fretchie," by Miss Lines.

The Hoochie Koochie band from Camp 20, of New Brunswick, then made their appearance and delighted all with their rendition of "Star Spangled Banner" and "Marching Through Georgia." Their costumes were very attractive and all wore false faces and high hats. Their instruments were made of paper, excepting the drums, and cheese boxes were used as substitutes. Brother Snyder, who acted as drum-major, pleased those present by giving the various army calls on his bugle.

The last portion of the programme was devoted to "living pictures" by members of Camp 28. The consisted of the camp scene, the spy, charge, execution, Bunker Hill, and Camp 28 on parade.

Much credit is due the committee in charge who prepared such an interesting programme, and the treasury is enriched thereby to a considerable amount.

APPLEBY AGAINST M'GILL.

The Linden Race-Track Owner Says His Interests Are With Griggs.

J. E. Martine asserted in his speech at German Valley last night that Lucius Q. Appleby, owner of the Linden race-track and main owner of Monmouth race-track, had stated to two prominent citizens of Union county that his interests and his fellow as race-track owners in New Jersey demanded the election of J. W. Griggs, and that he was and should work for his election. He should go in Monmouth county and with this object would try to defeat McGill.

An eight-pound girl brightens the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Canning, of Stone street. The little miss is a few days old.

The Assembly nominations in Union county made by the Prohibitionists are Samuel Wilson, W. H. King and George R. Sayre; Coroner, Fred W. Myles.

The Socialistic Labor party has selected James Bell, John Faulkner and Charles Bobertz for the Assembly and Hans Hansen for Coroner.

GAVE ORDERS TO SHOOT

General Electric Foreman Wants Strikers Killed.

Decided Sensation at Lynn—Employes Instructed To Resist by Armed Force Any Attempt at Interference—Residents Uneasy and Property Depreciates in Value.

Lynn, Mass., Oct. 26.—There is a decided sensation here over the news that a foreman of the General Electric company had instructed some of his non-union workmen to shoot like dogs anyone who would offer them any intimidation while in the employ of the company. The man who made the instructions public was John O'Neil of Philadelphia, who came here at the request of the General Electric company to work as a moulder in the company's Lynn foundry. O'Neil, who was present at a strikers' meeting, says that Foreman Edwards of the steel foundry instructed him to "shoot them down like dogs" (meaning the strikers).

The Company Hard Pressed.

The Generrl Electric company is hard pressed for moulders to fill its foundries and is advertising for moulders all over the country, but as yet has succeeded in getting less than a score in all. The strikers have a strong force of pickets on duty and have succeeded wonderfully well, so far, in getting men who came to Lynn to take their places to go away again.

Unmercifully Clubbed a Man.

The General Electric company, however, has carpenters at work to-day erecting sheds inside the foundries at the river works, where it is understood it intends to have the non-union men sleep nights and take their meals to them in the day time. The company has a force of special policemen on duty to protect the non-union men from any violence that might be offered by the strikers, but so far the only trouble has been caused by an incompetent special policeman who clubbed a man unmercifully a few days ago, and that, too, without apparent cause, for the man was not arrested.

Willing To Arbitrate.

First National Vice-President Valentine, of the Iron and Brass Moulders' International union, who has arrived in Lynn from Lawrence, stated that he would be perfectly willing to have the state board of arbitration settle the strike, adding, that his organization had every confidence in the honesty and intelligence of the board from the judicious way in which it settled the steamfitters' strike in Boston.

Hands Laid Off Every Day.

Meantime the General Electric compana is becoming crippled for castings at its Lynn factories on account of the strike, and machinists and others are being laid off every day, simply because there is no work for them to do, until the moulders' strike is settled. It is feared, too, that the machinists employed by the company, the majority of whom are union men, may also strike for the abolition of piece work in their departments. In the meter department there are scarcely castings enough on hand to last through next week, and the shortage is even more apparent in the transformer department.

Residents Uneasy.

The residents of West Lynn, where the factories of the company are located, are getting uneasy and already property has begun to depreciate in value. The merchants think that the state board of arbitration should make an effort to adjust the trouble immediately, before it is too late. It was reported this morning that a large force of mechanics would be laid off this afternoon on account of the strike.

Counselled To Be Peaceable.

Vice-President Valentine addressed a mass meeting of the strikers in Odd Fellows' hall, West Lynn, last night when he counselled them to use "all pressure within the law" to win the strike. Several addresses were also made by members of the strikers' committee, all giving expression to the same sentiments—that the men had only to hold out to win a big victory over General Electric company.

GREATEST SINCE GAMBETTA.

French Deputy Jaures Develops into a Magnificent Rhetorician.

Paris, Oct. 26.—The speech made by M. Jaures, a socialist member of the chamber of deputies, on the recent strike of the glass workers at Carmaux, has confirmed the opinion that he is the greatest French rhetorician since Gambetta. The members of the chamber sat spellbound by his eloquence. Instead of demanding a vote of want of confidence in the government in M. Jaures' behalf, the socialists proposed that M. Brisson be appointed to arbitrate between the disputants at Carmaux. M. Brisson expressed his willingness to act as arbitrator if the chamber wished him to do so. This move took the chamber by surprise and the debate was adjourned.

INTERNATIONAL CHESS.

Match Between England and This Country To Be Played in January.

New York, Oct. 26.—The Brooklyn Chess club has received the following cable message from Sir George Newnes, "Challenge received. Will call meeting and endeavor to arrange this representative match; but November impossible. Would want Pillsbury to return—say January. Newnes." The Brooklyn Chess club thereupon replied as follows: "We amend our challenge, as to date of play, as proposed by you. Mareau." The match between England and America, eight a side, will therefore take place in January.

Canalboat Traction Test.

Albany, Oct. 26.—State Engineer and Surveyor Campbell W. Adams left for Buffalo last night to be present to-day at Tonawanda at the official test of the electrial propulsion scheme for canalboats which is to occur there on a mile stretch of the Erie canal.

Pittsburg, Oct. 26.—The jury in the case of R. J. McKnight, charged with the murder of T. F. Hyland, returned a verdict of manslaughter late yesterday afternoon.

MRS. WARD MISSING.

Livingston Manor Excited Over a Mysterious Disappearance.

Middletown, N. Y., Oct. 26.—Great excitement prevails at Livingston Manor, in Sullivan county, over the disappearance of the wife of C. Milton Ward, and the general impression is that she has been murdered. Ward came into the village on Thursday and had placards posted offering a reward for the apprehension of his wife and Riley Carl, who, he charged, had eloped, or that Carl had murdered Mrs. Ward. On Monday night, while very drunk, Ward told conflicting stories to a number of villagers. A complaint was made to Justice McGrath and Ward was arrested. A searching party was organized and went to Ward's house, but no evidence being found to justify Ward's arrest he was discharged. The villagers are now inclined to accept as true the statements against Carl in Ward's placards. Ward also said that his house had been robbed. Carl having served several terms in prison, the interest is intensified. A vigilance committee has started out to unravel the mystery.

MAHDISTS INVEST KASSALA.

Captured from the Italians Who Had Recently Taken the Town.

Rome, Oct. 26.—The Piedmontese Gazette has a dispatch from Massowah, the capital of Erythrea, saying that 6,000 Mahdists have invested Kassala, which was recently captured from them by the Italian forces. The dispatch adds that Gen. Baratieri, the commander of the Italian forces, has received a telegram from the government, inviting him to ask for any necessary reinforcements.

London, Oct. 26.—A dispatch from Rome to the Central News says that the meeeting of the ministry was virtually a council of war. Generals Corvette, Pelloux and Primerano concurred in advising the government to send a complete army corps to reinforce the troops now operating against the Mahdists and Abyssinians.

CAPT. LEAVITT'S ACT.

A Nonogenarian Attempts To End His Life by Shooting.

Livermore Falls, Me., Oct. 26.—Captain Stephen Leavitt, aged 90, the oldest citizen in Livermore, who has been ill for some time, shot himself back of the right ear while the family were at breakfast. A physician has been unable to remove the ball and the captain cannot live. No one of the family owned a revolver and it is a mystery how the old gentleman obtained one. Captain Leavitt up to fifty-five years ago was a seafaring man and worked his way up from being before the mast to the position of captain. Since his return to Livermore he has filled many offices of honor and trust.

THE HENNEPIN CANAL.

Work Almost Suspended Owing to Exhaustion of the Appropriation.

Princeton, Ill., Oct. 26.—Work has been suspended on the line of the Hennepin canal, with the exception of two forces on the extreme eastern end, and these will be laid off on November 10. This action was taken because the appropriations have about been exhausted. One million two hundred thousand dollars has already been expended on the canal and eight miles on the western end have been completed. On the eastern end the excavations for twenty miles have been made and seven locks have been finished. A small fund yet available will be used for the purchase of rights of way.

PENCIL THROUGH HIS HEART.

Sad Death of a Bright Mt. Washington, Pa., Schoolboy.

Pittsburg, Oct. 26.—While John Dripps, a 9-year-old boy residiug at Mt. Washington, a suburb of Pittsburg, was running home from school, he slipped and fell to the sidewalk, driving a slate pencil into his heart. The little fellow could not get up and uttered an agonizing cry. The driver of a laundry wagon went to his assistance and carried him to a doctor's office. Before the doctor could examine him the boy died. He was one of the brightest boys in Mt. Washington and his unhappy death causes much sorrow.

NARROW ESCAPE OF CAMPOS.

His Cloak Pierced by Eight Bullets in a Fight with Cuban Rebels.

Havana, Oct. 26.—Captain General Campos has arrived here from Cienfuegos. In his journey from Ciego de Avila to Sancti Spiritus, escorted by a detachment of one hundred cavalrymen only, he was attacked by a band of insurgents, whom he routed after a sharp fight. During this engagement the captain general's cloak was pierced by eight bullets and a bullet went through his saddle-bags.

Dr. Bradford is alleged to be an accomplice of Brockway, the notorious forger, and the gang of counterfeiters recently arrested in Jersey City. John Nixon, who was jointly indicted with Dr. Bradford, was found not guilty and discharged.

WAR SPIRIT AROUSED

England Excited Over the Russian-Chinese Treaty.

The Concessions to the Czar's Government Considered To Be an Attack Upon Great Britain's Commercial Interests—Great Activity in Government Circles.

London, Oct. 26.—The dispatch from Shanghai announcing the departure of a fleet of fifteen warships from Vladivostock for Chemulpo and Fusan, Corea, and the dispatch to the Times from Hong Kong announcing that, under a recently concluded treaty between Russia and China, Russia has obtained the right to anchor her fleet at Port Arthur, and construct railroads on the Liao-Tung peninsula, have caused much excitement in official circles here, and also in the business community connected with trade in the east. The statements are looked upon as a sudden reopening in an unexpected quarter of the eastern question. The war spirit in England has evidently been aroused, owing to what she considers an attack upon her most vital spot, her pocketbook.

War Hinted At.

Following the editorial of the Times, saying that "Russia cannot possibly imagine that the great powers will view with indifference such a destruction of the balance of power," the papers of this city all publish long articles, agreeing that British intervention in the far east is necessary. The St. James' Gazette says: "Even war with Russia would be less disastrous than to allow her, without a blow, to get such a grip upon China. She could throttle all the other powers and choke off their commerce. Unless Russia and China give the necessary assurances, it is a case for an ultimatum and perhaps the most serious step our diplomacy has had since the Crimean war."

To Resist Russian Aggression.

The opinion is expressed in the papers that neither America or Germany can allow the Pacific to become "a Franco-Russian lake," as the Globe puts it, and that diplomatic efforts will be combined and sufficiently strong to resist Russian aggression. The Pall Mall Gazette sums up the news with the statement that "Russia has annexed China," and in the course of a long article on the subject says: "If this treaty is to stand, roll up the map of Asia." In conclusion, it urges the reoccupation of Port Hamilton by the British and the immediate strengthening of the British fleet in Chinese waters, "lest Japan lose her fleet at the first blow."

Activity in Government Circles.

Since this important news was circulated great activity has been displayed in the government offices here, particularly at the foreign office and at the admiralty, and the coming and going of messengers was continuous. At the different clubs the news was eagerly discussed, the situation in Venezuela having almost completely dropped out of mind in the alarm of the moment. The treaty is believed on all hands to have secured for Russia rights to which the most-favored-nation clause is not applicable. The correspondent of the Times at Hong Kong, who sent the news, is described by his newspaper as being in "close relations with men who are able to penetrate beneath the surface of things," and this gives support to the belief in the serious character of the situation. The feeling of apprehension will last until some official utterance either denies or confirms the truth of the reports.

MRS. PANRELL'S NEW HOME.

After Recuperating Her Strength She Will Go To Ireland.

Bordentown, N. J., Oct. 26.—Mrs. Delia T. S. Parnell, accompanied by Mrs. Knaud, who was her faithful friend and attendant while she lay suffering from the assassins' blow, left Bordentown yesterday for Mrs. Knaud's home in New York. She will remain there until she has gained sufficient strength to stand a sea voyage, when she will sail for Ireland. She will probably spend her remaining days at the home of her daughter.

HE WAS INSANE.

Verdict of Jury Inquiring into the Marquis of Waterford's Death.

Dublin, Oct. 26.—An inquest was held yesterday inquiring into the circumstances of the death of John Henry De-la-Poer Beresford, marquis of Waterford, who died at his residence, Curraghmore house, Waterford, on Wednesday last from the effects of a self-inflicted bullet wound. The jury returned a verdict that the marquis killed himself while temporally insane.

EXECUTION OF STOKES.

Officials of the Congo State Deny Stories Told by Thomas Bradley.

Brussels, Oct. 26.—The authorities of the Congo State declare that Capt. Lothaire, who is charged with the illegal execution of the English trader, Stokes, never had any Americans under his orders and that the story told by Thomas Bradley of his having had his American overseer bound to a tree and slashed with a sword, so that he died two days afterwards, is untrue.

Dyspepsia, Gastritis and all stomach troubles where that great life-maintaining organ refuses to dispense nourishment to every part of the body, and the sufferer gradually wasting away and losing flesh daily, finally meets his death from the perforation of a gastric ulcer or dies by actual starvation, can be cured, as has been done time and again, by the use of that great blood enricher, flesh and muscle builder, and strength creator. Give the vital centres of the body strength to perform their regular functions and perfect health is a natural sequence. Dr. Louis Faust, of Schenectady, N. Y., says of Bovinine, "In the severest cases of gastritis the stomach will bear it. For one month my mother lived almost exclusively on it during such a sickness." Over 25000 physicians use and endorse it.

CONDITION OF TRADE

Volume of Business Falls Below Expectations.

Revival of Demand for Pig Iron—Upward Tendencies in Quotations of Leading Cereals—Bank Clearings Fall Off—The Kaffir Craze—Lumber for South Africa.

New York, Oct. 26.—Bradstreet's trade review for to-day says: The volume of general trade for two weeks has hardly reached expectations and now assumes the character of between seasons. Wholesale dealers in seasonable staples, such as dry goods, clothing, hats and shoes, report only a fairly active business, exceptions being at such points as New York, Baltimore, Chicago, Kansas City and Duluth. The total number of failures throughout the United States during the week is 259, against 289 for the previous week, and 220, 329 and 220 for the corresponding weeks in 1894, 1893 and 1892.

Demand for Pig Iron.

A noteworthy feature of the week is the revival in demand for pig iron, the upward tendency in quotations of leading cereals and the liquidation in the cotton market. Sales of cotton goods have been helped by favorable weather and eastern as well as southern mills are well sold up. Wool remains steady in price and holders look for an advance. While the woolen-goods market is reported unsatisfactory, manufacturers generally are hopeful, although advices from Rhode Island are that unless additional orders are received an increased number of mills will become idle.

Bank Clearings.

While the bank clearings total this week is still of large proportions, $1,151,000,000, it falls off 1 per cent. from last week, due in part to the check in the volume of general trade, indications of which have been noted for a fortnight. But this week's clearings are 26 per cent. heavier than in the like week last year and 23 per cent. larger than in the third week of October, 1893. As compared with the corresponding total in 1892 this week's total shows a decline of 1.7 per cent., and as compared with the like aggregate in 1891, a year of large volume of business, this week's falling off is only 2.2 per cent.

The Kaffir Craze.

Increased gold mining activity causes a discussion of the probability of an investment and speculative boom here suggested by the Kaffir craze. Bradstreet's this week points out that public interest in gold mining must be based upon actual developments, as at Witswatersrand, and financial and practical methods such as distinguish the upper Michigan copper corporation of Boston.

Cotton Speculation.

Cotton speculation has been active and excited, with record-breaking sales and price declines in all markets. Speculation more than discounted improved trade and short crop estimates or prospects, and the liquidation caused a decline of 7-8c. Exports were checked by the advance, but the crop movement, owing partly to the enormous advance in price, falls away only 273,000 bales from last year's record, when 9,900,000 bales were gathered. Crop estimates, which scaled from 8,500,000 bales down to 6,500,000, now range at 7,000,000 bales or over. A few months ago it was estimated that an American crop of 7,500,000 bales, with supply then on hand, would allow of carrying over a quantity almost equal to that held at the beginning of last season, when the price was two cents lower.

Exports of Wheat.

Exports of wheat (flour included as wheat) from both coasts of the United States this week, plus shipments from Montreal, show an increase over the total last week of about 250,000 bushels, due to increased exports from the Pacific coast. The total this week is 2,658,000 bushels; in the week a year ago it was 3,353,000 bushels, two years ago 3,327,000 bushels, and the like week in 1892 it was 4,078,000 bushels.

Advance of Prices.

Price changes have been evenly distributed. The improved tone in iron, due to increased demand, has resulted in an advance of nearly $1 for Bessemer pig, which must in the near future, if maintained, cause a corresponding advance in billets, thus far unchanged. Anthracite coal prices are 25c. higher, and quotations for wheat, corn and for oats have all advanced, in addition to which an advance is reported in the Louisville whiskey market. Quotations for lead and for tinplates are as reported a week ago, which is true as to prices of wool, wheat flour and naval stores. The most conspicuous decline is that for cotton, followed naturally by one in print cloths. Hides are lower, as are pork, lard, coffee and refined sugar.

Backward Trades.

The analysis by Bradstreet's of quotations for more than 100 raw and manufactured staple artices of produce, live stock and meats, shows that out of the fifty items which advanced in price in the second quarter of the year, and forty-eight higher for the third quarter, only twenty-eight are identical, these including various grades of hides, nine items in textiles, and eight under metals. The staples, which did not begin to advance until the third quarter of the year, are made up largely of dairy products, fish, fuel and chemicals. A surprising feature is found in the twenty-one staples which present quotations for October 1 as low as or lower than at any previous time of depression in price since the panic of 1893. Producers of food staples and of chemicals and drugs appear to continue the bulk of those who have thus far failed to participate in a revival in prices to anything like the extent enjoyed by manufacturers of textiles and metals.

Lumber for Africa.

On the Pacific coast there is a tendency to increasing strength in the demand for staples at San Francisco, where receipts of wheat as at Portland and at Seattle are freer, the exception being at Tacoma, where arrivals are said to be slow. The last named city reports a shipment of 2,000,000 feet of lumber to South Africa.

Mrs. Gladstone Improving.

London, Oct. 26.—Mrs. Gladstone, who is confined to her bed by weakness, resulting from vertigo, was slightly better this morning.

800 SPANIARDS KILLED.

Most Important Battle Since the Outbreak of the Revolution.

New York, Oct. 26.—The Times to-day prints the following dispatch from Key West: News received here states that General Maceo has by forced marches reached the province of Matanzas, and that last Monday, with 3,000 Cubans, he engaged a cavalry force of 2,800 Spaniards in the San Juan valley. The insurgents were placed in ambush, and the Spaniards did not know of the enemy's presence until they opened fire. The Spaniards made a brave fight, but owing to the thickness of the forest and the boggy condition of the valley, the cavalry were greatly handicapped. After a struggle of four hours the Spanish troops were forced to retreat, leaving 800 men dead on the field.

AUGUSTA'S BIG FIRE.

Several Hundred People Homeless—Forty-four Houses Destroyed.

Augusta, Ga., Oct. 26.—One of the largest fires in the history of Augusta, so far as extent of territory is concerned, visited this city yesterday afternoon. It started in the stables of the lumber and planing mill of Jesse Thompson & Co. and consumed this plant in a few minutes. It was located on the outskirts of the city and on one side was a great stretch of small frame houses. A very high wind was blowing in the direction of these houses and great burning embers were carried high in the air, setting fire to houses two and three blocks away, while those much nearer temporarily escaped destruction. They were doomed, however, for the wind was so fierce and the neighborhood so inflammable that it was at no time under control of the fire department and the fire was not extinguished until it had spent itself. The embers of forty-four houses are all that remain in the burned district, which stretched along several squares. Several hundred people are homeless. The total value of the property destroyed is fully $75,000, on which insurance is only about $25,000 or $30,000.

MRS. O'HEARN PARDONED.

Gov. Morton Exercises Clemency in the Saloon Keeper's Case.

Albany, Oct. 25.—Gov. Morton has granted a pardon to Mrs. Mary O'Hearn, of New York city, who was on September 11 convicted in the court of special sessions of violating the excise law, and sentenced to three months in the penitentiary. The application for clemency was urged by Justices Hinsdale and Jacobs of the court of special sessions, and District Attorney Fellows, as well as by Mayor Strong, Hon. Thomas C. Platt, Frank D. Pavey, John Hedges, besides numerous members of local political organizations and several thousand citizens in all the walks of life. Mrs. O'Hearn is a respectable widow and keeps a saloon in the Harlem district of New York. The particular offense charged was the selling of ten cents' worth of whiskey on Sunday, Sept. 1. She has already been six weeks in prison. The governor was of the opinion that the penalty inflicted was unduly severe for an offense of the character charged.

SHIPBUILDERS' STRIKE.

Difficulty on the Clyde Settled—Still Out at Belfast.

London, Oct. 26.—So far as the Clyde is concerned the difficulty among the employes of the shipbuilding yards has been settled by the men receiving an advance in their wages and agreeing to their employers' demand that they be given six months' notice of future changes. The Belfast strikers are indignant at the offers made to them by the masters, which they have rejected, and the strike there is likely to be a prolonged one.

WM. YOUNG HANGED.

Pays the Death Penalty for the Murder of His Employer.

San Francisco, Oct. 26.—William Young was hanged yesterday afternoon, making a full confession of his crime before ascending the scaffold. The crime for which Young was hanged was the murder of his employer, Peter Latestre, near San Ardo, Monterey county, in the spring of last year. The motive for the crime was robbery, and the killing was done in cold blood.

TWO BODIES FOUND.

Believed These Men Were Struck and Killed by a Train.

Jersey City, N. J., Oct. 25.—Two men who are believed to have been struck by a Pennsylvania train going west, were found dead on the tracks near the Hackensack meadow shops last night. The bodies were brought to this city. One was identified as Thomas Collins. No one knows the name of the other man.

The Jersey City News characterizes the statement of Editor Runyon that "Lindabury is to be Chancellor if McGill is elected Governor," as a blackguard falsehood.

The average Jerseyman is too intelligent to become biased against the candidacy of Chancellor McGill on the fanatical opposition of the A. P. A. over the Catholic Protectory bill.

State Comptroller Hancock has stated that under the contract for State printing given out on Tuesday, if as many laws are passed as last winter, $124,000 will be saved the State over the expense of printing them under the old way. There are to be 25,000 sheets printed of the usual pamphlet size, and 8,000 are to be saved for binding as pamphlets at the close of the season. The rest are to be stitched together weekly or sent out in any form desired, to members of the Legislature and to other persons entitled to them.

With reference to the "same old gang" cry of the Republicans R. V. Lindabury had the following to say in his speech at Elizabeth last night:

It is claimed that the people should vote against Chancellor McGill because of the past misdeeds of certain members of the Democratic party. This claim leaves out of view the fact that evil exists in every party and in every community, and has existed from the beginning of the world. The pertinent inquiry is not who was in control of the party in bygone days, but who is in control of it today? Our adversaries admit this, and answer it by saying the "same old gang." This is simply not true. Look at the past record of the present State committee. Of its twenty-seven members only three have ever been on the committee before, and against those three no word of reproach has ever been heard.

DR. J. A. DEANE CO., Kingston, N. Y.

LAWYER AND STATESMAN.

Hon. Sam'l B. Page Tells You to Use Dr. Greene's Nervura to Cure.

New Hampshire's Best Known Orator and Statesman Says Dr. Greene's Nervura Will Make You Well and Strong.

HON. SAMUEL B. PAGE.

For ten years Hon. Sam'l B. Page of Haverhill, N. H., has been a member and leader in the New Hampshire Legislature, and for twenty-five years has been that State's ablest lawyer and foremost citizen being recognized throughout New England as a most brilliant orator and statesman.

Everybody knows Mr. Page, and when he tells the people everywhere to take Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy to regain their health and strength, when he tells the weak, tired and nervous that this wonderful medicine will make them strong and well, all know that he means just what he says—that they will be cured if they follow his advice and take this remedy.

"I have used Dr. Green's Nervura blood and nerve remedy," says Mr. Page, "and take great pleasure in recommeding its use to all sufferers from any derangement or disturbance of the nervous system. It is peculiarly valuable as a nerve tonic, and I can recommend it to all as an excellent tonic for the system."

Other prominent and well-known people endorse and recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy as the greatest, best and surest cure ever discovered. Such famous and distinguished men as Hon. John F. Dever, Boston's most popular alderman; Hon. Chas. J. Noyes, of Boston, ex-Speaker of the Massachusetts House of Representatives; Hon. T. S. McGinniss of Jericho, Vt., the people's candidate for Governor of Vermont, Chairman of Selectmen Dorman Bridgman of Hardwick, Vt., Alderman Chas. S. Crouch, of Northampton, Mass., and thousands upon thousands of others in public and private life have been cured by this grand medicine and earnestly and heartily recommend all to use it and be cured.

Heed their advice. Use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy and get well.

It is not a patent medicine, but the prescription of the most successful living specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th street, New York City. He has the largest practice in the world, and this grand medical discovery is the result of his vast experience. The great reputation of Dr. Greene is a guarantee that his medicine will cure, and the fact that he can be consulted by anyone at any time, free of charge, personally or by letter, gives absolute assurance of the beneficial action of this wonderful medicine.

THEATRICAL.

At Music Hall, next Friday evening, the splendid aquatic spectacle, "Lost in New York," will be presented for the first time in this theatre. The play is one of the cleverest of all the sensational plays, and is happily free from the blood and thunder and "clap trap" that spoils many plays of this kind. The story is charming and full of heart interest, and written in the best style of the well-known American dramatist, Leonard Grover, who has written many successful plays. The special scenery, which by the way will be all used here, is said to be very realistic and beautiful. The river of real water, said to contain 60,000 gallons of flowing water, a full-rigged yacht, real ferries, and a genuine steamboat, are a few of the mechanical effects produced.

October.

"There is that nameless splendor everywhere,
That wild exhiliration in the air
Which makes the passers in the city street
Congratulate each other as they meet."
Then hurry on to Collier's, to advise
With skilled optician how to save their eyes
For coming years, that they may often share
The splendor that October landscapes wear.

A Household Treasure.

D. W. Fuller, of Canajoharie, N. Y., says that he always keeps Dr. King's New Discovery in the house and his family has always found the very best results follow its use; that he would not be without it, if procurable. G. A. Dykeman Druggist, Catskill, N. Y., says that Dr. King's New Discovery is undoubtedly the best cough remedy: that he has used it in his family for eight years, and it has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. IN DURRANT'S DEFENSE

Brilliant Speech of the Accused Man's Counsel.

Five Hours Occupied in Its Delivery—The Evidence Gone Over in Detail—Conduct of Victim and Accused—The Pivotal Point—To Resume Next Tuesday.

San Francisco, Oct. 26.—Gen. Dickinson addressed the Durrant jury in a brilliant speech in behalf of the defense yesterday, occupying five hours. He commenced by stating that he would at once enter upon consideration of the testimony without any introduction. He referred to April 3 and said he would consider the two leading characters in the tragedy. One was the young man who had borne an unsullied reputation and who bore it still. There was nothing in the testimony, he said, which could be based as a single motive for the crime. The young lady was also of unimpeachable character, and there was nothing to show any undue intimacy between her and the defendant.

Conduct of Victim and Accused.

The conduct of both was perfectly natural. Durrant's actions on the evening of the 3d of April were perfectly natural. He told Miss Lamont's aunt about riding with her and also that he had promised her a book, and on the following Friday took the book to her home. That was not the act of a guilty man. Durrant's attendance at Dr. Cheney's lecture was proved by the testimony of every witness on that point.

The Pivotal Point.

By the testimony of Dr. Cheney a roll call was kept and it was called after the lecture and he believed it to be correct. No testimony could be more direct. Counsel also argued that the testimony of Dr. Gray, who kept the roll, showed conclusively that the book was reliable. It was undoubtedly the pivotal point of the case, and if it was correct the prosecution had failed in every other point.

To Resume Next Tuesday.

Dickinson asked to be allowed to complete his argument Tuesday morning, and the request was granted. The court adjourned to that time.

WISCONSIN FOREST FIRES.

Continue To Spread with Alarming Rapidity—Much Damage Done.

Green Bay, Wis., Oct. 26.—The marsh and forest fires in the vicinity of Berlin, Bark River, Brillion, Seymour and New London continue to spread with alarming rapidity. They are burning furiously on both sides of the Green Bay, Winona and St. Paul tracks from Oneida for a distance of thirty miles west. Many hundred tons of hay and a number of barns and farm houses have been burned. At New London the ties on the railroad are frequently set on fire, and large forces of men are constantly employed in watching the bridges and culverts. Last night the smoke in this city was so dense as to be painful and kept people in doors.

What is

CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
Dr. G. C. Osgood, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
Dr. J. F. Kincheloe, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. Archer, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."
United Hospital and Dispensary, Boston, Mass.

CHAPTER III.

The floe, as you will remember, had been battered and tormented by the autumn gales till it was one frozen earthquake. There were gullies and ravines; and holes like gravel pits cut out of ice; lumps and scattered pieces frozen down to the original floor of the floe; blotches of old black ice that had been thrust under the floe in some gale, and heaved up again; roundish bowlders of ice; saw-like edges of ice carved by the snow that flies before the wind, and sunk pits where thirty or forty acres lay five or six feet below the level of the rest of the field. From a little distance you might have taken the lumps for seal, or walrus, overturned sleighs or men on a hunting expedition or even the great ten-legged white Spiritbear himself, but in spite of all these fantastic shapes, all on the very edge of starting into life, there was neither sound nor the least faint echo of sound. And through this silence and through this waste where the sudden lights flapped and went out again the sleigh and the two that pulled it crawled like things in a nightmare—a nightmare of the end of the world at the end of the world.

When they were tired Kotuko would make what the hunters call a "half house"—a very small snow hut into which they would huddle with the traveling lamp and try to thaw out the frozen seal meat. When they had slept, the march began again—thirty miles a day to get ten miles northward. The girl was always very silent, but Kotuko muttered to himself and broke out into songs he had learned in the singing house—summer songs and reindeer and salmon songs—all horribly out of place at that season. He would declare that he heard the tornaq growling to him and would run wildly up a hummock tossing his arms and speaking to some one in loud threatening tones. To tell the truth Kotuko was very nearly crazy for the time being; but the girl was sure that he was being guided by his guardian spirit and that everything would come right. She was not surprised therefore when, at the end of the fourth march, Kotuko, whose eyes were burning like fire balls in his head, told her that his tornaq was following them across the snow in the shape of a two-headed dog. The girl looked where Kotuko pointed and something seemed to slip into a ravine. It was certainly not human, but everybody knew that the tornait preferred to appear in the shape of bear and seal and such like.

It might have been the ten-legged white Spiritbear himself, or it might have been anything, for Kotuko and the girl were so starved that their eyes betrayed them. They had trapped nothing and seen no trace of game since they had left the village; their food would not hold out for another week and there was a gale coming. A polar storm will sometimes blow for ten days without a break, and all that time it is certain death to be abroad. Kotuko laid up a snowhouse large enough to take in the hand sleigh—it is never wise to be separated from your meat—and while he was shaping the last irregular block of ice that makes the keystone of the roof he saw a thing looking at him from a little cliff of ice half a mile away. The air was hazy and the thing seemed to be forty feet long and ten feet high with twenty feet of tail and a shape that quivered all along the outlines. The girl saw it too, but instead of crying aloud with terror said quietly: "That is Quiquern. What comes after?"

"He will speak to me," said Kotuko, but the snow-knife trembled in his hand as he spoke, because, however much a man may believe that he is a friend of strange and ugly spirits he seldom likes to be taken at his word. The Quiquern too is the phantom of a gigantic toothless dog without any hair who is supposed to live in the far north and to wander about the country just before things are going to happen. They may be pleasant or unpleasant things, but not even the angekok care to speak about Quiquern. He makes the dogs go mad. Like Spiritbear he has several extra pairs of legs—six or eight—and this thing jumping up and down in the haze had more legs than any real dog needs.

Kotuko and the girl huddled into their hut quickly. Of course, if Quiquern had wanted them he could have torn it to pieces above their heads, but the sense of a foot-thick snow-wall between themselves and the wicked dark was a great comfort. The gale broke with a shriek of wind caught in the jagged ice, like the shriek of a train, and for three days and three nights it held, never varying one point and never lulling even for a minute. They fed the stone lamp between their knees and nibbled at the half-warmed seals' meat, and watched the black soot gather on the roof for seventy-two long hours. The girl counted up the food in the sleigh; there was not more than three days' supply, and Kotuko looked over the iron heads and the deer-sinew fastenings of his harpoon and his seal-hook and his bird-dart. There was nothing else to do.

"We shall go to Sedna soon—very soon," the girl whispered. "In four days we shall lie down and go. Will your tornaq do nothing? Sing her an angekok's song to make her come here."

He began to sing in the high-pitched howl of the magic songs, and the gale went down slowly. In the middle of his song the girl started, laid her mittened hand and then her head to the ice floor of the hut. Kotuko followed her example and the two kneeled staring into each other's eyes and listening with every nerve. He ripped a thin sliver of whalebone from the rim of a bird snare that lay on the sleigh and after straightening set it up upright in a little hole in the ice, firming it down with his mitten. It was almost as delicately adjusted as a compass needle, and now instead of listening they watched. The thin rod quivered a little—the least little jar in the world—then it vibrated steadily for a few seconds, came to rest and vibrated again, this time nodding to another point of the compass.

"Too soon!" said Kotuko. "Some big floe has broken far away outside."

The girl pointed at the rod and shook her head. "It is a breaking," she said. "Listen to the ground-ice? It knocks."

When they kneeled this time they heard the most curious muffled grunts, and knockings under their feet. Sometimes it sounded as though a blind puppy were squeaking above the lamp; then as if a stone were being ground on hard ice; and again like muffled blows on a drum, but all dragged out and made small as though they traveled through a little horn a weary distance away.

"We shall not go to Sedna lying down," said Kotuko. "It is a breaking. The tornaq has cheated us. We shall die."

All this may sound absurd enough, but the two were face to face with a very real danger. The three days' gale had driven the deep water of Baffin's bay southerly and piled it on the edge of the far-reaching land ice that stretches from Bylot's island to the west. Also the strong current which sets out of Lancaster sound carried with it miles and miles of what they call pack-ice, rough ice that has not frozen into fields; and this pack was bombarding the floe at the same time that the swell and heave of the storm-worked sea was weakening and undermining it. What Kotuko and the girl had been listening to were the faint echoes of that fight thirty or forty miles away, while the little rod quivered to the shock of it.

Now, as the Inuit say, when the ice once wakes after its long winter sleep there is no knowing what may happen, for solid floe-ice changes shape as swiftly as a cloud. The gale was evidently a spring gale sent out of time and anything was possible.

Yet the two were happier in their minds than before. If the floe broke up there would be no more waiting and suffering. Spirits, goblins and witch-people were moving about on the racking ice and they might find themselves stepping into Sedna's country side by side with all sorts of wild things, the flush of excitement still on them. When they left the hut after the gale the noise on the horizon was steadily growing and the tough ice moaned and buzzed all around them.

"Is it still waiting," said Kotuko.

MUNYON

Has a Cure for Every Disease

The Famous Professor's Marvelous Success Depends on the Preparation of a Separate Specific for Each Ailment.

Professor Munyon does not claim that he has one remedy that will cure all complaints, but that he has prepared specific cures for nearly all diseases. He does not claim that his Rheumatism Cure will cure consumption or dyspepsia, but he does claim that it will cure rheumatism. His Dyspepsia Cure is prepared expressly to cure dyspepsia and all stomach troubles; his Cough Cure will cure coughs and all lung complaints; his Catarrh remedies to cure catarrh. The same may be said of all his different remedies.

Munyon's Remedies are absolutely harmless and effect positive and permanent cures. A separate specific for each disease. At all druggists, mostly at 25c a bottle.

A Statesman's Indorsement.

The Hon. W. D. Farnham, Jr., of 82 Devonshire st., Boston, Mass., says: "Of the many medicines I have tried to relieve the terrible distress of indigestion, I know of nothing equal to Munyon's Dyspepsia Cure. I have suffered with this trouble for many years and during an unusually severe attack last month a friend gave me a small bottle of Munyon's Cure to try, from which I received almost instant relief. I find that these pellets produce no unpleasant effects, while performing a complete cure."

Personal letters to Prof. Munyon, 1505 Arch st., Philadelphia, Pa., answered with free medical advice for any disease.

HOW TO GET STRENGTH.

BLOOD GIVES STRENGTH.

Kidneys Filter the Blood and Take Out Poisonous Matter Which Weakens the System—Blood and Kidney Troubles Related—How They May Be Got Rid Of.

Blood is the strength of the body.

It makes flesh and muscle. It gets nourishment from the stomach and bowels, and distributes it where needed.

It drains away all the worn out matter.

Every movement we make, wears out some of our tissue or flesh. This worn-out matter is carried away by the blood.

The blood which contains it is poisonous, because the dead tissue is poisonous.

So it goes to the kidneys to be purified.

The kidneys are simply blood filters.

They filter out the bad matter from the blood and expel it from the body. They leave the good matter in.

The purified blood goes on and builds up the body.

But there comes a time when the kidneys don't do their duty.

Water filters need cleaning now and then. So do blood filters.

When your kidneys are overworked, they fail sick. When they are sick, they can't filter your blood.

When your blood is not pure, there is no knowing what disease you may suffer from.

Unfiltered blood makes Sores, Pimples, Blotches, causes Headache, Dizziness, Neuralgia, Loss of Ambition, Tiredness in the Bones and Muscles, Pains in the Joints and Muscles, Pale Sickly Complexion, Depression of Spirits, and such well known diseases as Rheumatism, Gout, Anaemia, Chlorosis or Green Sickness, Hysteria, etc.

To cure them, all you have to do is to filter your blood.

The kidneys will do it if you will cure them.

You can cure them with Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills.

Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills will also cure such kidney troubles as Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Nephritis, etc.

These kidney troubles are also caused by impure blood.

First the kidneys refuse to work, then the impure blood poisons the system, and with it the kidneys themselves.

Many people make the mistake of supposing the stomach can purify the blood.

It can't.

Only the kidneys can do it.

That is what they are there for.

So that ordinary "blood purifiers" are a mistake.

A kidney medicine is what should be taken.

And then, only a kidney medicine that has the proper action on the kidneys, such as Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills.

Asparagus is the only plant which has just the right medicinal action on the kidneys, to cure them when overworked and tone them up, so that they commence to purify the blood.

Asparagus cures the sick kidneys and acts naturally as a gentle tonic and regulator.

It is the principal ingredient, made by a special process, in Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills.

Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills is the only remedy which contains this especially prepared Asparagus.

Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills will cure when other prescriptions and medicines will not even relieve.

They are for sale at all druggists for 50 cents per box, or will be sent prepaid to any address on receipt of price.

Valuable pamphlet "A Filter for Your blood" mailed free on request. Hobb's Mecicine Co., Chicago or San Francisco.

PROGRESSIVE WHIST.

A Gay Party Entertained at the Home of Mr. and Mrs. Dickinson.

A progressive whist party was given last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Caleb Dickinson, on East Fifth street, by a number of the lady boarders, and a very pleasant evening spent. Among those present were the following: Misses Billings, Reynolds, Filmer, Lee, Clawson and Sims; Messrs. Howland, Newton, Robbins, Sloan, Hall and Doane; Mr. and Mrs. Caleb Dickinson and Mr. and Mrs. Will F. Williams. For the lady's first prize Mrs. Dickinson and Miss Reynolds were tied, and in the draw Miss Reynolds was the lucky one. For the gentleman's first prize Messrs. Doane, Hall and Newton tied, and in the draw the former was the winner. The consolation prizes went to Miss Billings and Mr. Sloan. After the playing was finished refrrshments were served, and instrumental and vocal music indulged in.

CARTER SENT TO JAIL.

But Potter Did Right and Was Not Punished.

The two colored men who were arrested for fighting at T. A. B. Hall Thursday evening, as told in yesterday's Daily Press, came up before Judge Coddington last evening. The story was the same as told in The Daily Press, and after listening to the testimony the Judge gave Walter Carter, the man that started the racket, sixty days straight in the county jail. George Potter, who objected to seeing a woman struck, had sentence suspended on him.

To Sue for Abduction.

Mrs. Peter Brunn, of Stone street, will shortly begin an action at law against the parties who endeavored to abduct her children on Tuesday last. Her lawyers are already at work on the case.

To Interest the Lads.

The committee on junior work at the Y. M. C. A. building met at that place last evening and discussed social features for the winter. It was decided to hold frequent meetings and have prominent men give interesting talks on various subjects.

Tolls for Scudding Wheelmen.

HERE'S A WHOLE FAMILY.

Husband, Wife and Children Made Well By Paine's Celery Gompound.

The pre-eminence of Paine's celery compound over all other remedies could not be better illustrated than in the case of the Turney family of St. Anthony, Iowa.

Mrs. Turney had recovered her health by the use of Paine's celery compound.

She had suffered from a variety of ills, all due to a nervous system improperly nourished.

As frequently happens the entire family, overcome perhaps by anxiety and care, began to feel "run down" and to suffer with the hardest disease in the world to diagnosis—the trouble they have when they say: "Doctor, I don't feel well."

The advice of their physicians to use Paine's celery compound, the one known remedy that restores lost nervous energy, creates an appetite, purifies the blood and builds up the strength of the entire system, was followed. Mrs. Turney, in a letter to Wells & Richardson Co., who prepare the remedy, soon wrote as follows:

"My husband and three children were as greatly benefited by the use of Paine's celery compound as I was after an unusually hard siege of the grip, with variations of the disease. We regard the compound as a most remarkable remedy."

As the winter comes on many people will begin to suffer from debility, and lack of rallying powers after a slight chill or cold.

The real trouble is a run-down constitution of the nerves and blood, and Paine's celery compound, as in the case of Mrs. Turney and her family, will make them well again.

Rheumatism and neuralgia too grow more dangerous and more painful with cold weather.

This increased pain points to increased activity of these disorders.

There is positive danger in allowing the system to meet the perils of winter handicapped by rheumatism and neuralgia, or any disease that comes from poor blood and bad nerves.

There is the same certainty of getting rid of these two diseases that there is of a complete recovery from sleeplessness, nervous weakness, hysteria, or any other result of impoverished nerves and blood. Physicians today get rid of rheumatism and neuralgia as they do sleeplessness, melancholia and nervous dyspepsia by building up the system and supporting its delicate nerve parts with Paines celery compound.

Paine's celery compound restores vitality to tired nerves; it feeds every tissue of the body when unusual waste has reduced the weight and strength of the body, as is frequently the case at the close of the heated season. It gives new appetite, and keeps every part of the body, nerves and blood so well nourished that the nervous, exhausted, tired, "run down" feeling from worry and hard work soon disappears. Try it.

are doing all the business. Our stock is the largest, prices are the lowest and terms the easiest in the city. Just give it a passing thought that you can get an antique oak bedroom suit, 8 pieces, for $15, $20, $25 and $30, including a woven wire bed spring and a mixed mattress. No house in the city offers such inducements.

And then to think again that you can get tapestry Brussels carpet for 50, 60, and 70 cents a yard, made and laid with paper, which is a saving of 15c per yard. Where is there a house in the city that will offer such bargains?

And then imagine and wonder how we can afford to give away a moquette rug or parlor table with a parlor suit for $20, $30, $40 or $50.

Some of our competitors say that our ads are too much samened, and that this ad. is old. Well, we will admit it, but as long as it does the business and saves the people money we will continue to run it.

HELPING TO PAY THE CITY NURSE.

Opportunity Circle of King's Daughters Raise $31.

The Opportunity Circle of King's Daughters, of the Crescent Avenue church, conducted a very successful cake and candy sale in the chapel of the church on Saturday afternoon for the purpose of raising money to pay their share toward supporting the city nurse at Muhlenberg Hospital.

The room was prettily trimmed with purple and white, as was also the various tables. During the afternoon many friends of the circle were present and assisted materially in making the affair a success.

The candy table was in charge of Mrs. Rabriskie, Mrs. Budlong and Mrs. Craighead, the cake and preserve table, Mrs. Ege and Mrs. Ford. The Misses May and Sophie Elliott presided at the apron table, while bouillon was daintily served by Mrs. A. Marsh, Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. Stiles.

It is thought that about $31 will be realized from the sale.

The officers of the circle are: President, Mrs. Frances Harder; Vice President, Miss Sophia Elliott; Treasurer, Miss May Elliott; Secretary, Mrs. Stiles.

A WOMAN CANDIDATE.

A Former Plainfield Lady Wants to Be School Commissioner.

The Saturday issue of The Mail and Express has an interesting account of the convention of Women's Clubs held at Newark last week from the pen of Florence Howe Hall. Reference is made in the article to the paper on Evelyn College, given by Mrs. Marie H. Marshall, of Montclair, who is referred to as a candidate for school commissioner in Montclair and who received such a large number of votes. Improvements.

The Commercial Palace never looked handsomer than it did last Saturday evening. Seven display tables were erected, and the eye dazzled and its mind bewildered by this panorama of curioies, bric-a-brac, beautiful Dresden ware, and real French china. The children revel in the mechanical toys, crying babies, real steam yachts and moving trains of cars in fact it is a pleasure ground, from which both old and young depart with reluctance.

FIRST FOOTBALL GAME A TIE.

Y. M. C. A. AND WESTFIELD CONTEST SATURDAY AFTERNOON.

Plainfield Has a Lusty Eleven Who Put Up a Strong Game With Little Practice—Ball in Westfield Territory Mostly.

The Plainfield Y. M. C. A. eleven went to Westfield Saturday with the expectation of playing the first game for the Central New Jersey football championship, but Westfield did not understand it in that light. The result however was a tie, 0 to 0, so that it made no difference whether it was a championship game or not. Plainfield went to Westfield with a team that had never played together before, while the Westfield men have played several games and have also had plenty of practice. Considering the fact that the ball was in Westfield's territory most of the first half and all of the second, the game can be looked upon in almost the light of victory.

Plainfield won the toss and Captain Schoonmaker choose the southern goal. Westfield took the kickoff and sent the ball right into the hands of Smith who ran to the twenty-five yard line before he was downed. The ball was then passed to Serrell who circled left end for a gain of twenty yards. Just as he was downed, however, the ball was knocked from his grasp and a Westfield player fell on it. Then by short rushes between guard and tackle Westfield gradually worked her way toward Plainfield's goal. She lost it on three downs and Plainfield tried her luck. Freeman made several good runs and through fumbles the ball changed hands several times. Voight seemed to be the best Westfield had, but continual bucking the line was too much for him, and the Plainfield boys held their opponents for three downs. The signal for a kick came and Cathcart sent the ball far down towards Westfield's goal. Voight was waiting for it, but no sooner was the ball in his arms than Green was upon him and downed him heavily. With varying success, both teams rushed the ball back and forth in Westfield's territory until the fifteen minute half was up.

The first half served to warm up the Y. M. C. A. players and they put up a much better game in the second half. Cathcart kicked off and Voight caught it and ran fifteen yards before being downed. Westfield bucked the line with her superior weight, but very seldom tried to circle the ends, as it was usually a losing game for them. The ball changed hands continually, but the running of Cathcart, Freeman and Serrell gradulaly lessened the distance to Westfield's goal.

The playing of the Plainfield boys was especially good in this half. Cuming, who was new at centre, put up a fine game and several times broke the line in time to tackle the runner before he had rounded the curve. Cathcart twice saved the day for Plainfield by tackling a Westfield runner, who had a clear field ahead of him. Smith and Green deserve special credit for their end work. Both teams played a hard game, and all of Plainfield's backs had to lay off for a few minutes to recover their wind. Gradually the ball was approaching Westfield's goal, but when within ten yards of it, the referee called time and the game was over.

The referee, Strother W. Rice, was very satisfactory to both clubs, and the umpire, Jud Manghany, manager of the Westfield club, apparently tried to do his best. The linesmen were W. Dorr and Mr. Condit.

The line-up of the two teams was as follows:

WESTFIELD F. A.		PLAINFIELD Y. M. C. A.
W. Griswold	Left end	T. U. Smith
H. Randolph	Left tackle	W. M. McClure
J. Wherry	Left guard	R. A. McGee
C. Bussing	Centre	T. A. Cuming
J. Morrow	Right guard	E. Brown
R. Wherry	Right tackle	H. Moore
W. Bussing	Right end	V. F. Green
W. Roberts	Quarter back	G. Schoonmaker
R. Carberry	Left half back	E. I. Serrell
C. Richards	Right half back	F. H. Freeman
J. Voight	Full back	Geo. Cathcart

In the second half the teams were the same, except that on the Westfield eleven Roberts and W. Bussing changed places.

A return game was to have been played in Plainfield on election day, but Westfield notified Manager Smith that they would be unable to play that day and asked for a game some Saturday in November. A game with some other team will therefore be arranged for election day.

There was a large number of Plainfield enthusiasts who went to Westfield to see the game and encourage their players with the Y. M. C. A. yell.

A GAMBLING DEN RAIDED.

And the Five Victims Caught Were Each Fined $5.

For some time the police have been watching a certain barn on East Second street, near Park avenue, where a gambling den was said to be located. Yesterday afternoon when most of Plainfield's good citizens were coming home from church, Sergeant Kiely made a little raid all by himself and captured five victims who were enjoying themselves there. The Sergeant kindly informed them of the fact that they were all his prisoners and that if some of them did run away he would catch them again. The prisoners followed their captor, however, over to the jail and Judge Coddington soon came and fined John Long, Harrison Randolph, Geo. Nolan, William McCready and Frank Herbert $5 each for gambling. They all pleaded guilty and said that they were simply having a friendly game.

E. Forrest has opened a new candy store on West Front street, which is called "The Old Homestead."

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family has need of it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once and you will never regret it. COULDN'T FIX THE THEFT.

George Mobus Accuses Auguste Failly of Stealing His Pocketbook.

On complaint of Augustus Mobus for his brother George Mobus, Justice Mattison issued a warrant Saturday night for the arrest of Auguste Failly, charging him with stealing $19.25 and a pair of trousers valued at $2. Constable Taynor arrested Failly in a barber shop about twelve o'clock Saturday night, and this morning the case was brought before Justice Mattison, when the following facts were brought out.

George Mobus and Auguste Failly occupied two beds in one room at Mrs. Krieg's boarding house back of the Clinton Avenue railroad station. Friday night Mobus placed his pocketbook, containing $19.25, under his pillow for safe-keeping.

Saturday morning he awoke about 5:30, and went out to look after his team, leaving his money under the pillow. When he returned about noon it was gone, and he thought Failly had taken it.

At the hearing no evidence was produced to prove that Failly had committed the theft except that he slept in the same room, and Justice Mattison dismissed the case.

ALL THREE WERE DRUNK.

One Thought He Owned the Town and the Others Chased the Women.

Two Italians and a drunk made up the usual Monday morning batch in the city court this morning and it did not take long to deal with them. John Duffy was brought in Saturday evening by Officer Vanderweg because he thought that he owned Liberty street. He had taken a drop too much and had to pay $5 for his fun. The two Italians, Joe Polws and Frank Rosenvelt, made things rather lively on Cottage place for the same reason. They tried to assault several women and became so obnoxious that Sergeant Kiely was sent for and found them in the cider joint where they were indulging in that "sweet" liquid on which they had become intoxicated. The Sergeant marched them down to the lockup with the assistance of Officer Mattox. The Judge thought their actions merited a fine of $8 which they finally paid.

GOLFING ON ELECTION DAY.

FORMAL OPENING OF THE HILLSIDE COURSE NEXT TUESDAY.

Considerable Playing Was Enjoyed Last Saturday, Though—The Out-of-Town Golfers to Be Entertained at Tea.

The golf course of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club presented a very attractive appearance on Saturday afternoon and the green was dotted from start to finish with parties of two or three to half-a-dozen golfers with their clubs and caddies. The flags, discs and holes were all in place and the sod on the putting greens all laid, so that the game went on with energy from early afternoon until it became too dark to see the ball. Many people drove to the course and followed the game as best they could from the road, while others came on horseback or on their wheels.

It was originally proposed to hold the formal opening of the club on Saturday, November 2d, but the golf committee has decided to postpone it until election day, Tuesday, November 5th, as more players from out of town can be present on that day. By that time the green will have become smoother and in better condition for expert play. A large number of guests are expected and a number of ladies will be asked to receive for the club, as in the tennis teas that have proved so successful in past seasons.

The out-of-town golfers will be entertained by the club and, if the weather is favorable the affair should prove most attractive to Plainfield society folks.

The corn is very different from the American variety as the heads hang down and have no cob, but are bunched together more like wheat.

A DRAW AT BOWLS ON THE GREEN.

Exciting Game Played at Christian Schepflin's Last Saturday.

The result of the match on Saturday at bowls on the green at Christian Schepflin's at Dunellen, between the New Jersey Bowling Green Club and the Middlesex Bowling Club, of New Brunswick, was a draw.

Three rinks were formed, and the totals by rinks were:

RINK NO. 1.

Middlesex Bowling Club	21
RINK NO. 2.
N. J. Bowling Club	21
Middlesex Bowling Club	17
RINK NO. 3.
N. J. Bowling Club	22
Middlesex Bowling Club	21

Totals—59 each.

The green was in better shape than could have been anticipated, owing to the long recent drouth, and the gentlemen present were more than pleased with its condition and the generous reception tendered to the New Jersey team by the Middlesex.

Prominent among the bowlers and guests were Christian Schepflin, Dr. Richter, H. Brewster Willis, ex-Sheriff Peter Fink, Wm. Elliott, John Young, Charles Westervelt and Judge Moore. The assemblage departed at dusk.

This is the first time in the history of bowling on the green in this or any other country that a draw has ever been made in a contest where three rinks were used.

TWO OF A MOB KILLED

Troops Repulse an Attack on an Ohio Jail.

The Infuriated Populace Attempted To Avenge the Murder of City Marshal Schultz by Farmer Martin—No Further Trouble Expected.

Events Leading to the Affray.

Tiffin, O., Oct. 28.—In an attempt yesterday morning to avenge the murder of August Schultz, Tiffin's city marshal, who was shot in cold blood by Leando J. Martin, alias Williams, a farmer of Hopewell township, last Wednesday evening, two more victims are added to the tragic affair. At 1:30 o'clock a mob of 150 infuriated men, many of whom were under the influence of liquor, attacked the jail in an effort to secure Martin and hang him. A volley from half a dozen Winchesters met them and two of the mob were killed. They are Henry Mutchler, jr., and Christian Matz.

Troops Called Out.

At daylight crowds began to gather in the neighborhood of the jail, and the sheriff, Van Nest, fearing further trouble, called out company C of the Sixteenth regiment, O. N. G., to maintain order. The company, which is stationed here, is not numerically strong, and the sheriff, thinking that Capt. Loomis' men would be unable to cope with a more general civic uprising, telegraphed Gov. McKinley for more troops.

Vengeance Threatened.

The governor complied with the request, ordering three additional companies to the scene. During the day one company each came from Fremont and Sandusky, and late last evening the company from Kenton arrived on the Big Four. It is not believed that there will be any further trouble, yet the friends of the dead men threaten vengeance to the guards who fired on the mob and the dead marshal's friends say they will kill Martin if they can get to him.

Martin Spirited Away.

Martin was spirited away to Fremont long before daylight, but this the people refused to believe. The names of the guards who fired the fatal volley are known only to Sheriff Van Nest. Three hundred militiamen are now guarding the jail.

Events Leading to the Attack.

Martin runs a small farm near Watson station, six miles south of town. Wednesday afternoon he got into a controversy with a son of a neighboring farmer. The boy, who is scarcely 15 years of age, had refused to obey some trivial request of Martin and the farmer flew into a rage. He struck the boy with his fist and then seized him by the neck, nearly strangling him. The boy finally succeeded in breaking away, and, half dead though he was, reached town where he told his story to the police.

Death of Marshal Schultz.

Officer Pat Sweeny and Marshal Schultz immediately started for the Martin farm. Martin was still in front of the house and apparently saw them approaching, for he rushed inside and when they arrived had barricaded the doors and was watching from one of the windows. Sweeny and Schultz had not taken the affair very seriously and had expected no determined opposition. They walked direct to the door of the house, but when they reached close range Martin opened fire from the window. They blazed away in return, but before more than half a dozen shots had been fired both officers had fallen. Schultz died almost instantly where he had fallen. Sweeney managed to escape with two severe, but not fatal, wounds.

The Murderer Surrenders.

Reinforcements arrived later from town and Martin seeing that further resistance was useless laid down his arms and surrendered. The news of the death of Schultz caused the wildest excitement in town and among the neighboring farms where the dead man was well known and liked.

DURRANT'S ALLEGED SECRET.

What He Is Said To Have Written in the Sealed Letter.

San Francisco, Oct. 28.—The Examiner says that the mysterious statement which Theodore Durrant addressed to his attorneys, and over which there has been so much speculation, was placed in the hands of the attorneys for the defense before Mr. Deuprey made his opening statement to the jury. Every effort has been made to keep these facts secret, but they have become known and denials are without effect. Durrant's attorneys knew his secret then and know it now. If what he said were true, he should be the leading witness for the state in a case against two murderers instead of a man defending his own life against tremendous odds. He told his attorneys that he knew the murderers of Blanche Lamont, for there were more than one. He said that when he ascended to the upper galleries of Emanuel church he saw the last details of a murder. He wrote in his letter that he saw the Rev. J. George Gibson and a young man prominent in the affairs of the church bending over the body of Blanche Lamont. Attorney Eugene Deuprey is still weak and it is by no means certain that he will appear again in the case. Gen. Dickinson says he will close at noon to-morrow, and therefore a verdict may be expected not later than Friday.

FIGHT ON THE STAGE.

Two Sets of Constables Attempt to Execute Warrants of Arrest.

Columbus, O., Oct. 28.—A fight between constables on the stage caused great excitement at the Grand Opera house last night where the Suanee River company gave a performance. For three successive Sundays the performance at this house have been stopped by warrants bassed on the Sunday laws. Last night Manager Miller arranged to have the warrants issued from the court of a country squire and served upon himself and members of the company at the opening of the performance. The constables permitted the actors to finish the performance before taking them to court. When the other constables arrived with the usual Sunday warrants the constables from the country squire's office claimed the prisoners and a hand-to-hand fight ensued. The country constables were victorious and hustled their opponents from the stage and ejected them from the house while the audience cheered. The performance was concluded without further hindrance and the whole party, nearly seventy-five people, took carriages into the country to enter bonds.

The subject of the sermon was "All Heaven Looking On," the leading thought being that the "great cloud of witnesses" compassing the Christian in his care are those who, having endured and won, have entered into their eternal reward.

Three Children Lose Their Lives in Wisconsin.

Left Alone in the House They Become Panic-Stricken—Several Indians Reported Burned to Death in Oklahoma by Prairie Fires. Fighting Flames in Indiana.

Green Bay, Wis., Oct. 28.—Information has reached this city from the Oneida reservation of the death of three children of John Skanidore as a result of the forest fires raging in that region. A number of dwellings were burned, some of them on the reservation and others just outside. Among those destroyed was that of Skanidore.

The Children Panic Stricken.

His three children were alone in the house. The fire came down on the neighborhood very rapidly with a sudden change of wind and several had narrow escapes from death. It is supposed the children became panic stricken when the house took fire and were unable to help themselves.

Berlin, Oct. 28.—A banquet in memory of Prince Frederick Charles, who died at Potsdam in 1885, was given last night at the kaiserhof, and was attended by Emperor William and a large number of high military officers. He was in high spirits and conversed animatedly with the other guests. He made a short speech, in the course of which he said: "Who will blame us for celebrating the princely general who won great battles for us, whose value we all know, especially myself, who have just returned from the ground where his greatest victories were achieved? Let us vow this day to preserve what he created, and dedicate ourselves to perfecting the same. Let us in silence empty our glasses to his memory."

YOUNG GIRLS.

INTERESTING CONCLUSIONS.

Mothers Agree on One Vital Subject.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Young girls, to the thinking mind, are ever subjects of the deepest interest.

Some lead lives of luxury, while others toil for mere existence. Separate, however, as their paths in life may lie, Nature demands of them the same obedience. All are subject to the same physical laws, and suffer in proportion to their violation.

Young girls are reticent through modesty, and often withhold what ought to be told.

Yet they are not to blame, for information on such subjects has been withheld from them, owing to the false interpretation of a mother's duty.

In such cases they should do as thousands of young ladies are doing every day: write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., giving as nearly as possible their symptoms, and receive her freely given advice and timely aid.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the young girl's most tried friend. It can be obtained of any druggist, and speedily relieves and cures irregularities, suspension, retention, and all derangements of the womb and ovaries.

It banishes promptly all pains, headache, backache, faintness, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholia, etc. Young girls must know that self-preservation is the first law of nature.

PLANS OF GEN. CAMPOS

He Will Thoroughly Try a Policy of Leniency.

If a Change Becomes Necessary 150,000 More Troops Will Be Required, of Whom 75,000 Will Die. He Will Assume the Offensive Against the Rebels Next Month.

Madrid, Oct. 28.—An official dispatch confirms the report of the stranding of the government launch Caridad near Sierra Morena, Cuba, during the hurricane that recently passed over that island. A dispatch to the Imparcial from Havana says that in an interview Captain General Campos said he was determined to thoroughly try a policy of leniency towards the insurgents. According to the dispatch Marshal Campos declared that if a change in this policy was found necessary 150,000 more troops would be required to quell the insurrection, and even then 75,000 men would perish.

To Assume the Offensive.

He mentioned the plan, already outlined in dispatches to the United Press, to assume the offensive next month in the province of Santa Clara, he then personally leading a force of 25,000 men and moving forward in an extensive line across the whole island, thus driving the rebels into the mountains and forests of the provinces of Puerto Principe and Santiago de Cuba before the middle of March.

An Alternative Scheme.

The rebellion will thus be isolated in the eastern part of the island, where Marshal Campos thinks the resistance to the government is likely to be prolonged. The plan includes the alternative scheme of dividing the island into zones, each of which will be allotted to a different commander whose duty it will be to constantly patrol his zone, driving the insurgents from point to point, and also the making of attacks concurrently on several places. Should this latter plan be adopted Marshal Campos hopes to have the first zone cleared of insurgents in two months.

Sanitary Conditions.

He observed that Spain was ready to send even more troops than he had asked for, but the speediest dispatch of the reinforcements was imperative. He declared that the sanitary department was excellently organized and that there were plenty of hospitals. True, he added, all the doctors are not acquainted with yellow fever, but they confronted their duties with the greatest heroism. Thirteen of the doctors had died since the outbreak of the rebellion.

United States Dragged In.

Continuing, the captain-general said he believed that the United States would eventually recognize the insurgents as belligerents, but he did not fear the result of such recognition. It would clear the air, and the Spanish fleet would be able to seize filibusters anywhere, because a foreign flag could not cover contraband of war. If the United States were determined to secure the independence of Cuba and sent an army to the island the present obscure operations would be replaced by a real war, the success of which would depend on pitched battles. In that case, if the chances of war did not favor Spain, the island would, at least, be honorably lost.

STRUCK WITH AN IRON BAR.

Murderous Attack on the Director of a Havana Newspaper.

Havana, Oct. 28.—A sensation has been caused in this city by the murderous attack that was made on the director of the Diario de la Marina, the organ here of the government. The director was passing along a street when a negro suddenly sprang in front of him from the doorway of one of the houses, the entrances of which here open directly on the street, and struck him a violent blow over the right eye with a heavy iron bar, felling him to the ground and inflicting a serious wound. Evidently thinking that the blow had been a fatal one, the negro fled, and despite the efforts of the police to apprehend him, he is still at liberty. It is surmised that the attack grew out of the attitude of the Diario de la Marina towards the insurgents, and that the would-be assassin is himself a rebel or a rebel sympathizer.

HASTINGS DISCHARGED.

No Evidence To Hold Him on the Charge of Assault.

New York, Oct. 28.—When Cuyler Hastings was called upon in Jefferson Market court to answer the charge of assault prefered by Maggie Murphy Commodore Gerry addressed Magistrate Wentworth and said that he had thoroughly investigated the charges against Hastings and was convinced of his innocence. The court granted Hastings an honorable discharge. All of the girls implicated in the case have been provided for except "Chicago May" and she will be disposed of when certain evidence arrives from the west.

MOSBY IN DANGER.

Threatened with Appendicitis and His Friends Alarmed.

Richmoud, Va., Oct. 28.—Col. John S. Mosby, the confederate cavalry leader, is ill at Marshall, Farquier county, Va. He is threatened with appendicitis, and his friends are alarmed about him.

Philadelphia, Oct. 28.—The Southern Railway company has contracted with the Cramps for a steel passenger steamship to ply between Norfolk and Baltimore. The new vessel will be 242 feet long and 42 feet beam and will have accommodations for 100 first class passengers.

Rain at Williamsport.

Williamsport, Pa., Oct. 28.—The unprecedented drought was broken last evening by a downpour of rain. Fierce forest fires which have been burning will be extinguished, but the streams will be little affected owing to the parched condition of the earth.

Fire at Tonawanda.

Tonawanda, N. Y., Oct. 28.—Jackson & Sons' planing mill on Sweeny street was destroyed by fire yesterday. Loss, $20,000; covered by insurance.

THE ERZINGEN RIOT.

Turkish Reports State That Fifty Armenians Were Killed.

Constantinople, Oct. 28.—Details have been received from a Turkish source of the recent rioting at Erzingen, in Asiatic Turkey. It is said that the trouble had its origin in the killing of a Mussulman priest by an Armenian. The murder bitterly incensed the Mohammedans against the Armenians and an attack was made by the former upon the latter. The Armenians defended themselves and in the fighting that followed fifty Armenians and ten Mohammedans were killed.

MRS. PARNELL'S PLANS.

Will Visit Nice and Ireland But Will Return to America.

New York, Oct. 28.—Mrs. Delia Stewart Parnell, who has arrived in New York from Bordentown with her friend, Mrs. William Knaud, who has been in attendance on her since the assault which nearly ended her life six months ago, is still very feeble. She has not recovered from the effects of the assault. She is unable to walk alone and cannot use her right hand or arm. Nevertheless she is planning a trip to Ireland about the end of next month to visit her surviving children. What her future movements will be Mrs. Parnell is unable to say. She may spend some time at Nice, in the hope that the mild climate may benefit her health, but she will return to America.

THE PRISONERS' FRIEND DEAD.

Miss Linda Gilbert Expires of Apoplexy at Mount Vernon.

New York, Oct. 28.—Miss Linda Gilbert, "The Prisoners' Friend," died in her home at Mount Vernon, N. Y., of apoplexy. The body was taken to Winsted, Conn., for burial. Miss Gilbert was born in Rochester, N. Y. When five years old her family moved to Illinois. She was educated at the Convent of the Sacred Heart in Cincinnati. In 1866 she became engaged to Frank Lanier, city chamberlain of Cincinnati, who died within a week of their marriage, from a gunshot wound received accidentally while out hunting. He bequeathed to her his entire fortune of $[illegible],000, leaving Bishop Purcell executor. She expended $75,000 in the establishment of prison libraries.

THREE WEARY OF LIFE.

Two Women and a Man Commit Suicide in New York.

New York, Oct. 28.—Sophie Rosenfelt, 42 years old, married, committed suicide yesterday at her home 302 West 114th street by cutting her throat with a razor. No cause is known for her act. Mrs. Dora Baumann, 36 years old, of [illegible] East 3d street, committed suicide yesterday by cutting her throat with a knife. It is supposed she was insane. Walter J. Donegan, 25 years old, a plumber of 123 Greenwich street, committed suicide early yesterday morning by taking morphine. He has been despondent for several months and it is believed that fact led him to take his life.

FATAL BOILER EXPLOSION.

Two Men Killed and Several Injured at Fair Haven, Wash.

Fair Haven, Wash., Oct. 28.—By an explosion in the mill of the Pacific Coast Lumber & Milling company yesterday two men were killed, another fatally injured and three more severely hurt, besides wrecking the mill property. The fireman had just started to get up steam in three of the boilers and it is supposed, having allowed the supply of water to get low, turned cold water into the already heated boilers. Two boilers exploded with terrific force, one being blown 500 feet, passing through the dry house and dropping through a railroad trestle into the water.

AT THE HEAD OF A TRUST COMPANY.

L. V. F. Randolph Selected to Run a New York Financial Institution.

The resignation of Mr. William H. Male from the presidency of the Atlantic Trust Company, New York, for personal reasons, has had the effect of placing that prosperous company in the hands of a gentleman fully competent. The new official is Mr. Lewis V. F. Randolph, who is well known in financial circles, and bears an enviable reputation for executive ability. This position calls for a high degree of capability in management, and it is generally recognized that Mr. Randolph is qualified to occupy the office to the best interests of the company. He was formerly treasurer of the Illinois Central Railroad, in which capacity he earned a name for clear judgement as well as integrity, and was more recently engaged in looking after the affairs of the Samuel J. Tilden estate. He proved invaluable to the executors and received much commendation for his work.

Mr. Randolph is a Jerseyman by birth, having been born in Somerville, that State, in 1838. He was in his earlier life connected with a mercantile house, but in 1854 entered the American Exchange Bank, remaining with that institution until 1863. In this year he enlisted in the army, serving with credit and bravery. The following year (1864) he commenced his connection with the Illinois Central Railroad as private secretary to the president; in 1873 was made director and assistant treasurer. He resigned in 1885, the Illinois Central Board adopting suitable resolutions of regret and respect. The esteem in which he was held is marked in the town of his youth, for he was at one time Mayor of Plainfield, and served the people faithfully and with good results.

The Atlantic Trust Company gains an official who can thus give them the benefit of many years of financial training in the services of banks, railroads and estates. It is believed through the downtown district and wherever Mr. Randolph is best known, that he will add much to the present efficiency of the company and promote its prosperity.

The company is recognized as thoroughly stable, and as one of New York's most reliable organizations.—New York Freeman's Journal.

Growth of Keats' Fame.

In 1820, when Keats went to Rome to find a grave beside the old Aurelian wall, he left behind in England scarcely a dozen people who believed in his genius, and who felt that he would be, according to his own wish and prophecy, "among the English poets after his death." Moreover, these few people were personal friends who had felt the charm of his magnetic sincerity and whose sympathies had been stirred by the many attractive as well as pathetic phases in his career. But as the years passed the name of Keats began to be heard more and more; the poetry he had written began to interest and charm an ever widening circle of readers, appealing with special power to minds of the highest order.

Not only was admiration shown for the rare product of Keats' genius, but the personal tradition of the poet began to excite attention. Lord Houghton, having met Charles Armitage Brown in 1833 at Walter Savage Landor's villa at Fiesole and received from him the invaluable records which Brown had cherished in the hope of some time being himself the biographer of Keats, felt not only inspired to write his famous "Life of Keats," published in 1848, but was convinced that his book, containing as it did so many of the poet's remarkable letters, would receive a warm welcome. He had his wish. Every student of literature welcomed it for its authentic records of a poet every day growing dearer, and every lover of Keats welcomed it, as it corrected many current misconceptions and showed Keats to be—what he truly was—not only a rare poet, but a man of strenuous character, clear judgment, dignity and power.—"Keats In Hampstead," by Kenyon West, in Century.

Blistering a Corpse.

One of the so called "unfailing tests of death" which have been introduced into France, Germany and Holland during the past few years is known among the undertakers as "the blistering precaution," and consists of producing a blister on the hands, feet and some other exposed portion of the body of the supposed corpse. The test is said to be infallible for this reason: If the blister produced by the application of a lighted candle or redhot iron, or fire in any form, is shown to contain water or a waterish fluid upon being opened, there is still life in the body, and a burial under such circumstances would not be advisable. On the other hand, should the blister be empty or contain steam only, the sorrowing friends may rest assured that the vital spark has flown, and that there is no danger that the corpse is being "buried alive."—St. Louis Republic.

An Unwashed Model.

"This is one of my models," Mr. Brown, the child painter, said one day to the writer, pointing to a ragged urchin, who looked as if he had walked out of the frame of one of the artist's pictures to take a rest in the armchair in which he was so comfortably curled up. "This is Pete. The little rascal never took a bath in his life. When his hands and feet show in a picture, he has to be washed up a little, as they are even too dirty to be picturesque." Pete grinned as if he was pleased with the distinction of being an absolute stranger to the bath. But he probably does wash his face and hands occasionally. His face was bright enough to deserve not to be hidden by dirt.—"The Child Painter, J. G. Brown," by John J. a' Becket, in St. Nicholas.

Health, beauty, vigor, riches and all the other things called good operate equally as evils to the vicious and unjust as they do as benefits to the just.—Plato.

France and Russia Would Aid Us Against England.

Isolation of Great Britain in Her Foreign Policy—The Venezuelan Controversy Complicated with the Threatening Eastern War Cloud. Recent Diplomatic Events.

Washington, Oct. 28.—Complications of the eastern and western hemispheres seem to be strangely intermixed just now, so far as can be judged from the general trend of diplomatic gossip and other confirmatory sources of information. A particularly strong undercurrent of secret diplomatic information generally gives some surface indications discernable by experienced observers. Suggestive manifestations of this kind have been very noticeable within the last few days with regard to the Chinese-Venezuelan situation.

Chinese-Russian Treaty.

Notwithstanding the fact that Shanghai has been generally and justly discredited as a source of accurate information in regard to Chinese and Japanese complications, statements originating there in respect to a treaty with China securing to Russia a northern Pacific terminus for its great Siberian railroad are generally accepted here as true. Nor is any doubt cast upon the other statement from the same source that a fleet of fifteen Russian warships has sailed for Fusan, the Korean port nearest to Japan, and barely twelve hours distant from the Japanese mainland.

Grave Complications Probable.

It is also regarded as certain that this movement on the part of Russia will bring about grave complications with Great Britain as threatening the security of the British eastern empire. The general tone of diplomatic discussion also recognizes the fact that Great Britain stands alone among European powers, without one ally upon whom she could rely.

The Venezuelan Controversy.

It is under these circumstances that the Venezuelan controversy comes under consideration and becomes mixed up with the threatening eastern war cloud. While it is not supposed that hostilities between the United States and Great Britain can result from British infraction of the Monroe doctrine in Venezuela and the alleged ultimatum said to have been addressed to that little republic (which ultimatum, by the way, has not yet appeared in evidence), nevertheless the urgency of the situation has been recognized in two very significant ways.

We May Rely on Russia.

The first has relation to the farewell visit of Prince Cantacuzene, the late Russian ambassador, to Secretary Olney. It is stated on good authority that the Russian diplomat's leave taking was given especial significance by his recalling the ancient friendship of Russia to the United States as manifested by the Emperor Alexander dispatching a Russian squadron to New York when France and England threatened to recognize the southern confederacy. Prince Cantacuzene, it is said, intimated, in guarded diplomatic phrases, that should similar emergency arise the good offices of Russia could again be depended upon.

Importance of Interview Enhanced.

The imporance of this interview was enhanced by an immediate manifestation of excessive courtesy on the part of the leading remaining members of the Russian legation towards the Venezuelan minister in Washington. Formal visits were exchanged in a manner most unusual in the intercourse of European diplomats and the representatives of South American states, whose interchange of courtesies has always hitherto been restricted to public functions and ceremonial occasions. The absence of any conceivable motive except an expression by Russia of friendly interest in behalf of Venezuela in its controversy with Great Britain for these unaccustomed diplomatic calls has given them much importance.

England Isolated.

These diplomatic "straws" indicating the course which Russia would take in the event of the United States controversy with Great Britain reaching an acute stage have brought out another significant and hitherto unpublished incident which illustrates still more strongly how completely isolated Great Britain is in its foreign policy. When Rio Janeiro was being bombarded by the fleet of Admiral Mello with a view to the restoration of the Portuguese monarchy and before our Admiral Benham broke the blockade, Great Britain proposed to send a squadron to Brazilian waters which would outnumber the American forces.

France Also Our Friend.

When this intention was made known the French minister in Washington, by instructions of his government, waited upon Secretary Gresham and gave him the assurance that for every additional warship sent by Great Britain France would send two. That intimation was enough; no more British ships were sent and the attempt to re-establish imperialism in Brazil fell to the ground.

DE FRIESE'S BODY FOUND.

Believed He Committed Suicide During a Fit of Despondency.

Newark, N. J., Oct. 28.—Henry De Friese, 50 years old, who had been missing from his home in Nutley since Thursday last, was found dead in Craig's pond, near the town, yesterday. It is believed that he committed suicide in a fit of despondency.

Bicyclist Banker Defeated.

Paris, Oct. 28.—At the Velodrome de Hiver yesterday Banker, the American bicyclist, won a heat in the race for the Prix de Madagascar. The semi-final heat was won by Jacquelin, a French rider, with Banker second. Jacquelin won the final heat and the race. Banker and Bourillon rode a dead heat for second place.

Followed His Father's Example.

Guilford, Conn., Oct. 28.—Charles Parker, aged 55, died last night, the result of taking a dose of paris green with suicidal intent. Parker's father committed suicide twenty-five years ago.

PRESERVING A SKIN.

IT WAS STILL ON THE TIGER, AND THE TIGER WASN'T DEAD.

A Sportsman's Mistake Nearly Resulted In the Loss of Human Life—After This an Extra Hole In the Hide Will Not Be Such an Important Consideration.

Arriving at the village of Deypoora, three miles from Ruttenghur fort, we were here told of a tiger that had lately killed very many bullocks, so we started with several men to look him up. We were taken to a ravine in the plains named Loonee and had taken up our position on a rocky ledge when we were recalled by a man who had seen the tiger. He directing us to the spot, we cautiously advanced, and looking over the steep bank of the ravine saw the tiger stretched out at full length just three yards or less below us. He looked up and grinned horribly. We instantly gave him a bullet each, whereupon he sprang into the cover below and was out of sight even before we could get a second shot. On going down the bank we soon found drops of blood and easily carried these on for some distance down the ravine, when all at once they entirely ceased. The ground was bare sheet rock, or large slabs of flat stones, so no footprints could be discovered. After going on some little distance we met a man tending a herd of goats who denied having seen the tiger pass, and indeed it was but too evident from the unconcerned manner in which the goats browsed and cropped the bushes around that they had seen no such formidable animal lately. So we retraced out steps to again search for the blood, when suddenly a man by signs pointed to a cave formed by a large ledge of rock that had fallen from above. We knew his meaning, though it much surprised us, for we had only just passed close by this very place, looking for the tiger's prints.

All the men, as usual, were at once ordered to a safe distance in the rear, while, placing our spare guns before us, we knelt down to polish off this tiger at an unpleasantly close distance, for we were prevented by a steep bank behind us from going farther back, and a view could not be obtained from any other point. As it was, all we could make out were the tiger's eyes shining very clearly in the dark cave with an indistinct outline of his face. We silently agreed to fire together on the word, "One, two, three," being given by one of us. On the smoke clearing away, we were delighted to see our foe stretched out stiff on his back, the white of his belly being uppermost and very visible. On going nearer, two small holes, one over each eyebrow, from which streams of blood flowed, caused us to congratulate each other on our good aim. We now walked close up and saw that the cave in which this tiger had tried to hide himself, although it had but a small entrance, was large enough inside.

While talking over our lucky shots we observed one of the tiger's arms slowly move, but as if from mere muscular action, caused by its weight and the position the beast was lying in. On noticing this I suggested that another shot should be given to make sure, but Little slightly objected, on the ground that it was only uselessly making holes and so spoiling the skin. On this I agreed to fire where our knives would first be used in taking off the victim's jacket, so at once, while we were looking into the cave, without putting my gun to my shoulder, I placed its muzzle opposite the tiger's chest and fired the remaining loaded barrel. All this time the men, who from a distance had seen us so near the tiger's den, came running up toward us in a great state of delight at their enemy being killed, for so they and we both thought was indeed the case. Instead of which, no sooner had I fired than, with a frightful roar, up jumped the tiger, as lively as ever. With one bound Little, who is remarkably strong and active, gained the top of the high ledge of rock that formed the tiger's cave. Here he kept guard with his spare loaded barrel pointed over the mouth of the den; our other guns we had left on the ground on walking up to first look at the tiger. For my part, in the most dreadful state of alarm, I at once rushed through the men who had now come up and were crowding around us, upsetting three or four and myself in so doing.

For the moment there was a terrible panic, and, the ground being very uneven and stony, everybody seemed to fall over and trip up everybody else. Some climbed small trees like monkeys, while others in their fright ran clean out of sight without stopping to look behind. All this time the tiger was roaring awfully. I fully believed that he was outside the cave, killing each man as he caught him, instead of which, being much confused, he luckily remained in the den, around and around which he kept walking, seemingly without being able to find his way out. At last, gaining my legs, I snatched up a gun and climbed up a small thin tree just in front of the den. There were two men already in this slight tree, so its branches bent down unpleasantly close to the ground with our weight. From this point I fired 12 more shots, at only as many yards' distance, into this tiger before he was quiet. Only his fore arm and lower part of his belly could be hit every time he appeared at the mouth of the cave. All now being still, we came down from our high posts and this time found the beast really dead, riddled with balls. The appearance of the ground was very laughable. Guns, drums, bows, spears, shoes, turbans, were scattered all over the place. Some poor fellows were sadly bruised. It appeared that our shots had merely for the time stunned this tiger, missing his brain, which lies in a long narrow cell directly between the eyes and on the extreme top of the forehead. The shot in his chest most effectually revived him.

This was a most extraordinary and lucky escape for all of us, for, supposing him quite dead, we should have begun to haul him out of the cave and at once proceeded to skin him on the spot, during which operation the beaters usually all crowd around and discuss the brute's death and recall the losses he has occasioned in his day. Taking off his skin would, no doubt, have revived the tiger, when the consequences that might have ensued are terrible to conceive. Doubtless more than one life would have been lost. This little adventure served as a good caution to us never to fear making holes in a beast's skin to fully ascertain whether he was dead or not. At this time we were but young hands at tiger killing, but have since learned by experience many such valuable lessons. This tiger was a very large old one.—"Tiger Hunting In India," Lieutenant Rice.

CHAPTER IV.

On the top of a hummock sat or crouched the eight-legged thing that they had seen three days before—and it howled horribly.

"Let us follow," said the girl. "It may know some way that does not lead to Sedna," but she reeled from weakness as she took the pulling rope. The thing moved off slowly and clumsily across the ridges, heading always toward the westward and the land, and they followed while the growling thunder at the edge of the floe rolled nearer and nearer. The floe's lip was split and cracked in every direction for three or four miles inland and great pans of ten-foot thick ice, from a few yards to twenty acres square, were jolting and ducking and surging into one another and into the yet unbroken floe as the heavy swell took and shook and spouted between them. The battering-ram ice was, so to speak, the first army that the sea was flinging against the floe. The incessant crash and jar of these cakes almost drowned the ripping sound of sheets of pack ice being driven bodily under the floe as cards are hastily pushed under a tablecloth. Where the water was shallow these sheets would be piled one atop of another till the bottom-most touched mud fifty feet down and the discolored sea banked behind the muddy ice till the increasing pressure drove all forward again. The many shallows and sand banks on the northeast coast of Bylot's island made it impossible to foretell the course of the rushing ice. For instance, in addition to the floe and the pack ice, the gale and the currents were bringing down true bergs, sailing mountains of ice, snapped off by the frost from the Greenland side of the water or the north shore of Melville bay. They pounded in solemnly from the offing, the waves breaking white round them, and advanced on the floe like an old-time fleet under full sail. But a berg that seemed ready to carry the world before it would ground helplessly in deep water, reel over and wallow in a lather of foam and mud and flying frozen spray, while a much smaller and lower berg would rip and ride into the flat ice, flinging tons of ice on either side and cutting a track a mile long before it was stopped. The bergs were perhaps the most terrible things to watch, because there was no saying how or where their towers and pinnacles would fall after the shock of collision. Some fell like swords, shearing a raw-edged canal through the floe; and others, falling on hard ice, could not break through it, but splintered into a shower of blocks weighing scores of tons apiece that whirled and circled among the hummocks. Others again rose up bodily out of the water when they shoaled, twisted as though in pain and fell solidly on their sides, while the sea thrashed over their shoulders. This trampling and crowding and bending and buckling and arching of the ice into every possible shape was going on as far as the eye could reach all along the north line of the floe. From where Kotuko and the girl were the confusion looked no more than an uneasy, rippling, crawling movement under the horizon, but it came towards them each moment and they could hear far away to the landward a heavy booming, as it might have been the boom of artillery through a fog. That showed that the floe was being jammed against the iron cliffs of Bylot's island, the land to the southward, behind them.

"This has never been before," said Kotuko, staring stupidly. "This is not the time. How can the floe break now?"

"Follow that!" the girl cried, pointing to the thing, half limping, half running, distractedly before them. They followed, tugging at the hand sleigh, while nearer and nearer came the roaring march of the ice. At last the fields round them cracked and starred in every direction and the cracks opened and snapped like the teeth of wolves. But where the thing rested, on a mound of old and scattered ice blocks some fifty feet high, there was no motion. Kotuko leaped forward wildly, dragged the girl after him and crawled to the bottom of the mound. The talking of the ice grew louder and louder round them, but the mound stayed fast, and as the girl looked at him he threw his right elbow upwards and outwards, making the Inuit sign for land in the shape of an island. And land it was that the eight-legged limping thing had led them to—some granite-tipped sand-beached islet off the coast, shod and sheathed and masked with ice so that no man could have told it from the floe, but at the bottom solid earth and not shifting, drifting ice. The smashing and rebound of the floes, as they grounded and splintered, marked the borders of it, and a friendly shoal ran out to the northward and turned aside the rush of the heaviest ice exactly as a plowshare turns over loam. There was a danger, of course, that some heavily-squeezed ice field might shoot up the beach and plane off the top of the islet bodily, but that did not trouble Kotuko and the girl when they made their snow house and began to eat, and heard the ice crack and hammer and skid along the beach. The thing had disappeared, and Kotuko was talking excitedly about his knowledge of and power over spirits as he crouched over the lamp. In the middle of his wild sayings the girl began to laugh and rock herself backwards and forwards.

Behind her shoulder, crawling into the hut crawl by crawl, there were two heads—one yellow and one black—that belonged to two of the most sorrowful and ashamed dogs that you ever saw. Kotuko, the dog, was one, and the black leader was the other. Both were now fat, well-lookng and quite restored to their proper minds, but coupled to each other in an extraordinary fashion. When the black leader ran off, you remember, his harness was still on him. He must have met Kotuko and played or fought with him, for his shoulder loop had caught in the plaited copper wire of Kotuko's collar and had drawn tight so that neither dog could get at the trace to gnaw it apart, but was fastened sidelong to his neighbor's neck.

The girl pushed the two shamefaced creatures towards Kotuko, and, sobbing with laughter, cried: "That is Quiquern which led us to safe ground. Look at his eight legs and double head."

Kotuko cut them free, and they fell into his arms, yellow and black together, trying to explain how they had got their senses back again. Kotuko ran a hand down their ribs, which were round and well clothed. "They have found food," he said with a grin. "I do not think we shall go to Sedna so soon. My tornaq sent these. The sickness has left them."

As soon as they had greeted Kotuko these two who had been forced to sleep and eat and hunt together for the past few months flew at each other's throat and there was a beautiful battle in the snow house. "Empty dogs do not fight," Kotuko said. "They have found the seal. Let us sleep. We shall eat food."

When they waked there was open water on the north beach of the island and all the loosened ice had been driven landward. The first sound of the surf is one of the most delightful that the Inuit can hear, for it means that spring is on the road. Kotuko and the girl took hands and smiled, for the clear full roar of the surge among the ice reminded them of salmon and reindeer time and the smell of blossoming ground willows. Even as they looked the sea began to skim over between the floating cakes of ice, so intense was the cold, but on the horizon there was a vast red glare that was the light of the sunken sun. It was more like hearing him yawn in his sleep than seeing him rise, and the glare only lasted for an hour or two, but it marked the turn of the year. Nothing, they felt, could alter that.

Kotuko found the dogs fighting over a fresh-killed seal who was following the fish that a gale always disturbs. He was the first of some twenty or thirty seal that landed on the island in the course of a day and, till the sea froze hard, there were hundreds of keen black heads rejoicing in the shallow free water and floating about with the floating ice.

It was good to eat seal-liver again; to fill the lamps recklessly with blubber and watch the flame blaze three feet in the air, but as soon as the new sea ice bore Kotuko and the girl loaded the hand-sleigh and made the two dogs pull as they had never pulled before in their lives, for they feared what might have happened in their village. The weather of course was as pitiless as usual, but it is easier to draw a sleigh loaded with good food than to hunt starving. They left five and twenty seal carcasses buried in the ice of the beach already for use and hurried back to their people. The dogs showed them the way as soon as Kotuko told them what was expected, and though there was no sign of a landmark, in two days they were giving tongue outside Kadlu's house. Only three dogs answered them; the others had been eaten; and the houses were all dark. But when Kotuko shouted: "Ojo!" (boiled meat) weak voices answered, and when he called the call of the village name by name, very distinctly, there were no gaps in it.

An hour later the lamps blazed in Kadlu's house, snow water was melting, the pots were beginning to simmer and the snow was drifting from the roof as Amoraq made ready a meal for all the village, and the boy baby in the hood chewed at a strip of rich nutty blubber and the hunters slowly and methodically filled themselves to the very brim with seal-meat. Kotuko and the girl told their tale. The two dogs sat between them, and whenever their names came in they cocked an ear apiece and looked most thoroughly ashamed of themselves. A dog who has once gone mad the Inuit say is safe against all attacks.

"So the tornaq did not forget us," said Kotuko. "The storm blew; the ice broke and the seal swam in behind the fish that were frightened by the storm. Now the new seal holes are not two days' distant. Let the good hunters go to-morrow and bring back the seal I have spared—twenty-five seal buried in the ice. When we have eaten those we will all follow the seal on the floe."

"What do you do?" said the angekok, the sorcerer, in the same sort of voice as he used to Kadlu, the richest of the Tununirmiut.

Kadlu looked at the girl from the north and said quietly: "We build a house." He pointed to the northwest side of Kadlu's house for that is the side on which the married son or daughter always lives.

The girl turned her hands palm upwards with a little despairing shake of her head. She was a foreigner, picked up starving and she could bring nothing to the housekeeping.

Amoraq jumped from the bench where she sat and began to sweep things into the girl's lap—stone lamps, iron-skin scrapers, tin kettles, deerskins embroidered with musk-ox teeth and real canvas needles such as sailors use—the finest dowry that has ever been given on the far edge of the Arctic circle, and the girl from the north bowed her head down to the very floor.

"Also these," said Kotuko, laughing and singing to the dogs, who thrust their cold muzzles into the girl's face.

"Ah," the angekok, with an important cough, as though he had been thinking it all over. "As soon as Kotuko left the village, I went to the singing-house and sang magic. I sang all the long nights and called upon the spirits of the reindeer. My singing made the gale blow that broke the ice and drew the two dogs towards Kotuko when the ice would have crushed his bones. My song drew the seal in behind the broken ice. My body lay still in the quaggi, but my spirit ran about on the ice and guided Kotuko and the dogs in all the things they did. I did it."

Everybody was very full and sleepy so no one contradicted; and the angekok helped himself to yet another lump of boiled meat and lay down to sleep with the others, in the warm, well-lighted, oil-smelling house.

Now Kotuko, who drew very well in the Inuit way, scratched pictures of all these adventures on a long flat piece of ivory with a hole at one end. When he and the girl went north to Ellesmere land in the year of the wonderful open winter he left the picture-story with Kadlu, who lost it in the shingle when his dog-sleigh broke down one summer on the beach of Lake Netelling at Nikesirinik, and there a lake Inuit found it next spring and sold it to a man at Upernivik, who was interpreter on a Cumberland sound whaler, and he sold it to Hans Olsen, who was sailor on board a big steamer that took tourists to the North cape in Norway. When the tourists' season was over the steamer ran between London and Australia, stopping at Ceylon, and there Olsen sold the ivory to an Angalese jeweler who sold imitation cat's eye sapphires. I found it under some rubbish in his house at Colombo, and with Hans' help I translated it from one end to the other.

RESULTS OF CURIOSITY.

Some Stories of Its Tragic Ending as Seen Occasionally.

Strange stories of the tragic results of curiosity are reported from time to time, reminding us of the romance of George Lillo, entitled "Fatal Curiosity." It appears that young Wilmot, supposed to have perished at sea, returns to England, and, in disguise, visits his parents, with whom he deposits a casket. But his mother, out of curiosity, opens the casket, and, finding that it contains jewels, she and her husband resolve to murder the owner. Scarcely have they committed the fatal deed when they discover that it is their own son whom they have killed.

A Russian folk tale gives an amusing account of a certain prince who, after traveling a very long distance, is at last welcomed by a princess as her destined husband. She warns him not to ascend the central staircase of her palace. But his curiosity tempts him to do so, and to his horror he finds three chambers, in each of which he finds the lifeless body of a fair maiden. On gazing at these he recognizes his first love and learns for the first time her cruel and untimely fate.

Similarly, a Spanish story, known under the title of "The Black Hand," informs us how a poor man when endeavoring to uproot a large cabbage incurred a giant's wrath, and, in order to save his own life, he was compelled to bring the eldest of his three daughters to be the giant's wife. The giant takes her down into his underground palace, puts a ring on her finger, but forbids her to enter a certain room. Curiosity makes her disobey, and, as in the preceding tale, she was horrified on finding several dead bodies.

In the same way, in Grimm's tale of Fitcher's bird, the heroine finds in a room which she is not to enter the bodies of her sisters hacked to pieces, and among many other tales of a like nature may be mentioned several very curious Gaelic ones in Campbell's "Tales of the West Highlands," which give a graphic account of the unexpected results arising from fatal inquisitiveness.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

AN UNFINISHED BRACELET.

Why Commodore Tyrrell Wears a Peculiar India Ink Decoration.

Old Commodore Tyrrell was sitting with some friends one day last summer when the heat impelled him to roll up his shirt sleeves. As he did so the eye of a reporter who was sitting by him fell upon an india ink decoration upon his right wrist.

"Let me see that, commodore," he said.

The old sea dog extended his right arm across the table for inspection. The decoration was a shield and an eagle, and one side was something that looked like an unfinished wreath.

"Why didn't the artist finish it?" the commodore was asked.

"Ah, that's a story of the awfulness of war, my boy," said he as he grew thoughtful and stopped the joking that he had been indulging in. "It was when I was a stripling of a boy in the navy that that was done. Like all boys, I thought I was not a full fledged tar until I had myself tattooed, and one of my mates started to make a bracelet around my wrist. That was the day before the battle of Mobile Bay. He did as much as you see there and was going to finish it next day. Next day we went into action, and I thought hell had broke loose. Well, sir, the first shot that came across our deck struck my mate right amidships, and the poor fellow never knew what finished him.

"I never would let anybody else finish it, but maybe when I go to Davy Jones' locker I'll meet Dick and get him to finish that bracelet."

Then the commodore ordered grog for all hands to conceal his emotion.—Cincinnati Tribune.

Where Was the Garden of Eden?

Arguments that have seemed sound to their scientific projectors have been advanced to prove that the human race started on the brink of the Euphrates, in the heart of central Asia, in Lemuria, a continent supposed to be at present at the bottom of the northern part of the Indian ocean; in Greenland, in central Africa, in Central America, in Ceylon and in the fabled continent of Atlantis, which is conjectured to have emerged from the Atlantic on the line of the Canary islands and the Azores, and from which, if it ever existed, both the eastern and the western hemispheres might have drawn their population. Certainly here is choice enough, writes Edward S. Martin in The Ladies' Home Journal.

The scientific searcher after paradise is embarrassed by the richness of his field and hesitates to leave the Euphrates' bank and become a wanderer over all the earth. But at least he may stick to Asia if he will. One of the most favored "cradles of the human race" is the vast plateau of Pamir, north of the Himalayas in central Asia. Anthropologists find deep significance in the fact that in that region the fundamental types of all the races of mankind are represented. In the plateau of Pamir or within easy distance of it are yellow people, black people and whites, and in the same region philologists find the three fundamental forms of the human language.

Green.

One of the smaller New England colleges has for janitor a colored man, who has filled that position to the satisfaction of all concerned for over 25 years.

Like many of his race, he is possessed of much wit, and it is not often that the students get the laugh on Sam, as they familiarly and affectionately call him. One autumn day, just after the college year had begun, when he was overseeing the burning over of part of the campus, a freshman, coming along, cried:

"Well, Sam, that's most as black as you are!"

"Yes, sah," promptly replied Sam, "and next spring it will be 'most as green as you are!"—Youth's Companion.

are doing all the business. Our stock is the largest, prices are the lowest and terms the easiest in the city. Just give it a passing thought that you can get an antique oak bedroom suit, 8 pieces, for $15, $20, $25 and $30, including a woven wire bed spring and a mixed mattress. No house in the city offers such inducements.

And then to think again that you can get tapestry Brussels carpet for 50, 60, and 70 cents a yard, made and laid with paper, which is a saving of 15c per yard. Where is there a house in the city that will offer such bargains?

And then imagine and wonder how we can afford to give away a moquette rug or parlor table with a parlor suit for $20, $30, $40 or $50.

Some of our competitors say that our ads are too much sameness, and that this ad. is old. Well, we will admit it, but as long as it does the business and saves the people money we will continue to run it.

HELPING THE NEEDY AND POOR

WORK OF THE C. O. A. A. REVIEWED FOR THE PAST YEAR.

The Association is Doing a Great Work in Charity, but Needs the Help of Plainfield's Citizens—Reports.

The chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church was well filled last evening with an interested audience who came to attend the public meeting of the Citizen's Organized Aid Association. The meeting opened with prayer by Rev. Hobart Clark, after which a bass solo was rendered by Noah Swayne, and Mrs. Boorum sang a soprano solo in a most acceptable manner. President Col. M. W. Tyler was then introduced and read a very interesting sketch of ancient and modern charities.

Col. Tyler spoke in part as follows: The past decade has witnessed the birth of a new science. And as every new born infant is entitled to a name of its own, we find that in naming this particular infant our vocabulary has been enriched by the addition of a new word. Philanthropology, or the science of philanthropy. This means that philanthropy is no longer a sentiment, a passing fancy on the subject of a passion. It has been elevated to the dignity of a science something that is recognized as having a nature and a constitution that can be studied and is the subject of laws that may be known. Every science has two departments—the department of fact and the department of law. The facts pertaining to any subject have to be patiently gathered and observed before the laws governing that subject can be known and evolved. The movement that is known by the name of "Organized Charities" is the mechanism developed in connection with the study of this new born science of philanthropology to gather the facts and help determine the laws upon the great subject of charity. This association is working in this field.

The particular task which the founder of Christianity imposed upon his followers was to care for the poor and the needy, and to comfort the outcast and the suffering. Rome was a fruitful field for such laborers and the rapid growth of the Christian church amid the tumbling ruins of the Roman Empire, was due in no small degree to the fact that at that particular epoch the Christian idea of charity found a place in the hearts of the Roman people which proved that it was good seed sown in rich ground. As a consequence the church assumed the burden of supporting the poor which the State was no longer able to bear and the result was that "a vast organization of charity presided over by the bishops and actively directed by the deacons soon ramified over Christendom till the bond of charity became the bond of unity and the most distant sections of the Christian church corresponded by the interchange of mercy. Long before the era of Constantine it was observed that the charities of the Christians were so extensive. It may perhaps be said so excessive—that they drew very many imposters to the church; and when the victory of Christianity was accheived the enthusiam for charity displayed itself in the erection of numerous institutions that were altogether unknown to the Pagan World."

Yet this principle seemingly of divine origin was found to contain a poison which more than neutralized all the good that was accomplished. Mr. Lucky thus describes the results:

"In all Catholic countries where ecclesiastical influences have been permitted to develop unmolested the monastic organizations have proved a deadly canker, corroding the prosperity of the nation: withdrawing multitudes from all production, encouraging a blind and pernicious almsgiving, diffusing habits of improvidence through the poorer classes, fostering our ignorant admiration for saintly poverty, and our equally ignorant antipathy to the habits and aims of our industrial civilization; they have paralyzed all energy and proved an inseparable barrier to material progress. The poverty they have relieved has been insignificant compared with the poverty they have caused."

In 1750, England, with a population of six and a half millions, expended for the relief of the poor £689,000, or at the rate of two shillings, two-pence per head of population. In 1820, with a population of a little more than twelve millions, she expended for the same purpose, £7,329,000, or at the rate of twelve shillings, two-pence per head of population. That is, while the population had doubled the poor rate had increased six fold.

In 1834, the whole subject was referred by parliament to a special commission who reported "that the great source of abuse was the out-door relief afforded to the able-bodied on their own account or on that of their families, given either in kind or in money and that great mal-administration existed in the workhouses."

We have now reached the threshold of the present century and what I have to say relates as much to our own continent as to Europe. As in the industrial world the distinctive feature of modern times is the division of labor, so in the charitable world we find there has arisen a corresponding feature which I will call a division of relief.

For centuries the monastry embraced within its walls a place for feeding the hungry, a sick department, called the infirmary, and an asylum where the impotent, the infirm, and sometimes the insane were cared for. In the same way the poorhouse or workhouse of modern times, when the state took upon itself to care for the poor, prior to the middle of the last century was more or less of a general asylum for the hungry, the infirm, the sick and the insane.

Once let the light shine upon a public wrong and the consciences and the hearts of the moral portion of the community are soon awakened and stirred and remedies and reforms are soon under way to relieve the situation. That is the epitome of the history of most every movement on the part of man to ameliorate the condition of his fellow-man.

The charities and charitable institutions of the age in which we live are legion in number. We have learned in a long and varied experience that there is great danger in overdoing charity. That it is not a kindness to a human being to take care of him if he is able to take care of himself; that labor is the foundation upon which man's existence and human society are built. The eternal edict is: "If ye will not work, ye shall not live." It applies to the air we breathe, to the food we eat and to

ROYAL GOOD FELLOWS.

Arcanumites Entertain State Officers in Great Style.

If there is one time during the year that the members of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, enjoy themselves better than any other, it is when the grand lodge officers pay their official visit. Such was the circumstances last night, and Plainfield Council certainly did have a royal time, as usual. Everybody was in the best of humor and speeches that were filled with good common sense and wisdom occupied a portion of the evening. The grand lodge officers were highly pleased with their entertainment, and the home members were benefited materially by the official visit.

Thomas Bartindale and Dr. Marsh, formerly residents of this city, and members of the Council, but now of Brooklyn, were present and were given a hearty welcome.

During the evening Grand Treasurer Nixon rendered a pleasing solo, and A. G. Carpenter furnished excellent music.

Refreshments were served by Stephenson, the caterer.

The grand lodge officers present were: Grand Regent, J. Day Otis; Grand Orator, C. J. E. Nolte; Supreme Orator, P. L. H. Charlock; Past Grand Regent S. J. Kallman; Grand Secretary, R. H. Alberts; Grand Guide, Samuel Drummond; Grand Treasurer, R. J. Nixon; District Deputies J. A. Gallagher and L. A. Lightfoot; Past Supreme Representative, P. S. Petler and Past Supervising Deputy and Grand Trustee, A. W. Rand.

A BIRTHDAY SURPRISE.

Mrs. Proud, of West Front Street, Entertains on Her Twentieth Birthday.

The twentieth birthday of Mrs. Samuel Proud, of West Front street, was celebrated last evening, but not in exactly the way that she expected. Just as she was preparing to attend the Odd Fellows entertainment a number of her friends suddenly appeared and she was given a complete surprise. The party was gotten up by her husband. A very pleasant evening was enjoyed by all and everybody was sorry when the time came to say good night.

Those present beside Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Proud and family, were Mr. and Mrs. John Franks, Mr. and Mrs. John Staats, Mrs. G. Coddington, the Misses Gertie and Lela Coddington, Miss Jennie DeCamp, Miss Carrie Pangborn, Mrs. and Miss Curtis, C. E. Hepburn, Willie Hepburn, Henry Staats, the Misses Irene Mair, Mary Thorne, Lucy Jennings, Lizzie Franks, Etta Staats and Miss Barnes, Clifford Braider and John Franks, Jr. Mrs. Proud received a number of handsome and valuable presents.

The English Language In Song.

A "Ballad Lecture Recital" on "The English Language in Song," will be given by Miss Annie J. Bronson, assisted by her pupils, the Misses Gertrude D. Irwin, soprano and Grace H. Irwin, mezzo-soprano. Miss Helen A. Hasbrouck will act as pianist and accompanist. The entertainment will be held at the Y. M. C. A. hall on Saturday afternoon, November 2, at half-past four o'clock. Complimentary tickets were given to all the members of the Park Avenue Baptist church choir.

Funeral of Mrs. Conroy.

The funeral services over the remains of the late Mrs. Martha Conroy were held at the home of her son-in-law, John H. Doane, 423 LaGrande avenue, yesterday afternoon, and were largely attended by relatives and friends. Rev. J. W. Richardson, pastor of the deceased, officiated. The remains were interred beside her husband in Hillside cemetery.

Lost Two Fingers.

Wm. Ryan, an employee at the Potter Press Works, and a resident of South Second street, met with a painful accident yesterday afternoon at the works. The first two fingers of his right hand caught in some machinery. He went to Muhlenberg Hospital, where it was found necessary to amputate both fingers. Ryan was able to leave the hospital today.

Democratic Candidate for City Judge.

S. S. Swackhamer is spoken of as Democratic candidate for city judge.

Every mother should know that croup can be prevented. The first symptom of true croup is hoarseness. This is followed by a peculiar rough cough. NO BETTER BOND TERMS.

THE MAYOR AND FINANCE COMMITTEE'S ACTION VINDICATED.

Though More Than a Hundred Firms Were Asked to Bid, Only Three Did So, and One of These Was Thrown Out.

When President See called the special meeting of the city council to order last evening at 8:15 councilmen Fisk, Erickson, Dumont, Moore and Westphal were present. Mr. Frost came in later. The clerk read the call of the meeting which was to receive bids for loaning $100,000 to the city. Mr. Dumont was asked to assist the City Clerk in opening the bids, of which there were three, as follows: S. A. Kean, of Chicago, 100.25 and interest for bonds, providing the bonds run for five years or more. Dime Savings Bank, Plainfield, par and 4 per cent interest for $25,000. Pliny Fisk, par and 4 per cent interest for $100,000. The last two were for notes, etc., as advertised. S. A. Kean's bid did not comply with the advertisement, for the city has no bonds to issue, and was in consequence thrown out.

The awards of the notes were on Mr. Dumont's motion $25,000 to the Dime Saving's Bank and $75,000 to Pliny Fisk, the bonds to be assigned when issued, pro-rata. All the members voted aye.

A communication was read from Corporation Counsel Marsh, regarding the purchase of the property for the sewage beds, in compliance with the request of Mr. Ginna, as the latter did not like the phraseology of the minutes on that point as recorded.

Mr. Erickson moved that the report of the Corporation Counsel be received and the minutes so amended as to conform with it. It was so ordered.

The special meeting then adjourned and the regular adjourned meeting was called. The minutes of the meeting of November 14th were read and adopted.

M. Honan & Sons asked for an extension of time owing to the delay in receiving pipe. They said they would be through by November 7th. Contractor Marsden also asked for an extension of time from November 1st to 30th. Both were referred to the sewer committee, and they recommended that the same be granted provided it met the approval of the Corporation Counsel; also that Marsden keep the foreman now in his employ till the work is completed. It was so ordered.

On Mr. Moore's motion $300 was ordered expended for police coats and trousers for the police, and the contract with the Plainfield Gas & Electric Light Co., was ordered renewed for another year on the same terms. Council then adjourned.

Willing to Settle.

S. S. Swackamer received word yesterday from William P. Voorhees, of New Brunswick, attorney of the Metropolitan Insurance Company, that the company would settle with Mr. Swackhamer's client, Mrs. Mary Z. Perrine, on terms satisfactory to her.

More Forest Fires.

The woods just beyond Fanwood station were set on fire Sunday and the fire department of that place had to be called out to save the neighboring residences.

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chambertain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family has need of it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once and you will never regret it. For sale by Reynold's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

FESTIVAL OF AUTUMN TIME.

A SEASONABLE EVENT AT THE FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

Young Ladies' Missionary Society Show Dexterity at Making a Pretty Scene With Autumn Products—Those in Charge.

The Sunday-school room of the First Baptist church never presented a more pleasing appearance than it did last night, when the "Harvest Home" festival opened under the auspices of the Young Ladies Missionary Society of the church.

The young women of this society have a peculiar knack of arranging the most successful affairs and extracting the desired gilt from the pockets of their friends, and the best part of it is that it all goes for worthy purposes. This time the money is to be used in supporting Miss Florence Dodge, one of their members, at the Chicago Training School where she is now studying to be a missionary.

The room looked charming in colors of yellow and white. Streamers of these colors were gracefully suspended from pillar to pillar, while at the several tables there was a nice arrangement of the colors, adding brilliancy to the scene. On the platform there was a familiar sight. Choice products of a well-kept farm were displayed, such as corn, apples, squash, pumpkins, turnips, cornstalks, etc., and they were carefully arranged.

On each side of the room at the windows the products of the same variety were to be seen, while at convenient points could be seen tall cornstalks guarding the smaller fruits and vegetables of the ground.

The efforts of the young women were well rewarded, for a large number were present last night and freely spent their allowance to help a worthy cause.

During the evening a programme was rendered consisting of a violin solo by Clarence Hillman, vocal solos by W. Runyon and recitations by Miss Grace Cooley, which were all well received.

Those in charge of the tables, pouring the tea and coffee, and the various committees are as follows:

At the tables—Mrs. Walter McGee, Miss Ida Yerkes, Mrs. Chas. H. Smith, Miss Anna Boice, Miss Florence Marsh, Mrs. Clinton Randolph, Mrs. McIntyre, Miss Mamie French, Mrs. James Manning, Mrs. Ransome.

Decorating and entertainment—Miss Edith Harold, Miss Helen Spear, Mrs. Frank Jones, Mrs. B. Vail, Miss Helen Shreve, Miss Grace Yerkes, Miss Mamie French, Miss Grace Cooley.

Candy—Mrs. B. Vail, Mrs. Frank Jones, Miss Nora Williams, Misses Alice and Bertha Needham, Alice and Susie Woodland, Miss Lizzie Smalley.

Ice cream—Miss Laura Runyon, Mrs. Simpson, Mrs. E. VanName, Mrs. Charles Conover, Miss Emily Coriell, Miss Love, Miss Lizzie Manning, Miss Louise B. Runyon.

Refreshments—Mrs. DeWitt C. Brokaw, Mrs. Harold Serrell, Mrs. John French, Mrs. King, Mrs. Harry Brokaw, Miss Mary Thorn, Miss Mollie White.

Lemonade—Mrs. Harry Brokaw, assisted by Miss Della Grant and Miss Edna Smith.

A regular harvest home supper was served at a nominal cost and all who partook thoroughly enjoyed it.

The festival will be continued this evening.

"Plainfield '96" Delegates Reunion.

The Christian Endeavor societies of this city are arranging to have a reunion of all the delegates who went to the State convention and worked for the interests of Plainfield for 1896, in the near future. It is the intention to hold the event in the old Seventh-Day Baptist church.

QUEEN CITY'S FOURTH BIRTHDAY.

A Growing and Active Lodge of Odd Fellows.

Odd Fellowship is a great thing, and perhaps there is no place where it is more in evidence than in Plainfield. Queen City Lodge, No. 226, I. O. O. F., is a growing youngster and when she made her fourth annual bow last night it was before an audience that filled every available space in K. of P. hall on West Second street.

Noble Grand A. G. Barber in his usual pleasant manner made the address of welcome and a right royal one it was. When he concluded his remarks every one present felt much at home.

Grand Secretary Parker, of New Jersey, followed with a few remarks on the merits of Odd Fellowship, giving valuable information along those lines which only an Odd Fellow can appreciate.

A trombone solo by Garrett T. Dunham was then rendered and thoroughly enjoyed.

This was followed with an address by Supreme Representative Nutley, of New Jersey. He also spoke about Odd Fellowship, telling something of interest to all.

Miss Etta Raybert was then introduced and gave one of her delightful recitations.

A selection, "Moonlight on the Lake," by Mrs. A. D. Pope, soprano; Mrs. Clark, of Newark, alto; Joseph Martin, basso; and John Thompson, tenor; was well rendered and called forth hearty applause, as did also a piano duett by the Misses Dunham.

This concluded the programme and all were then invited to the opposite side of the hall where an excellent supper was served.

The committee who were responsible for the very pleasant time furnished include D. P. Hicks, J. B. Higgins and T. C. Smith.

MORE GREEN BROOK TROUBLE.

Borough Determined to Prosecute Those Who Sewer Into the Stream.

The borough Board of Health held a meeting last night and after a conference with Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed decided to go on and prosecute all people who are sewering into Green brook contrary to the law. The most probable line of action will be that injunctions will be procured and served on all who have connections with pipes running into the brook.

It was at first thought that the city would be made a party to the action, from the fact that they were the constructors of the North avenue sewer and for some time collected a tax from all who had connections, but it is claimed that they are exempt from any suit on account of having notified all to stop sewering into the pipe when the prohibitory law was passed two years ago. It is reported, however, that the Central railroad would make a stand that they have a contract with the city to sewer in the pipe and that they would hold them to it. The city claims that this would be impossible as the law of 1893 nullified the contract. There are over fifty people who sewer in the North avenue pipe and who it would be necessary to serve injunctions on.

For the National Whist Trophy.

The crack whist players of the Park Club are going to try again for the national whist trophy and meet the Hamilton Whist Club, of Philadelphia, the present holders, at Philadelphia, on Nov. 9th. The trophy was won before from the Hamiltons, and the Park men are hoping for another victory.

Sprained His Arm.

Alex. Muir, of the Potter Press Works, fell from the top of a ladder in the shop yesterday, while arranging a belt on some of the overhead machinery. He very fortunately escaped with only a sprained arm and is not detained from work.

New Treasurer of the Hospital.

Mr. Edward H. Ladd, Jr., of Franklin place, was last night elected treasurer of Muhlenberg Hospital in place of Mr. Goddard whose resignation offered last spring has now taken effect.

—Do you want to vote on Tuesday next? Then register before nine o'clock tonight.

—William O. Worth has rented the new house, corner of Emily and Duer street, belonging to Clarence Rice, and will take up their residence there next week.

"I would rather trust that medicine than any doctor I know of," says Mrs. Hattie Mason, of Chilton, Carter Co., Mo., in speaking of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

THE DEMOCRATIC ISSUES

INTELLIGENTLY DISCUSSED IN MUSIC HALL LAST NIGHT.

R. V. Lindabury Effectively Replies to "the Same Old Gang" Charge of the Republicans — Secretaries, Vice-Presidents.

A large and representative audience of Plainfield's citizens crowded Music Hall last evening to attend the mass meeting of the Democrats, and to listen to the addresses by speakers who have a State reputation as men who are thoroughly acquainted with the vital issues involved in the present Gubernatorial campaign.

A large number of ladies occupied seats in the hall. The stage was prettily trimmed with the Stars and Stripes, while pictures of Chancellor McGill and President Cleveland were prominently displayed. The stage was filled with prominent Democrats.

The following were chosen as secretaries: Lewis G. Timpson, George W. Bird, Charles P. Bull, Jr., Peter Flynn, Jr., John Kenney and Edward Birmingham.

The following vice-presidents were chosen: Hon. James Clark, Gen. William H. Sterling, Hon. William L. Saunders, Rev. Dr. E. M. Rodman, Rev. T. Logan Murphy, S. R. Simpson, Otto Arens, Rowland Cox, Edward C. Perkins, Walter E. Stewart, Charles P. Bull, Fred H. Wills, William A. Coddington, Hugh D. Knox, A. H. Atterbury, J. Oscar Stewart, Constantine P. Ralli, William Palmer Smith, Lewis E. Howard, John H. Van Winkle, Dexter Tiffany, Anthony J. Woodruff, Leonard Spangenberg, Walter L. Hetfield, Isaac P. Brown, Arthur T. Gallup, Vincent L. Force, Andrew Love, James Merritt, William B. Ostrom and John Mortimer.

The meeting was called to order by William K. McClure as vice-president of the Democratic Association, who named Hon. Joseph W. Yates as permanent chairman. Upon assuming the chair Mr. Yates said:

I thank you for the honor of being asked to preside at this meeting of Democrats and those who are here in the interest of the Democrats. This election is an important one. We have to elect a Governor in whose honorable and upright character the Democrats of this State have great faith. We also have to assist in electing representatives in this county who are the most honorable and faithful men the Democratic party could select, and who were unanimously nominated by the Democratic people. The importance in electing these gentlemen is to elect a United States Senate in support of that faithful advocate of the Democratic party and of our country, Grover Cleveland, as an honorable and faithful adherent to the principles advocated by our fathers. The speakers who have been invited from the neighboring townships all of you well know. They came here to talk upon that very subject which I have introduced as your chairman, and I shall take pleasure in introducing to you the Hon. J. J. Bergen.

Mr. Bergen spoke in part as follows:

The Democratic party represents as their choice for Governor Alexander T. McGill, a man against whose character, reputation and official conduct not a single Republican orator in New Jersey this fall has dared to say one word of reproach. He was brought up in the shadows of Old Nassau. He was a graduate of that college, was admitted to the bar and was appointed by Gov. McClellan as Prosecutor. He was then elected Judge of that county and has since been twice Chancellor of the State of New Jersey. He is a man above reproach who, "If Alexander McGill is elected Governor of New Jersey he will be the Governor of New Jersey and no one else," quoting from his own words to me. They have given you on the other side a man who was represented in the Senate of New Jersey. A man who was the first to proceed against local option laws. I say that when a candidate for Governor criticizes and declares himself against local option that it does not represent that independent character which the people of New Jersey want in a Governor of New Jersey.

What is astonishing to me in analyzing the record of this Republican candidate as a member of the Legislature of the State of New Jersey, is that I can't find a single instance in which his vote was cast in favor of the laboring class of men. When the question of the first Monday in September being set aside as a workman's holiday, his vote was cast against it. Now my friends you have heard a great deal about the people behind McGill, but look up his record and you will see not who is behind him, but that in relation to benefiting the laboring class of people, he is foremost.

Who is in the Republican State Committee? The same old fellows who

FRENCH CABINET OUT

Railway Scandal Causes Government Defeat.

High Officials Involved—Uproar in the Chamber—Minister of Justice Scored — His Defense — Ministers Leave the Hall Amid Ironical Radical Cheers.

Paris, Oct. 29.—After a sensational scene in the chamber of deputies yesterday, during which the Southern railway scandal was hotly debated, and as a result of a government defeat, the cabinet resigned. M. Rouanet, who has been prominent in exposing those connected with the Panama Canal & Southern Railway syndicate, questioned the government regarding the South of France railroad scandal, it being alleged that a number of senators, deputies and others have made large profits out of the company by fair or unfair means.

Demanded the Documents.

He declared that the good repute of parliament was involved, and asked for explanations as to the partiality which had been shown toward those involved in the scandals, asserting that the anthorities had been afraid to prosecute them because the deputies and senators involved with the late Baron Reinach of Panama canal fame, had disposed of 8,850,000 francs in devious ways, and on behalf of the Southern railway he demanded that the minister of justice, M. Trarieux, publish the documents in the case, which were in his possession, and which would throw light on the subject.

M. Trarieux Replies.

M. Trarieux replied, denying that he had long had in his possession documents which required the arrest of Edmond Magnier, formerly senator of the Var, who was recently sentenced to a term of imprisonment for having received part of the profits of the syndicate. Continuing, the minister of justice said that whenever the government believed it had incriminating evidence it had prosecuted the parties involved. No deputy, he added, was included among the guilty parties.

The Names Demanded.

Amid continual radical interruptions, M. Trarieux managed to say in addition that several names were known to the government as having figured in the report of the expert, M. Flory, the official accountant, who made an inquiry into the finances of the South of France railroad. He was interrupted by excited cries of "Names, names, names!"

He Gives the Names.

In reply M. Trarieux said: "Rouvier, Jules Roche, Etienne, Deloncle, Bardoux and others." When he was able to make himself heard the minister of justice added that the majority of those whose names had been mentioned had explained their position. Later M. Rouanet submitted a motion demanding that full light be thrown upon the South of France railroad scandals, asking the government to prosecute all those who have been found to be implicated in them and submit to the chamber the report of the expert who inquired into the finances of the company.

The Cabinet Resigns.

M. Ribot thereupon said it was useless to submit the expert's report, and, as to the prosecutions, he added that the work of justice had been accomplished and could not be reopened. M. Rouanet's motion asking for an explanation as to the partiality which had been shown toward those involved in the scandals and demanding that the minister of justice publish the documents in the case, was then adopted by a vote of 275 to 196. After the adoption of this motion the ministers left the chamber of deputies in a body, amid ironical radical cheers, and went to the Elysee palace, where they handed in their resignations to President Faure. President Faure accepted the resignation of the ministry.

HINTS OF WAR.

Spain Angry at American Sympathy with the Cubans.

Key West, Fla., Oct. 29.—The recent celebration in the United States of the anniversary of the first revolution in Cuba has caused great indignation among the Spaniards. They hold that the celebration was a gross insult to Spain and that the United States should be forced to apologize. The Spanish organ of Havana, La Union Constitutional, is especially bitter in its comments, and these comments are significant, inasmuch as they are inspired by the Spanish government. The last issue of La Union Constitutional contains the following regarding the celebration: "If the Yankees are obstinate and still persist in their provocations, the Yankees will find out that it is dangerous to harass a nation that has a history written with blood of thousands of heroes, who left nothing to their children but the glories of their race, and the immortal name of their heroic country."

CHANDLER'S PREDICTION.

New Hampshire's Senator Says War with England Is Inevitable.

Concord, N. H., Oct. 29.—Senator Chandler's paper here contained a leader from his pen last night in which war with England is predicted. It has for its caption "Our Coming War with England—A Prediction" and is summarized thus: "War between the United States and England is inevitable. It will arise on account of British disregard for our direct interests. It will also be forced by British encroachments upon other nations all over the world. It will be fought by us, having Russia as our European ally. As a war offensive on our part it may not happen within twenty years. As a defensive war it may come sooner and should be welcomed. One sure result will be the capture and permanent acquisition of Canada by the United States.

VAN ALEN AT NEWPORT.

These two gentlemen are here. These gentlmen were the ones who were to perform that duty before it was proposed to mortgage the estate.

He is about 25 years of age. When arrested he was driving toward New York with a team hired in this city, ostensibly to go to New Haven.

ARMENIAN MASSACRES

Horrible Cruelties of the Turks at Baiburt.

Many of the Men Killed Burned at the Stake and All Fearfully Mutilated — Inadequate Protection Granted to the Christians—Looking to the Powers for Redress.

Constantinople, Oct. 29.—Reports from the scene of the recent massacre of Armenians by the Turks at Baiburt, between Erzeroum and Trebizond only serve to show more clearly that the Turkish authorities are doing everything in their power to conceal the truth concerning the outrages committed by the soldiers of the sultan, but the details are slowly coming to the capital. The Christian residents of this city, while they dare not make any open manifestation of their feelings, are horrified at the enormity of the crimes committed by the Mussulmans, and they hope that something will soon be done by the powers to put a stop to the slaughter of the practically defenseless Armenians in the provinces distant from the capital, from which places the news, even when it is brought here after much delay, is so distorted that it is almost impossible to arrive at the truth of the matter.

Inadequate Protection.

Another matter which they protest against is the fact that when the Armenians complain to the local authorities and demand protection from the Turks, the authorities, even when they do not refuse to comply with their request, grant them such inadequate aid that it is practically worthless. In the case at Baiburt, when the Armenians demanded protection against the Mussulmans, the authorities sent three policemen as a guard. Considering that the attacking party numbered fully 500 well-armed Mussulmans and Lazes, the inadequacy of the guard sent becomes absolutely farcical.

Burned at the Stake.

The greatest excitement and indignation prevails here, though in a suppressed manner, over the horrible way in which the Turks executed there fanatical vengeance. Of the 150 Armenians killed, including those of both sexes, some of the males were burned at the stake and all were horribly mutilated, while of the women many were outraged before death relieved their sufferings. Another fact that militates against the Turks is that, while they know, as it is claimed, who the ringleaders are, they persistently refuse to arrest them.

The Sultan Unmanned.

The sultan sees nobody and is utterly unmanned by fear of assassination. During the past fortnight he is reported to have shot two of his attendants whom he suspected of having designs upon his life.

A Ray of Light.

A dispatch from London giving the views of a member of parliament, Maj. F. C. Rasch, who was at Constantinople during the recent riots there, sheds a ray of light upon the situation and causes hope to arise that England may yet do something through parliament to aid the unfortunate Armenians. It is thought that he will bring the matter before the British parliament and that that body will be aroused to action.

His claim, with interest, amounted to $77,600.

GOGLER'S HORRIBLE DEATH.

Held Crushed Between an Engine and a Wall for an Hour.

Easton, Pa., Oct. 29.—By a misplaced switch on the Lehigh Valley railroad in South Easton last night two engines traveling at a good rate of speed were sent crashing into each other. One engine was turned abruptly against a stone wall. On this one Henry Gogler of South Bethlehem, a brakeman, was standing between the tank and engine. His legs were caught and he was held in that position for almost an hour before the wreckers could move the tank and engine apart. When they did part Gogler's left foot and part of his leg fell to the ground. His right leg had a large gash in the calf. He was removed to the hospital and died an hour after his admission. No other trainmen were hurt. The road was effectually blocked to all travel for a couple of hours.

THE MAINE'S DEFECTS.

Secretary of the Navy Herbert Says They Are Not Important.

Washington, Oct. 29.—Secretary Herbert has made the following official statement about the defects in the Maine: "The Maine was designed to be on an even keel at her normal draught of 21 feet 6 inches with 400 tons of coal on board. She has now been fully loaded with over 800 tons of coal and her draught forward is two feet five inches greater than aft. This is not uncommon. Many other ships when fully loaded are down by the head more or less. When the ship has been at sea for a few days this will be corrected in great part at least by using the coal which is generally taken from the forward part of the vessel. As to the listing of the Maine to the starboard, this is not a matter of importance. It can be easily corrected by adjustment of weights in loading."

NEWFOUNDLAND SMUGGLING.

No Revenue Collected Outside of St. Johns for a Year.

St. Johns, N. F., Oct. 29.—Inspector O'Reilly, commanding the cruiser Fiona, has returned here with the information respecting the whole series of smuggling cases at Burin and its neighborhood. He has arrested a dozen of the leading traders thereabouts and seized large quantities of smuggled liquor, tobacco, tea and sugar. The board of revenue met to receive his report. It is expected that the prosecution of the whole lot will be undertaken before a local magistrate. From the details of these cases it is known that practically no revenue has been collected outside of St. Johns for the past year, so prevalent have been the smuggling practices.

TO ARREST FITZSIMMONS.

Warrants To Be Served on Him as Soon as He Reaches Arkansas.

Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 29.—Attorney General Kinsworthy yesterday filed an affidavit in Judge Martin's court exciting the facts connected with the proposed journey of Fitzsimmons from Corpus Christi to Hot Springs with the avowed intention of fighting Corbett and praying that a warrant be issued compelling Fitzsimmons and Martin Julian to enter surety to keep the peace. Judge Martin immediately issued warrants for the arrest of Fitzsimmons and Julian and placed them in the hands of Sheriff Booker.

THE DRYDOCK QUESTION.

Navy Department Again Embarrassed in the Texas Case.

Washington, Oct. 29.—The navy department is again embarrassed over the drydock question and the best drydock in the United States—that at the Brooklyn navy yard—is concerned. It has been deemed advisable to wait for high water before attempting to dock the battleship Texas at Brooklyn, although it was believed that the dock there was capable of allowing the entrance of the largest vessel in the navy at any time.

Where are all those Plainfield people that The News proclaimed with great indignation would buy the sewer bonds if a chance was only given them?

Every voter should see that his name is on the registry list if he wants to cast a ballot next Tuesday. The registry boards will sit until nine o'clock this evening.

The return of Democratic good times in New Jersey is indicated by the late report of the Comptroller of the Currency at Washington, which shows that the people have nearly $57,000,000 on deposit in the national banks of the State. With so handsome a balance as this on call the business men of New Jersey have good reason to congratulate themselves and to praise the Democratic policy which has led to their present prosperity.—True American.

No better indorsement of the policy of Mayor Gilbert and the Common Council with reference to the issuing of bonds for the loan of $100,000 could be desired than the proceedings of last night's session of the council. The great hue and cry raised by Editor Runyon over the contract originally made with the firm of Harvey Fisk's Sons for the loan of this money was the cry of an ignorant man, who entertains malice and jealousy against the city administration for personal reasons. Experienced in matters of finance the officials who arranged this loan of $100,000 from the Fisks, knew that they were working for the best interests of the city, and the failure to get better terms from any other firm, after a vast number had been made acquainted with the conditions under which the loan was to be made, demonstrates this fact in a most forcible manner.

ATTACKED BY A COW.

Little Raymond Fuller Has Entirely Recovered From the Effects.

About three weeks ago Raymond Fuller, of Arlington avenue, had a narrow escape from death. He has now fully recovered from his injuries which were caused by an angry cow. The lad, who is about four years old, was playing with some of his comrades in a vacant lot. A cow was feeding in the same field and started on a run for the children. All but Raymond escaped and he, seeing that he could not, started to defend himself with his little wooden shovel. The cow knocked him down several times and would have probably killed him had not his older brother George come to the rescue and driven the animal away.

Frank H. Kent, of The Easton Free Press, was a caller at The Daily Press office this morning.

Hon. Richard V. Lindabury and Hon. James J. Bergen were entertained last evening at dinner at the home of Counselor Wm. K. McClure on Crescent avenue.

The marriage of Miss Zulena Schroder, of 929 Watchung avenue, to George Z. Brinley, of Pennsylvania, will take place at the home of the bride November 6th.

THE DEMOCRATIC ISSUES.

were there in 1888. The water monopoly in the State of New Jersey are advocating and securing the election of Griggs are grabbing up all the large water works in the State, making a great corporation of it and force on Jersey City a $6,000,000 job.

Now for Somerset county we propose to elect our County Clerk, our Sheriff and Charles W. Hoagland, our nominee for Assembly. We will send him along to stand by our next Governor, Chancellor McGill. When you vote for a member of the Legislature, you vote your politics. The Democratic party all over the State is aroused and on election day will see us marching to victory. Hudson and Essex counties will give us a good majority, but I want the majority all over the State made so strong and so certain that the people of the United States will understand that New Jersey will stand in the ranks of true Democrats at the next National election.

In speaking of Somerset county candidates Mr. Bergen spoke in the highest terms of Charles A. Reed, of North Plainfield, and said that if he was a candidate on the Democratic ticket he would walk twenty miles, if necessary, to vote for him.

Mr. Lindabury spoke in part as follows:

Ladies and gentlemen:—There are two things for which I thank God, and they are that I am not a politician, nor am I a candidate for office. There is no office which I would accept under any circumstances whatever from our next Governor. The Republican party need have no fear that I will try for an office. They are welcome to the offices if they get there.

One of the principal reasons given today why the Democratic party should not get in power is that the party has become corrupt, that it is dishonest, that the State in some instances has been cheated, and that evils have gathered about the ship of State as barnacles upon a vessel. I have not time to go into a discussion of that, and it is quite enough disproved of, but I wish to know if there are more evil-doers now than there have been in any administration of either party. Human nature is still weak. There is no better statement of affairs than there ever was. You well know that the greatest loss ever occurred to this State was when a Republican treasurer embezzled $60,000 to $70,000. I do not mean to indicate that the Republican party is more corrupt. It is as old as Adam and will exist always and everywhere.

It is alleged that the "old gang," as it is called, is still in control of the Democratic party and it therefore should not have the support of the people. Excuse me if I speak plainly to that charge. If I believed it I would not be here speaking for its candidate. Look at the facts. These charges will not do; proofs are what is wanted on our part.

What do the charges amount to? The members of the State Committee consists of twenty-seven members elected by twenty-one counties and appointed by the chairman of the convention. Out of these twenty-seven representatives of the people, three only have been on the State Committee before, and those three have been upbraided by the Republican speakers. Now they, with McGill at the head, are a new people and it is not fair to say that they are the same old gang.

When you find such men as Paul Queen and Senator Kuhl representing the Democratic State Committee, you may feel assured that the committee are men who have always stood for what is desirable to the good of the State.

You know the fight we have had in this county against the race-track gamblers. Five years ago I had occasion to address you on this question. It was a coming evil and how awful it became, you learned later.

Two years ago I again addressed you on that question and it was thought in 1893 that the race-track question in this State was forever out of politics of this State. Let me tell you that from knowledge of which I am in possession, the race-track question is not yet settled. I know whereof I speak when I say that the race-track still exists.

I find that the race-track people are going about this State with interest unprecedented buttonholing men and asking them to vote for the Republican Governor and asking them, "Won't you consent to an honest racing bill?" It means an honest gambling bill. The means in New Jersey providing for honest racing are ample now. They could conduct honest racing without gambling if they wanted to. They want a bill like they have in New York by which the gamblers are prevented from cheating each other and not the public. That is what they refer to in "honest racing bill.

Gambling is now a felony in this State, therefore strenuous efforts are being made to modify that law which prevents them from gambling as they do in New York. And now the question is still unsolved and it becomes your duty to consider which party can send a man who is with the people in this great issue. And if you think with me you will cast your vote for a straight, honest Democratic ticket.

John W. Griggs was in the Legislature when this matter first came before the attention of the people.

In 1887 the worst racing bill that has ever been in Legislature in this country passed the Legislature with J. W. Griggs' name attached; in 1888 a Republican Legislature repealed the law against betting so that it could then be carried on openly.

You all remember a few years ago, that accursed disguised race-track bill which was passed and was only repealed on being called unconstitutional.

There was one man who from his own confession to me said that he knew what that bill was. He allowed that bill to pass the Legislature without one word of protest, a bill which, when the crafty nature of it became known, brought every respectable citizen to his feet with indignation. Although he knew what that bill was, not one word did he utter. That man was John W. Griggs. At that memorable time with the aid of God we won the victory and saved the State.

In Hoboken J. W. Griggs made a speech of encouragement to the henchmen of the race track gang, assuring them that nine-tenths of the people of New Jersey were with them and were only against winter racing. The attaches of Monmouth and of Clifton and other race tracks wear Griggs buttons and shout for Griggs and are spending all their time electioneering for Griggs.

They know that with this election will come the issue of race or no race tracks. It is their last hope and they rally for John W. Griggs. Under the circumstances it seems to me that you people of Plainfield with your moral character, and your intelligence cannot doubt where your duty lies in this campaign and I believe will know what to do—what you did five years ago and two years ago, lay politics aside and let your concience direct and guide your vote.

At the close of Mr. Lindabury's address John J. Green, of Westfield, James Febrey, of Elizabeth, and Nathan Mead, of Rahway, candidates for Members of Assembly in Union county, each made brief addresses.

Excellent music for the meeting was furnished by Guttman's band.

GIGGLE GABBLE.

A Boston Philosopher's Merry Musings.

A Well-Aimed Shot That Hit the Mark.

Fashion's Follies Pierced by Witty Words.

When Oliver Wendell Holmes was asked his idea of an afternoon tea, he wittily replied that it could be easily defined in four words:—"Giggle, gabble, gobble, git." How aptly this applies to the American way of eating. The food is swalled in a hurry, and half digested, remains a load on the stomach; the system is not nourished and thus the blood becomes impoverished. There is a feeling of fullness, with yawning, constipation, paleness of the face, icy coldness of the feet, faintness in the morning and drowsiness during the day. All these show that the blood is thick and stagnant, the result of eating improperly. Rich, red blood is needed, and to make this the stomach must be helped to do its work rightly. Nothing aids the stomach as much as a tonic, and thousands of people have learned that there is only one for such cases. Mr. S. W. McLaughlin, who resides at 213 Oxford street, Portland, Me., tried this tonic and here is the result in his own words.

'I have been troubled with dyspepsia for a long time, so that my food distressed me severely. Everything I ate distressed me and I often threw up my food, and my sufferings were severe. This continued for about three months.

"I employed doctors and several kinds of highly recommended medicines, but nothing did me any good until I struck Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. I heard it highly recommended and went for it, and I am cured. I used five bottles."

What a world of good Dr. Greene's Nervura, the great blood and nerve remedy, did the writer of this letter. It helped him as he never had been helped before. You need such a tonic; you are suffering as he did; you can be cured as he was. It is useless to put off getting this grand medicine; every day that you wait means added torments. End your sufferings at once by taking the remedy which has saved countless thousands throughout the world, and which is the wonderful discovery of the wellknown practising physician, Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th street, New York City, whom you can always consult either personally or by letter without charge.

THEATRICAL.

The highly thrilling comedy-drama "Lost in New York," one of the cleverest of all the realistic plays comes to Music Hall next Friday evening. In "Lost in New York" the audience is treated to a startling series of innovations that heretofore have been foreign in the productions of dramas of a similar character. Blood curdling episodes and situations have been abandoned, and in their place has been substituted a plot that deals with all the realities of human nature, and one that is interesting and gracefully played by a good company. The story deals with the shady side of life in New York, the plot hanging upon the vicissitudes of an unfortunate waif. The action of the play carries a number of the victims to Ward's Island Insane Asylum.

James Thornton's company of vaudeville artists, who appear in Music Hall Saturday evening, are an aggregation of specialists in their particular lines that are recognized as the best people in the country. Mr. Thornton himself has a wide reputation as a song writer and Bonnie Thornton is as a charming a bit of humanity as ever appeared before the footlights. Elizabeth and Plainfield are the only one night stands that the company are booked for, and the theatre-goers of this city are lucky to have the opportunity of witnessing the most refined and meritorious vaudeville performance on the road.

Dykeman Druggist, Catskill, N. Why not try a remedy so long tried and tested. Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c. and $1.00.

THE SHAKERS DO THEIR DUTY.

"If a man discovers a valuable medicine," said Horace Greely, "it is his duty to advertise it." Yes and at once; for suffering demands the speediest relief possible. But let the man first be sure. Suffering had better wait than be deluded by false hopes. Medecine, like surgery, must often seem cruel in order to be really kind. On this principle the Shakers, of Mt. Lebanon, N. Y., withheld their great indigestion and dyspepsia remedy from the public for several years. With them rightdoings is everything,—money, comparatively nothing. Hence the popularity and success of whatever they offer for sale. Having satisfied themselves of the merit of their medicine by employing it in the worst cases of digestive disorders in their own vicinity for years, they did their duty—they advertised it, under the name of the Shaker Digestive Cordial. In all cases where their is distress after eating, pain in the stomach, chest and back; aversion to food with the resulting symptoms, such as headache, furred tongue, eructation of gas, with weakness and loss of flesh, etc., the Cordial has a most happy effect. Being itself a digested food with power to digest other foods, it relieves the weak and possibly inflamed stomach of the labor it is in no condition to perform, gives new strength to the body and presently restores to the digestive organs their normal vigor. Taken immediately after eating this remedy insures the digestion of the meal and prevents fermentation of the food, which is the sourse of most of the afflictive symptoms which accompany dyspepsia. It is also as agreeable to the taste as it is potent as a medicine. To show their own confidence in it, and to hasten its universal adoption, the Shakers authorize druggists to sell trial bottles at the nominal price of ten cents.

ACTING FOR HIMSELF

Holmes Takes Charge of His Own Defense.

His Lawyers Withdraw from the Case—A Continuance Asked for and Denied—The Prisoner's Iron Nerve Carries Him Unmoved Through a Scathing Arraignment.

Philadelphia, Oct. 29.—Herman W. Mudgett, alias H. H. Holmes, was arraigned at the bar of justice of the criminal court of Philadelphia yesterday to defend his life against the charge of having murdered Benjamin F. Peitzel in this city on September 2, 1894. The widespread publicity given this sensational case attracted a great throng of people to the corridors of the city hall leading to the court room, but in anticipation of the crowd of morbid people who were attracted by the spectacle of a man battling for his life, cordons of police guarded all the entrances and only those having business in the court room were admitted. The very opening of the trial furnished an unusual incident in court procedure and was in keeping with the strange phases that have made this case unique in the criminal records of the country.

His Lawyers Drop the Case.

Directly after the prisoner had been placed in the dock and Judge Arnold had taken his seat upon the bench Holmes' two attorneys asked for a continuance of the case. This request was refused, as there had already been more than enough of the law's proverbial delay and Judge Arnold ordered the trial proceeded with. Then the defendant's lawyers announced they would withdraw from the case. The judge expressed his surprise at such unprecedented action at the beginning of a murder trial, and told the two attorneys that if they withdrew they placed themselves in jeopardy of being disbarred. Nevertheless, with the prospect of disbarment before them, the two lawyers persisted in their refusal to conduct the case and left the court room.

Holmes Addresses the Court.

The court thereupon appointed two attorneys to conduct the prisoner's defense. Although accused of crimes that would revolt a barbarous savage, there was something pathetic in the picture made by Holmes at this point. Slender, erect and more youthful than his pictures make him appear, and with an added delicacy given his naturally clear cut and refined face, by his long confinement in prison, Holmes rose to his feet and addressed the court. His voice was weak and quavering like that of a man who has been ill and hardly carried the short distance that separated him from the court.

His Iron Nerve.

He announced that he would not accept the lawyers appointed by the court and that he would conduct his own defense. A hum of astonishment went around the court room, but, alone and without a friend by his side, his iron nerve bore him up under the trying ordeal of the desertion of his counsel, exercised his right of challenge and before the jury was obtained eighteen men had been set aside by him. Holmes sat in the dock busily engaged taking notes during his terrible arraignment by the district attorney in his opening argument.

Few Signs of Emotion.

An occasional flush that suffused his cheek and once in a while a slight lifting of the eyebrows when the district attorney became particularly earnest were the only marks of emotion exhibited by Holmes. When the district attorney had concluded his argument Holmes requested that he be allowed light and writing materials in his cell in the county prison.

Asked To See His Wife.

This was granted, and then Holmes asked to be allowed to see his wife. A sharp interchange of dialogue occurred between the prisoner and the district attorney as to which wife he wanted to see, and finally Holmes was driven to say that it was the last woman who had married him. This woman has refused to see Holmes, but he obtained a promise from the court that a letter should be given her, and that if she would comply an answer to it should be sent to him from her. The court adjourned until morning.

HOTEL GUESTS POISONED.

They Had Eaten Canned Goods—All But One Out of Danger.

Huntington, W. Va., Oct. 29.—At the Adelphia, the leading hotel in this section, there is much excitement. At an early hour in the morning about fifteen of the guests began to manifest signs of poisoning, and since then about half the medical fraternity has been administering to the wants of the sufferers. All are pronounced out of danger to-day excepting Homer Smith, a prominent hotel man of Point Pleasant, who lies in a critical condition. Eating canned goods is supposed to be the cause of the trouble.

WOMAN FATALLY BURNED.

Her Clothing Ignites While She Tries To Extinguish a Bonfire.

Newburgh, N. Y., Oct. 29.—While Mrs. Bridget Brennan, aged 60 years, was attempting to put out a bonfire which boys had made in front of her residence last night, her clothing caught on fire and before the flames were extinguished she was fatally burned.

Carbolic Acid by Mistake.

Norwich, Conn., Oct. 29.—A 4-year old son of John Aubrey died yesterday afternoon as a result of taking a teaspoonful of carbolic acid, administered by his mother by mistake for medicine. The lad lived six hours after swallowing the acid.

Baltimore, Oct. 29.—Joesph E. & John B. Stansbury, for twenty-five years one of the largest oyster and fruit packing firms in the city, made an assignment yesterday. Liabilities, about $25,000; assets small.

Public Praise From Eminent Citizens.

References to Complete and Permanent Cures in Thousands of Cases Where Physicians Have Failed—Get a Free Copy of Munyon's Guide to Health, Ask Your Druggist for a 25 Cent Bottle of Munyon's Remedies and Cure Yourself.

Mr. H. C. Smith, No. 649 Perry st., Newark, N. J., says: "After several physicians gave up my case as beyond their skill, I wrote to Prof. Munyon. I had dyspepsia and constant distress in the stomach, chronic diarrhoea, catarrh, with continual dropping of mucus in the throat and stoppage of the nose. I suffered so much from rheumatism in the shoulder that I could scarcely move my arm. I also had kidney trouble, with backache and swelling of the feet and ankles. In fact, it would be hard to find a more obstinate and complicated case, and I could scarcely believe Prof. Munyon's statement that his remedies would cure me. But I confess freely that I was completely cured by a short course of Munyon's Remedies. I wish to particularly recommend his new catarrh treatment as the mildest and yet the most promptly curative of any I have used."

Munyon's Remedies are absolutely harmless and effect positive and permanent cures. A separate specific for each disease. At all druggists, mostly at 25c a bottle.

Personal letters to Prof. Munyon, 1505 Arch st., Philadelphia, Pa., answered with free medical advice for any disease.

are doing all the business. Our stock is the largest, prices are the lowest and terms the easiest in the city. Just give it a passing thought that you can get an antique oak bedroom suit, 8 pieces, for $15, $20, $25 and $30, including a woven wire bed spring and a mixed mattress. No house in the city offers such inducements.

And then to think again that you can get tapestry Brussels carpet for 50, 60, and 70 cents a yard, made and laid with paper, which is a saving of 15c per yard. Where is there a house in the city that will offer such bargains?

And then imagine and wonder how we can afford to give away a moquette rug or parlor table with a parlor suit for $20, $30, $40 or $50.

Some of our competitors say that our ads are too much sameness, and that this ad. is old. Well, we will admit it, but as long as it does the business and saves the people money we will continue to run it.

science

Science is "knowing how." The only secret about Scott's Emulsion is years of science. When made in large quantities and by improving methods, an emulsion must be more perfect than when made in the old-time way with mortar and pestle a few ounces at a time. This is why Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil never separates, keeps sweet for years, and why every spoonful is equal to every other spoonful. An even product throughout.

In other emulsions you are liable to get an uneven benefit—either an over or under dose. Get Scott's. Genuine has a salmon-colored wrapper.

REBELS GAIN VICTORIES

Defeat of the Spaniards in Three Pitched Battles.

Short and Bloody Encounter on the Bayamo River — Battle of Chivo Mountain — Insurgents Whip the Enemy at Mount Capiro—Spanish Gunboat Captured.

Santiago de Cuba, Oct. 17, via Key West, Oct. 29.—On the banks of the Bayamo river, between Corojo and Santa Barbara, a short distance from the city of Bayamo, there was a short but bloody encounter on September 24 between a part of the forces of the rebel leader Rabi, under his command, and a strong Spanish column, 800 in number, under Colonel Tovar.

Rebels in Ambush.

The rebels were lying in ambush on the right and left of the road along which the Spaniards were advancing. They allowed the vanguard, 200 in number, to pass unmolested, as well as a section of guerrillas, but when the main body of the column arrived, 300 of Rabi's men armed with rifles, opened fire from their positions and almost destroyed the main column. After the fire had lasted an hour Colonel Tovar, seeing that he was losing many men, ordered his vanguard to be reinforced and ordered the use of the bayonet.

Forty Killed and Wounded.

Rabi lost no time, but with 250 of his famous cavalrymen, attacked the Spanish centre and rearguard. The Spanish commander could not resist the attack, and ordered a hasty retreat, leaving on the field forty killed and wounded, whom his men were unable to carry with them. The rebels had five killed and ten wounded, and captured a quantity of arms and ammunition abandoned by the Spanish.

Battle of Chivo Mountain.

On September 25 the Spanish General Echague with 3,500 soldiers met with the vanguard of Antonio Maceo at the Guyabal river, district of Holguin. The vanguard had been sent to delay on Echague and his men to the top of Chivo mountain, where Antonio Maceo was awaiting them with 2,000 infantry and 700 cavalry. During the march the rebels were constantly firing on the troops, and after three hours' fighting the troops retired without daring to advance to the top of the mountain. The Spaniards had more than eighty killed and wounded and five soldiers were taken prisoners. The rebels had three killed and nine wounded.

Attacked by the Rebels.

Col. Zamora with 700 regulars of a body called the Guerrillas of Commerce left Baracoa on the 5th inst. for Mata Bay, where his forces encountered a body of rebels. The latter made a brave defense in spite of the help the Spanish troops had from a gunboat which constantly fired on the insurgents. After leaving Mata Bay, on the return to Baracoa, the Spaniards passed Mount Capiro, where the rebel leader Gil had 500 infantry, very well distributed, who opened fire on the Spaniards.

Another Spanish Defeat.

Both sides fought bravely for nearly five hours, but the insurgents had a better position than the Spaniards, and got the better of it. The Spaniards proceeded to Baracoa, as they saw it was impossible to reach the summit of the mountain where the rebels were. They carried with them eighty wounded, among them the guerrilla captain Claro Diaz, a Cuban, who fought with the rebels in the ten years' war, but who is now on the Spanish side, and five other officers — this after burying nineteen soldiers. The insurgents had only four killed and fifteen wounded.

Captured a Gunboat.

The South Coast steamer Mendez, which arrived here this morning, brought the news that the rebels had captured a small new gunboat named Santo Ides, which was stationed on the Cauto river. This gunboat was bought lately in the United States. The rebels took the crew prisoners, and also seized two cannons and all the ammunition.

REPORTED SPANISH VICTORY.

Gen. Aldane Said To Have Defeated the Rebels with Severe Loss.

Madrid, Oct. 29.—A dispatch to the Imparcial from Havana says that a private dispatch has been received in that city from Cienfuegos stating that passengers who have arrived at the latter place on the coasting steamer Julia state report that the government force under Gen. Aldane has won a brilliant victory between Sancti Spiritus and Ciego de Avila. The rebels are said to have lost heavily.

Extradition Papers Issued.

Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 29.—Extradition papers have been issued by Governor Hastings for the return of Benjamin H. Bamberton to New York. He is under arrest at Smithport and is wanted for grand larceny.

ASPARAGUS ENDORSED.

The Use of Asparagus in Medicine Officially Recognized.

Eminent French Physicians Have Found It Valuable—What the "U. S. Health Reports" Says About Sparagus Kidney Pills and Their Curative Powers.

Asparagus is a kidney tonic.

It builds up and invigorates the kidneys, and cures them from the effects of injuries, overwork, etc.

Doctors agree that Asparagus is good for the kidneys, but no strong extract with all the medicinal properties had been prepared until Dr. Hobb prepared it from the roots by a special process of his own.

He found this so successful that he made it up into pills, with some few other ingredients, and used them in his private practice for years.

This was the origin of Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills.

French physicians of repute have carefully tested Asparagus in all kidney troubles, and consider it of great value.

Now the United States Health Reports, Vol. XXIV., No. 2, has this to say about Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills:

"Dr. Dio Lewis said: Nineteen diseases out of twenty originate from diseased kidneys, and those who have made pathology a study will agree with this eminent physician that where the kidneys fail to perform their functions in any way the whole system becomes enervated and the body diseased. When the kidneys fail to perform their wonted task, effete and injurious matter is carried to all parts of the body. Through a mistaken diagnosis, these symptoms are often pronounced separate and distinct diseases, but as a matter of fact they can only be cured by remedies which reach and relieve the overworked kidneys and strengthen them, so that they can successfully act their part as cleansers of the body, thereby insuring regularity, strength and good health throughout the entire system.

"Among all the Remedies claiming to perform this much desired result, and which have been investigated by the compilers of these Reports, it has been found that while there was much to commend there was much to be desired. It is, therefore, with more than ordinary pleasure, after a painstaking investigation, and a long and careful examination of the results achieved by the remedy placed upon the market by the Hobb's Medicine Co., known as Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills, that we pronounce this preparation a kidney remedy par-excellence, and one that will speedily and effectually cure all diseases of the kidneys, whatever their origin or name, or however chronic or deep-seated they may be.

"During a quarter of a century of journalism, during which time we have exercised a watchful care over many of the preparations having for their object the cure of kidney diseases, we have never come across a preparation of such merit as Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills."

By eating Asparagus a slight effect is had on the kidneys, but a greater part of the curative property of the plant is not absorbed and goes to waste.

The extract of Asparagus, however, as prepared by Dr. Hobb contains all the active curative elements so prepared that they are at once absorbed and do their work of curing the kidneys without waste or loss.

Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills cure all kidney diseases and all blood diseases, such as Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Anaemia, etc.

They will cure when other remedies will not even relieve.

For sale by all druggists, or mailed prepaid for 50 cents a box.

Write for valuable pamphlet "A Filter for Your Blood," free on application to Hobb's Medicine Co., Chicago or San Francisco.

The market is full of cough mixtures but one trouble with most of them is that when they do a little good the patient has to take so much that he gets to loathe the taste. The Pineola Balsam is superior to other cough remedies because it is agreeable to the palate and its good effects are immediate. In a few days an ordinary cough is gone altogether. Bronchitis and asthma are more stubborn, but they too are cured by Ely's Pineola Balsam. A remedy worth trying. 25 cents is all it costs.

Ex-Senator Keyes' Opinion.

Ex-Senator W. J. Keyes, of Somerset county, who is a member of the Democratic State Executive Committee, says that the campaign now raging in old Somerset is a spirited one, and from indications there is evidence sufficient to warrant a Democratic victory. Senator Keyes has taken an active interest in the campaign throughout the entire State, and says there is no doubt of Chancellor McGill's election. With Hudson and Essex counties in the Democratic column there is absolutely no doubt as to the result. Hunterdon, Monmouth, Somerset, Sussex, Union and Warren counties rightly are Democratic and will so declare on November 5th.

HELPING THE NEEDY AND POOR

the clothes we wear. Money, which is societies universal representative of value, is really and fundamentally the representative of labor. It has no value except as it represents labor.

Our arts and inventions are the products of labor. Progress and growth are dependent upon labor. It is the prime essential of all health. Stop labor and this would be a dead world.

In other words we have discovered that charity has an economic side as well as a moral or religious side. It is this economic side that is represented by the charity organization associations. The aim of these associations is to see, first, the money that the society can devote to charitable uses is not wasted and that the largest amount of want and misery is relieved with the smallest possible expenditure of money. Second, that the causes of poverty and of want are removed and gotten rid of as far as possible. Third, As there is an intimate connection and relation between the charitable institutions of society and the penal institutions of the State, these associations are obliged to intrust themselves to a greater or less extent in the administration of the criminal laws of the State, and particularly to see that the great reformatory institutions of the state accomplish the work and perform the functions for which they were established. This is a vast field and at the present time only the outer edges of it are receiving attention.

The methods by which these associations are seeking to accomplish these objects are first to find out all the facts bearing upon the question of want, poverty and crime in the communities in which they are operating. First, lists are made of all persons receiving charity in any form; the amount of charity received by each, and for how long a time and by whom given. Second, the personal history of the recipient of charity is obtained with a view of discovering what has made them paupers. Third, their family connections are traced to find whether it is an inherited trait or quality. Fourth, they are examined as to their habits, whether they are intemperate, are immoral, are lazy, are shiftless, have been convicted of crime, are tramps. Fifth, if they are diseased, the causes and history of their diseases are investigated.

The reports founded upon the information thus obtained not only enable the association to bring about reforms in the way of correcting abuses and of preventing any one individual or family from getting more than his, her or its share of the charity funds of the community, but they lead to experiments in the way of furnishing work to the recipients of charity suited to their capacities and in the way of teaching them to do such work and by these means many are saved from becoming dependents and paupers, and some are elevated into self-supporting and self-respecting citizens; and at the same time the fact that a powerful and active organization is investigating and watching the workings of our charities and bringing every detail of it into the full light of day puts a stop to the rise and growth of abuses. For nothing is more true than that abuses and wrongs are hatched and grow in the dark, and depend upon darkness and neglect to enable them to continue in existence. Tammany Hall fell when Dr. Parkhurst and the Lexow committee let the light of day into its dealings with the saloons and houses of ill-fame in New York, and the racing ring in New Jersey was not powerful enough to withstand and outlive an exposure of its methods.

The statistics and facts that are gathered and formulated into reports by these organized aid associations furnish the materials which the philanthropist and the social philosopher study and work into theories and plans looking to the solution of the charity problem and the amelioration of the destitute and dependent members of society. A glance at a few of the subjects which these men are considering will show the value and importance of the statistical work contributed by these associations.

Among these are the following: What are causes of poverty? Is it because population tends to increase faster than food supply as asserted by Malthus? Is it because the landlord receives in rent too large a share of the annual product as asserted by Henry George? or, because the capitalist takes the whole product except what is barely sufficient to keep the laborer alive, as asserted by Karl Marx?

Is it the result of vice or immorality or intemperance?

Is it due to disease, either inherited or local, and if so what originally caused the disease?

Is it due to evil associations and bad surroundings, and to what extent?

Is it due to wrong education and bad bringing up, and to what extent?

Is it due to variations in value of money? or competition in trade? or excessive taxation? or undue power of class over class?

Is it due to unwise philanthropy?

Each of these causes has its advocate and the true cause must be discovered before a proper remedy can be applied.

Other subjects of investigation and study are: The effect of occupation in producing poverty and paupers. The effect of insufficient and improper food. The effect of deficient clothing, crowded dwellings, or want of medical attendance.

How can we keep charitable institutions out of politics?

The causes of idiocy and epilipsy?

The relative usefulness of charitable institutions supported by the state as compared with those supported by private charity?

These and numberless other questions of a similar character are constantly under discussion and calling for solution and these associations are doing a most important work in gathering the facts and contributing to the discussions.

Nor must it be supposed that because these associations are the embodiment of the tendency in our times to analyze and consider the economic phases of the charitable movement they are any the less genuine charitable institutions in the old-fashioned sense of the word charity. The interests of philanthropy and political economy in this matter are really identical.

The paupers, the unfortunates, all recipients of charity have a deeper interest than has even the state or the general community in having the causes of their misfortunes removed, because they are the greatest sufferers from those causes. Those causes cannot be removed in any other way than through the patient self-denying labors of just such an army of students as are at the present time engaged in the study of the science of philanthropy and these associations are the advance guard of that army.

When the Earl of Shaftesbury began his lifelong struggle to ameliorate the condition of the workwomen and children in the English factories and mines, he was reproached as a visionary and impractical philanthropist, ready and willing to pull down the whole structure of English trade and bury the working classes in its ruins. He and his followers replied that they would more believe that what makes a population stronger and healthier and wiser and better, could also make it poorer. Today English economists recognize that the factory acts which Shaftesbury devoted twenty-five years of his life to getting passed by Parliament and which reduced the hours of labor for working women and children by periods varying from one-sixth to one-third of each day, really "instead of ruining British industry, re-established its foundations."

Political economy marches side by side with religion and morality. If any success is to be achieved in ridding the world of poverty, or in substantially ameliorating the condition of the poor they must stand and work and fight together.

As the Citizens' Organized Aid Association of Plainfield is an economic institution we do not wish to subtract from the funds that the good people of this city are devoting to charitable relief any more than is absolutely necessary to carry on the auxiliary work of regulating and promoting intelligent charity in which this association is engaged. We do not mean that our annual expenses shall exceed six hundred dollars and our desire is that this amount shall be raised as far as possible by subscriptions of two dollars each from three hundred different persons. In this way no one is burdened. The amount that each gives to the active charities of the city is not interfered with, and the fund that we require ought to be most easily raised, for certainly there ought to be as many as three hundred persons in Plainfield who can give two dollars a year without abating their other charity contributions towards supporting such an institution as this.

We do not mean to ask a contribution in money tonight, but if any lady or gentleman present is inclined to aid us with a contribution and to become for the next year one of our desired three hundred we have placed promises in the seats which they can fill out and sign and which the ushers will collect in the contribution boxes at the close of the meeting.

After Col. Tyler concluded, Mr. Swayne sang another selection and then Mrs. Opdyke read the report of the Committee on Co-operation which was as follows:

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON CO-OPERATION.

During the past year the Committee on Co-operation has continued its endeavor to preserve and promote mutual understanding and assistance between the C. O. A. A. on the one hand and the various churches and benevolent organizations of Plainfield on the other. With the general public the committee has endeavored to secure co-operation, chiefly through the agency of the "Householders tickets." These were distributed last year with the hope that many house-keepers, instead of giving alms at the door, would use this easy means of referring applicants to the office, where such employment and assistance would be provided as each should need. But only a small number of tickets were presented at the office and the committee fear that their purpose is not clearly understood.

The special problem of how to provide for wayfarers applying after dark the necessary food and lodging, and at the same time to exact from them in return, payment in work, came up before the December meeting of the Council and was referred to the Co-operative Committee for solution. After consideration of this question and consultation with the Committee on Legal Matters and with the Chief of Police, the committee came to the conclusion that the only satisfactory and practicable way of adjusting this matter, would be the establishment of a lodging-place, accompanied by facilities for work in connection with the Almshouse, which is projected for the paupers of Plainfield.

Another question which the committee was asked to consider was the best method of dealing with persons begging from door to door under false pretenses. Advice on this subject was sought by letter from the charity organization societies of New York city, Philadelphia, Boston and Lynn, Mass., with the result that after much thought the committee recommended to the Council the following plan:

That the agent at the office report to the Committee on Co-operation with full details each case where the accusation of fraud seems well substantiated, that the committee may advertise such cases in the local papers, with description of persons and objects solicited for, carefully omitting names.

October, 1895. For the Committee.
EDITH R. LEONARD.

The report of H. B. Newhall, chairman of the District Committee, was read by Secretary John D. Miller, and was as follows:

REPORT OF THE DISTRICT COMMITTEE.

One hundred and fifty-two new cases have been under consideration, beside a very great number of applications for relief from those who were already upon the books of the Association, and were known as "old cases." In addition to the ordinary cases of distress, where food, clothing, rent or medicine where needed, we have had before us cases demanding more than ordinary attention, for example, seeking a guardian for one insane, placing a girl in the Trenton Industrial School, caring for orphan children, caring for the blind, and getting reparation for an old woman who had lost all she had, caring for an inebriate woman deserted by her husband, and in the worst stages of consumption. This last case has brought most forcibly to mind the fact that Plainfield has no place where transient lodgers can be properly cared for. Men can work at Mr. Holmes' wood yard and be lodged nearby for their work, but the system at present is hardly satisfactory.

The matter of street begging, and house to house begging, has been repeatedly brought into notice. There is no city ordinance which directly legislates against vagrants, mendicants and street beggars. Under our present well-organized system of charities in Plainfield there is no necessity for house to house begging. If all beggars, whether begging for themselves or for others, be sent to the central office, their claims would be investigated and their need provided for, and the citizens of Plainfield would save themselves the humiliation of giving to imposters and frauds.

Our friends are beginning to understand that we do not give aid—that our work is one of co-operation, not operation merely—when we say that we have disposed of so many hundred cases it means that we have fully investigated their needs—have learned their sources of supply—and have referred or recommended them to the church or charitable association to which they would naturally belong—a full co-operation of all the charitable agencies in town would do away with all duplication of relief.

Two churches have made the request that all applications for relief from members of such churches should be immediately referred to the proper church authorities with a statement of their case. It was deemed advisable during the summer months to invite the attendance of representatives of charitable associations at our regular committee meetings. One of the ladies who thus attended our meeting stated that the meeting with the District Committee had enabled her to obtain a much clearer knowledge of the work of the C. O. A. A. and that it would enable the C. O. A. A. to co-operate with the association which she represented to greater advantage.

The care of the city poor has been a matter of great concern and interest to the committee. The duty of the city to furnish some suitable home or farm for the proper care of the dependent poor cannot be emphasized too strongly.

January 31st, upon invitation of the District Committee, there was a joint meeting of Mayor Gilbert, the gentlemen of the Alms Committee of the Common Council of the City of Plainfield, Col. Tyler, Mrs. Woodruff, and the District Committee of the C. O. A. A.

The purpose of the meeting was to discuss the care of the city poor and to see if some steps could not be taken looking toward the establishment of an institution where the dependent poor could be properly cared for.

The gentlemen of the Alms Committee of the Common Council asked that the C. O. A. A. make some recommendation to the Common Council which that body could act upon. Therefore the District Committee offered to the C. O. A. A. the following:

The C. O. A. A. of Plainfield, having the deepest interest in the care of the dependent poor, and desirous of helping the Common Council of Plainfield in every way in this matter, respectfully submit the following proposition, to wit:

That the Common Council provide a small farm with the buildings upon it suitable for the care of the dependent poor, and make yearly appropriations to cover the running expenses of such institution.

On its part the C. O. A. A. promises to give to the institution such practical care and oversight as to guarantee—

1. That it shall be conducted upon the most economical basis.
2. That the inmates shall have all necessary care.
3. That order and discipline shall be maintained.
4. That no unworthy cases shall be admitted.
5. In the cases of those at present upon the poor list whom it would be wiser to help in their own homes, the C. O. A. A. will undertake to relieve the city of responsibility as far as possible by directing them to the proper channels of private charity.
6. The C. O. A. A. suggest that the Common Council appoint a committee of three to be with a committee of three from the C. O. A. A. a joint committee to consider and further this matter.

These recommendations of the Committee were adopted by the Association. A committee was appointed which conferred with the gentlemen of the Common Council of Plainfield and as a result $4,500 was appropriated by the Common Council for this purpose. It should be the purpose of the committee and Association to study ways and means and plans to secure additional funds so that Plainfield will be provided with a home for its poor.

REPORT OF THE EMPLOYMENT COMMITTEE.

Our practical effort was to place women needing employment in the houses of those already overburdened with the work devolving upon them, but who were unable to pay for the assistance they so greatly needed. During the first year only eighteen dollars was used in our initial experiment in this direction, but the practical result was encouraging. This work has been extended the past year with good results. Employment has in this way been given to self respecting men and women who would otherwise have been forced to receive charity. The committee could use very profitably a large sum of money in this way.

During the year just closing we have opened an Employment Bureau at the rooms of the Association on Second street. A member of the Employment Committee is in attendance every day between the hours of nine and eleven: she receives and registers the names of all applicants for work; their references are thoroughly investigated and the information so obtained is placed at the service of our patrons. At present our list comprises mainly the names of women who wish work by the day at sewing or housework, and men or boys for odd jobs, or days work, together with a few persons from all these classes for service by the month.

We wish to establish a thoroughly reliable Bureau of Information in regard to workers in all departments which we hope will serve the convenience of housekeepers.

It is extremely difficult to find work for those who do not know how to do it well, hence a natural accomplishment of the Employment Bureau is the Training School, or, as we call it, the Training or Employment Circle. This circle is composed of ladies who receive into their homes and train those who desire and need to be taught. This is a most valuable contribution to our work of organized aid. No one need fail of employment in household work through lack of an opportunity to learn how such work should be done. To these ladies are sent, also, such women as apply at the Employment Bureau for work, but who can furnish no references. A longer or shorter trial, as the case may require, enables the lady under whose supervision the work is done, to give a just estimate of the character and abilities of the worker, so that we can place her name upon our list, and speak intelligently of her to our patrons.

We hope to start under the auspices of the Relief Association an Employment Room on a small scale, similar in general features to the Employment Rooms for Unskilled Women carried on in New York last winter. The waste of the community is worked over by the unemployed into a useful product, out of which, so far as possible, they are paid for their labor. To illustrate: To the New York rooms were sent, by those interested in the plan, various articles which may be designated as waste, since they are useless to the possessé and yet of no marketable value. Here for instance, is an old velvet opera cloak, defaced and spotted: here is an old moth-eaten skirt of black and white plaid, and here are a number of pieces of purple flannel left, perhaps, from the making of some dress. From these materials were made several velvet caps for infant's wear, and a pretty black and white dress for a child of ten, trimmed with the purple flannel. The pieces that still remained were cut up, so far as possible, into squares for patchwork comforters. Still smaller pieces were cut into strips the size of the little finger and placed with others of the same sort to be knit up with a ball of strong cord into a fluffy mat. Almost every scrap of the material was thus made to contribute to some useful product. It is work of this sort which we wish to begin in Plainfield next winter. The workers will be credited with a certain daily wage to be taken in goods from the Relief Store. The product of the work of the Employment Room, beyond what the workers may themselves wish to purchase with the amount credited to them as wages, is to be sold and the proceeds applied to replenishing the grocery department. The planning and developing of this industrial idea is the new work before us the coming year. It is to be hoped that we shall be able also to make the initial movements towards a further extension of the idea of co-operative work among the unemployed to produce a product which they shall themselves consume. The men should be organized for outdoor work and a food product raised with which to supply our store. The work carried on in Detroit and many other places during the past two years, where the vacant lots adjacent to the city were utilized for this purpose, serves to point out the way in which this work might be attempted. There is, and must be, owing to the conditions of modern industrial life, a continuous corps of the unemployed, not always the same individuals, but suffering always, the same fate. These may be organized into working circles on the co-operative plan, and employed under proper supervision, to raise a product which shall be nearly if not quite sufficient for their own support. The charge upon the community would be much smaller than under our present system, and large numbers of citizens would be saved from the deterioration of character which inevitably results from the present method of dispensing charity. The poor farms of Frederiksborg, in the Netherlands, where a population of 2,000 are self-supporting, including payment of rent for the land, furnish a striking illustration of what can be done in this regard. On these farms there is a complete absence of agricultural and manufacturing machinery which would save labor on the ground that the expense is wholly unnecessary and it is undesirable to save hand labor where so many need work. Mr. Alfred Russell Wallace reports favorably on these farms as a solution of the problem of the unemployed.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

Reference to the annual statement of the Treasurer showing an expenditure during the year of $491.15 confirms the estimate made by this committee one year ago, that the sum of $500 would cover the yearly requirements. The affairs of the society have therefore been administered with economy. Your committee recommends that the expenses of the Association for the ensuing year be kept within the sum of $500. It is desirable that this money should be contributed in small amounts and by a number of persons, not only that the burdens do not fall upon a few, but that the influence of the Association may be widened and the character of its work and the principles for which it stands may come to the knowledge of all the charitable people of the city. The Treasurer's records show that the funds expended during the past year were given by 114 persons. It would have been better if the givers had numbered 250 or more. This committee requests the co-operation of the members of the Council and Association in securing a large increase of Two Dollar subscribers for the current year.

The meeting was arranged by the Executive Committee of which Col. Tyler is chairman. About thirty new subscriptions were received but more will be needed to continue the work of the Association.

After the meeting was over Mayor Alex. Gilbert moved that a vote of thanks be given Mrs. Boorum and Mr. Swayne for their kindness in singing, the motion was seconded and unanimously carried.

GAVETT'S.

A COUNTERFEIT SILVER.

Spurious Bills Being Passed on Plainfield Merchants.

There are a number of counterfeit $5 bills floating around Plainfield, of which the merchants should beware. The distinguishing marks are: First, That with the B in the upper right hand and lower left hand corner the final number is odd; second, that Grant's vingette appears to be made of straight lines instead of dots; and, third, that the word Rosecrans is printed as Roseci ans. The bills appear to be new, but the paper is friable and the silk weak. One of these bills was passed upon Mike Webber, the butcher, today, but fortunately for him he knows from whom he received it.

The Woods of Night.

"Hoo-hoo-oho-hoo-e-hoo-hoo-hoo-hoo!" shouts out our old friend the brown owl from the top of one of the great trees that surround us, for this is his own special domain. Moonlight is beautiful at all times and seasons, but when large wood, free from stunted undergrowth, is lit up by the soft light of a full moon a network of light and shade is seen above and below that could not be seen elsewhere, for the light creeps along the interlaced branches looking like silver and ebony. Before you have fully made out the fitness of this comparison to your satisfaction some of the huge silver beeches come in the range of light.

The shadows from the limbs and branches above checker the holes, creep down them and over the carpet of fallen leaves, shadows softly moving, at one time broken up, then for a short space they are massed, to break again and scatter themselves in all directions. Where some of the trees have fallen, leaving gaps and open spaces below, bright blue green patches show, about which dart gray dots are astir. These are rabbits feeding on the short tender grass, for nothing is left bare long; directly through some natural accident a larger growth ceases to exist, a smaller one of a very different nature is ready to take the place of it.—Cornhill Magazine.

The Ordeal of Christening.

"People whose households are unblest with children little imagine the tribulations of the 'pa and ma' as they gaze on them standing at the altar with a little child awaiting christening," remarked one of the fortunates after church service.

"There were five children held by fond fathers and mothers, and while there appeared to be some degree of tranquillity there was plenty of trouble. Somebody remarked that our little girl behaved splendidly, but nobody knew the troubles we had. That youngster broke my watch chain in two, and then my wife gave her the one she had been wearing and that was broken, and the pieces were jammed into my mouth. I took all this peacefully while the service was being read. Then the baby perceived her little brother on the second seat from the front and cooed out for him as loud as she knew how. He, a 3-year-old, responded by creeping under the front seat and tugging at his trousers, calling 'Papa, papa!' Then the minister took the little one in his arms amid her vigorous protestations, and poured water on her head. I took her from him and everybody afterward told us 'how nicely.' If they only knew how the sweat had run down me during that ordeal!"—Philadelphia Call.

The Use and Abuse of Court Plaster.

With regard to the use of court plaster, if a deep wound is plastered and covered completely, the secretions cannot escape, and inflammation will be the probable result. It is all right to cover a slight wound in this way, but for a serious one it is better, after washing it well and sprinkling in it iodoform powder, to take long, narrow strips of plaster and place them across the cut, drawing the flesh well together. A space will then be left here and there where injurious matter may escape.—Philadelphia Times.

A COMMON SCOLD.

Mrs. Jacques of Westfield the First Charged in Union County.

For the first time in the history of the Union County Criminal Court there was an arraignment yesterday morning of a defendant charged with being a common scold. The defendant was Mrs. Esther F. Jacques, a resident of Westfield, and she was indicted by the late Grand Jury. She was an attractive looking woman, and her appearance seemed to deny the possibility of the truthfulness of the allegations. It is alleged, however, that so unruly is her tongue that it is impossible for her neighbors to live with any comfort, and the houses immediately adjoining her home have been vacant for some time.

Mrs. Jacques said she was not guilty, but did not want a trial, and was willing to plead non vult. Prosecutor Marsh accepted the plea, and Mrs. Jacques gave bail for sentence on Saturday.

Thirteenth Anniversary.

The members of All Souls P. E. church at Fanwood, will celebrate their thirteenth anniversary on Friday. Meetings will be held all day. In the morning there will be communion, in the afternoon Miss Sibylla Carter, the world-renowned speaker, will make an address and in the evening the choir from the Holy Cross church of North Plainfield will be present, together with several prominent Episcopal clergymen. All interested are cordially invited to be present.

Eyesight is Priceless.

Good eyesight is priceless. Many people do not realize this, or seem to appreciate it until they are in imminent danger of losing this precious sense. Cheap and inferior glasses are positively injurious. Leech, Stiles & Company make only the best. If you are in need of glasses call on their specialist, who will be in this city at 107 East Front street on Thursday from ten a. m. to five p. m.

WEDDED IN BETHEL CHAPEL.

Miss Annie Burley Becomes the Wife of James Johnson.

Last evening a throng of relatives and friends gathered in Bethel Chapel to witness the marriage of Miss Annie Burley to Mr. James Johnson, both of this city, by the Rev. William A. Alexander. Many friends from this city, besides guests from out-of-town, were present at the ceremony and filled every seat in the chapel. Mr. Alfred White, of Plainfield, presided at the organ and played through the entire service. The bridal party came in to the strains of Lohengrin's march.

The bride's gown was a handsome one of white silk, the corsage of which was trimmed with white chiffon. She wore a long tulle veil fastened with a spray of orange blossoms. On the way to the altar she carried a large bunch of bride roses.

The maid of honor was Miss Betty Rodgers, who was gowned in cream colored crepon, trimmed with satin.

The costume of the bridemaid Miss Edna Potter, was like that of the maid of honor. The best man was William Johnson, of this city, and the groomsman was William Burton, also of this city.

The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. W. A. Alexander, pastor of the church.

CAUGHT FROM A RED-HOT STOVE.

Only the Bread, the Chair and the Cloth Were Burned, However.

The city fire department came very near having some work to do yesterday morning, and but for the timely arrival of John Vroom there would have been a lively blaze. It was at the house of Mrs. Laura Snyder, of Somerset street, and she had gone out on an errand, leaving her bread to rise. The bread was covered with a cloth and stood on a chair close by the stove. In some way the cloth and the chair caught fire. John Vroom stopped at the house a moment to get something, and seeing the blaze he threw the burning articles out doors. Had Vroom been a few minutes later the kitchen would have been in flames. As it was only the bread was spoiled.

To Advertisers.

The News of yesterday states that people call at their office and ask for free insertion of wedding and death announcement advertisements free of cost because the Daily Press charges nothing for this class of advertisements.

The Daily Press does charge for this class of advertisements at the rate of twenty-five cents for death announcements and fifty cents for wedding announcements, and accepts them at no other terms, except from the clergy. The Press, however, publishes notices of funerals and weddings in their news columns as news free of cost, and is always glad to receive the information, but when run as advertisements the above rates are invariably charged.

Bad Young Girls.

After the harvest festival was ended at the First Baptist church last Monday evening several of the ladies who left their wraps in the room in the rear of the pipe organ missed articles which had been left there within the wraps. When the receipts at the ice-cream tables were counted they were also deficient from the amount that should have been there. Suspicion pointed to two young girls who had attended the event, and yesterday they were confronted with the charges and confessed their guilt. They are both members of the Sunday-school, and on account of their parents the names are suppressed.

Successful Harvest Home.

There was another large audience at the Harvest Home festival at the First Baptist church last evening, and the young women had little difficulty in disposing of the goods on sale. It is not known as yet how much has been made, but the society is assured of receiving a nice sum for their efforts.

Mechanical Class.

The mechanical class at the Y. M. C. A. gives promise of being a great factor this year. W. S. Timis, of New York, a certified teacher of the science and art department of London, and George F. Scull, a graduate of Rutgers College, will be in charge.

Every mother should know that croup can be prevented. The first symptom of true croup is hoarseness. This is followed by a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given freely as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the cough has developed it will prevent the attack. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues.

A TALK ABOUT THE TREES.

PROF. GIFFORD ENLIGHTENS AN AUDIENCE ON FOREST CONDITIONS.

His Lecture Made Easy to Understand by the Stereopticon Views Exhibited—The Cedar the Most Abundant in Jersey.

An audience that filled the large hall at the Y. M. C. A. building listened last evening with pleasure to an illustrated lecture on "Forests in Tropical America and Forest Conditions in New Jersey" by Prof. John Gifford. This was the last lecture in the course of five given for the benefit of school suffrage for New Jersey women, and was fully up to the standard with the four preceding ones.

Aaron M. Powell introduced the speaker in a few words well spoken. Prof. Gifford commenced his lecture by showing a view of the Palisades and said that they ought to be saved by all means from the woodman's axe. From there he exhibited excellent views of New Jersey, telling how in some places trees secrete acid, causing rocks to disseminate and make soil. He said in part that the red cedar was in abundance in this State, while the white cedar was more valuable and less abundant. As soon as the pure wood is cut oak commences to grow. This is caused by squirrels carrying seeds.

The white beechwood tree is very scarce in New Jersey and found only in Tuckahoe. At Seven-Mile Beach the sand destroys trees and is gradually creeping toward the woods at the rate of one foot a year. It will not be long before the trees will all die.

From New Jersey Prof. Gifford took his audience to the West Indias and exhibited some of the finest trees to be seen anywhere He explained the condition of the climate on forest products. He spoke of the "life weed" that would grow anywhere, even if it was put in your pocket. The tree of the "Sorrowful Night" located in Mexico, and which is said to be 5,000 years old, was also shown. The views used by Prof. Gifford were exceedingly fine.

At the close of the lecture Lewis S. Bond sang effectively "Woodman Spare That Tree," and was accompanied by Howard Case on the piano. Aaron M. Powell then stated that there were several specimens of wood and foliage on exhibition that had been gathered by members of John Dalziel's school, and upon his invitation many stopped to examine them.

The course of five lectures have been most successful, both from a financial and helpful point of view, and all regret exceedingly that they are concluded.

Struck in the Optic.

While Harry Sheppard, of Chatham street, was playing with some boys yesterday, a stone was accidentally thrown and struck him in the eye, causing him much pain. The member is also much inflamed, though nothing serious is thought will result from the accident.

The Man Who Makes Votes.

James E. Martine spoke at Red Bank last night to an enthusiastic audience of Democrats. Judge Noonan, of Jersey City, and Col. May, of Camden, were the other speakers. Tonight tho farmer orator will speak at Bound Brook.

High School Notes.

G. S. Gethen, of Jacob Reed's Sons, of Philadelphia, came to Plainfield and measured about thirty of the boys for their uniforms. The uniforms will be sent as soon as possible to the High School Cadets.

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chambertain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family has need of it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once and you will never regret it. For sale by Reynold's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

LAWYER POWERS MARRIED.

HE WEDS ONE OF ELIZABETH'S CHARMING YOUNG WOMEN.

The Ceremony Performed in the St. James M. E. Church—A Number of Plainfield People Attended the Event

The marriage of Miss May Matilda Staats, of Elizabeth, and James Pendleton Powers, of this city, was solemnized at St. James. M. E. church, on Broad street, Elizabeth, at 7:30 last evening. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Price, of Sing Sing. The bride was charmingly attired in white satin, with a tulle veil. She carried white roses. The bridemaids were all gowned in pink and each carried a bouquet of pinks. They were Miss Elsie W. Reed, of Somerville, Miss Bull, Miss McKenzie, Miss Snow, Miss Donne and Miss Beerbower, of Elizabeth. The ushers were Mr. Vreeland, of Princeton, Mr. Updyke, of Elizabeth, Fred N. Voorhees, of Bound Brook, Harry H. Coward, Harry Maxson and H. B. Reed, of Plainfield. The church was handsomely decorated.

The wedding reception was held at the home of the bride's father, Thomas A. Staats, and was attended by about two hundred guests. The decorations were very beautiful and consisted manly of palms and smilax. The dinner was an elaborate one and was served in an excellent manner. The newly wedded couple left late in the evening on their wedding trip. After their departure, the rest of the evening was spent in dancing.

The guests from Plainfield at the reception beside the ushers were: Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Shotwell, Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Randolph. Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Hance, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Bond, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dunn, son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Beerbower and daughter, Mrs. David Snediker, Miss Louise Snediker, George Snediker, Mrs. T. J. Gillies and Charles Moffett.

The newly-wedded couple will spend ten days at the Atlanta Exposition as their wedding trip.

CASH STEPPED ON HIS FEET.

And Jim, Who Had Been to the Cider Joint, Called Names.

Jeremiah Cash, an ex-special policeman, took a walk last Sunday evening down Cottage place, and as he strolled along he met Jim Williams, alias "Jim Ashes," and as Jim had been visiting the cider joint in the neighborhood, that sweet and harmless liquid seemed to incline him towards fighting. Jim says that the ex-policeman treaded on his pedal extremities, and then he spoke to Cash in language, not the most choice, to be careful where he was walking.

Cash complained to the police, and last evening Sergeant Kiely found Jim at the corner of Front and Somerset streets and assisted him to the jail where he spent the night.

This morning the colored man appeared before Judge Coddington and had to pay $5 for his language to Cash.

The Hallowe'en Festival.

The barn festival at Constantine P. Ralli's, Belvidere avenue, tomorrow night, will be quite out of the ordinary. In the evening two short one-act plays will be presented, and then a single fiddler, colored, will be called in, and dancing in the barn will be in order. The young people are expected and so is a jolly happy time, because that is the way to keep Hallowe'en.

A Tennis Drill.

OPERA COMIQUE AT CRANFORD.

The Alcæus Society Opens the Season With Surette's Pretty "Priscilla."

At the Cranford Opera House last evening the Alcæus Society began its fourth season, giving Surette's comic opera "Priscilla" before an audience which filled the cosy theatre to the walls and represented all of Cranford and Westfield, most of Elizabeth and a good deal of Plainfield. The cast was as follows:

Myles Standish	William Holmes
John Alden	J. T. Brennan
William Bradford	Chas. Roux
Hatebad Higgins	John Dunn, Jr
Squanto	George Taggart
Priscilla	Miss Ethel Voorhies Thompson
Barbara	Miss Lucie M. Miller
Faith	Miss Josie Fursman
Prudence	Miss H. Jackson
Resignation	Miss Nettie Hellerman

There are not a few weak spots in Surette's opera with its tricky musical modulations and its frail libretto, but the admirable performance of last evening was so nearly perfect that these weaknesses were hard to detect. Mr. Holmes, of this city, and Mr. Brennan, easily won the laurels among the men, and Miss Thompson and Miss Hellerman among the ladies. Mr. Holmes' work as Myles Standish must go as the best he has done in more ways than one. his vocalizing having very perceptibly improved of late and his acting in a serious role evidencing the unusual scope of his ability as a player. Mr. Brennan's John Alden was thoroughly effective both musically and dramatically. Miss Thompson was sweetly tuneful and bewilderingly pretty as Priscilla, and Miss Hellerman artistically successful in the ungrateful role of Resignation. The minor parts were in the main capitally done, and the chorus as acceptable vocally as from a standpoint of girlish beauty and manly good looks, which is saying a great deal. The orchestra, under the direction of Charles S. Day, was fully up to the requirements of its difficult task.

Besides Mr. Holmes, George Taggart and Bradley S. Hall, of this city assisted in the performance

Spartans Elect.

A meeting of the Spartan Literary and Athletic society was held last evening at the home of Clifford Braider, on Manning avenue. The election of officers was held and resulted as follows: President, Charles M. Dolliver; First Vice-president, John Sheppard; Second Vice-president, Raymond Carroll; Secretary, Wm. Buell; Treasurer, Louis Hummer. A mock trial was then held with Louis Hummer as judge.

In Honor of Her Birthday.

A very pleasant surprise party was given to Miss Clara L. Crane, of East Second street, last evening, in honor of her thirteenth birthday. The party was gotten up by her mother, Mrs. U. B. Crane. The evening was spent very enjoyably in playing games and blowing out the birthday candles. Dainty refreshment brought the party to a close. About thirty were present.

A Hallowe'en Dance.

"A Ghost Dance," is the novel name for a party which Miss Emma Nelson, of New Market, is to give her friends on Hallowe'en. All the guests will be masked and dressed in white sheets. The invitations were written on black cards with white ink. A number of young people from this city are invited.

Union County's Fine Roads.

Henry I. Budd, State Road Commissioher, was in Union county this week, accompanied by Dennis Long, president of the county Board of Agriculture. He made an inspection of the Union county road system, which he pronounced to be in splendid condition and as fine as anything of the kind he had seen in the State.

Names Wrongly Spelled.

The one striking feature about the registry list of voters over in North Plainfield is the large number of names incorrectly spelled. Even the Mayor, B. A. Hegeman, Jr., is down as "Hegaman," and there are others.

From The Sunny South.

The interior of Charles Smith's saloon presents a pleasing sight with an arrangement of genuine cotton right from Atlanta. The cotton balls are gradually opening and are greatly admired. Several minature bales of cotton are also exhibited.

"Many of the citizens of Rainsville, Indiana, are never without a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house," says Jacob Brown, the leading merchant of the place. This Remedy has proven of so much value for colds and croup in children that few mothers who know its worth are willing to be without it. For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, corner of Park and North avenues.

CAPTURED A U. S. DESERTER.

A FORMER PLAINFIELD YOUNG MAN TAKEN BACK TO THE ISLAND.

Had Eluded the Police for Some Time, But Was Captured With Tramps Last Night—Will Be Tried for Deserting.

A crowd of tramps and drunken men came down to the "Tank" at Greenbrook on the Jersey Central Railroad last evening and took possession of the sand house and refused to budge, despite the efforts of the railroad employes to oust them. Railroad Detective Ritterbush telegraphed to Chief Grant and last evening they went down on a freight train. They found that the tramps had merely made a lodging place of the house and that several were employes of the company who had come there to sober up after a spree. There were several "knights of the road" in the party, and one young man for whom the police have been looking for some time on the charge of deserting from the United States Army. He was brought to Plainfield and locked up for the night. His name is Rufus Case, formerly of this city. He attended school in this city, worked in the Scott Press Works and finally enlisted in the army. He was quartered at Governor's Island and deserted some time ago and has been in hiding ever since. Chief Grant took him to Governor's Island this morning.

MONEY BY BIRTHDAYS.

Enjoyable Time Spent at the First Presbyterian Church Last Night.

A birthday party was given by the Sunday-school of the First Presbyterian church last evening to all their friends and the chapel was crowded with young and old people who came to attend it. After allowing everybody to settle down, the programme opened with a selection by four little boys, Vincent B. Miner, Harry Meyerschmidt, Wm. Hepburn and Thomas DeMeza. An enjoyable recitation was next given by Miss Grace E. Overton, in her usual delightful manner. William MacKillop, rendered an excellent violin solo after which Miss Bessie Blair, gave a vocal selection in her usual charming way. After another amusing song by the four boys entitled "Old Jack Frost," the programme concluded with a piano solo artistically rendered by William E. MacClymont.

The little bags which had been given away with the invitations were then collected, each containing the number of cents the giver was years old according to months. While the bags were being collected, Miss Kellogg read selections appropriate to each month. Superintendent H. B. Lounsbury then announced that $64.12 had been taken in and that the most in one bag was $1.12.

" " Second district	521

The borough registration was as follows:

First district	555
Second district	473

In most of the districts there is a small falling off in the registration as compared with last year.

A Young Life Cut Short.

Wesley Ross, son of William Ross, of East Second street, died at his father's home this morning about seven o'clock after an illness of several months from a complication of diseases. Until three months ago he was in the employ of VanEmburgh & Son, and was well liked by the firm.

He failed rapidly during the past month and all hopes of recovery were despaired of. He was in his 22d year and was well-known about town.

The funeral services will be held Friday afternoon, at 2:30, from the home of decedent's uncle, 302 East Third street.

Hallowe'en Bazar.

A concert, Japanese tea and Hallowe'en bazar will be held at Marconnier chapel tomorrow evening. Music will be furnished by the Metuchen Glee Club. A Japanese cup and saucer will be given to each visitor as a souvenir. The fate of each one in attendance will be decided by the Witch of Reinnocram with her enchanted cakes. The admission will be ten cents.

—Don't forget to vote; but if you do, don't fail to see H. M. Jaquett's line of men's suits and overcoats.

VIENNA'S NEW MAYOR

His Election May Have International Results.

Dr. Lueger's Anti-Semitic Prejudice Causes a Feeling of Uneasiness To Prevail—The Trouble Last May the Effect of the Election of the Same Man.

Vienna, Oct. 30.—The election of Dr. Lueger, leader of the anti-Semites and first vice-burgomaster of this city, to be mayor may have far-reaching and international consequences. Vienna is the first of the capitals of Europe to be administered by anti-Semites, and a feeling of uneasiness prevails. When, in last May, Dr. Lueger, who is the anti-Semitic leader in the reichsrath, was elected vice-burgomaster. Dr. Grubel, the then burgomaster, who is a liberal, was opposed to Dr. Lueger and resigned the burgomastership. Dr. Lueger refused to accept the office to which he was elected, basing his refusal on the fact that the majority he had received was the smallest that was permitted by the law to elect. Upon learning of his refusal a mob made an attack on the town hall, which they stormed and took possession of. The rioters occupied the galleries and lustily cheered Dr. Lueger and hooted his opponents. Finally the military were called to restore order, which was done only after a fierce fight.

Foreign Governments Notified.

The capture of the municipal council by the anti-Semites was treated as involving a great deal more than local politics. In fact, the ambassadors at Vienna notified their respective governments of it as though it was of international importance. The victorious party is made up of a lot of restless elements, including exereme clericals, ultra-feudal aristocrats and all shades of the proletariat inclusive of labor agitators and socialists. The numerical and financial strength of the Hebrews in Vienna made hostility to them a most telling pretext in the campaign, and the vote shows that full advantage was taken of this hostility.

Tolerated the Movement.

The anti-Semitic agitation in Austria is of long standing. Prior to Count Taaffe's accession to the prime ministership there had been a moderate liberal administration in the municipality of Vienna. The late prime minister in his efforts to annihilate the German liberal element tolerated the anti-Semitic agitation. That movement originated in Austria among the small tradespeople, who believed the interests of their class could be furthered by certain restrictive measures directed against large capitalists. This reactionary movement was taken up by the clericals. Count Taaffe tactily encouraged it and his policy was for a time continued by his successor. The anti-Semitic party which hitherto has thriven on the discontent of the small tradespeople, now sought and obtained support among the lower government officials, whose position is generally recognized to be unsatisfactory.

The Jewish Liberals.

It was part of Count Taaffe's system to repress any manifestation of discontent among the smaller government employes, and it was only after he resigned that they were able to vent their grievances. Subsequently great discontent was felt among the liberal Jewish element of the population, which had everything to apprehend from the clerical reactionary regime in force. They did not see any advantage in having contributed by their votes to secure office for the leaders of the liberal party when their position was practically worse than before. This is believed to be the reason why a certain number of Jewish liberals cast their votes in favor of the anti-Semitic candidates. What the result of Dr. Lueger's election will be is a difficult matter to foretell.

Hot Springs, Ark., Oct. 30.—The complications brought about by the determination of Governor Clarke that Corbett and Fitzsimmons shall not contest for the fistic championship in Arkansas and the equally strong determination on the part of the citizens' committee and Hot Springs Athletic club that the men shall come together in the Ozarks is rapidly developing into a serious crisis. Things look squally to-day and nobody seems to know what will be the outcome, although there is considerable forebodings that trouble will ensue.

Governor's Latest Move.

When Sheriff Booker of Pulaski county, in which Little Rock is situated, arrived here the latest move of the executive was made apparent. This package had been personally delivered to him by the governor with orders to take the first train and return, if possible, today.

Warrants for the Fighters.

On his arrival he was met by Representative South of Baxter county, who is still here watching the movements of Brady and party and the citizens' committee in the interest of the governor, and then proceeded to the sheriff's office. That official being just now on the state line awaiting the arrival of Fitzsimmons the package was opened by one of his deputies. Its contents were fourteen warrants, calling for the arrest of Corbett, Brady and their party and the production of each individual this afternoon in Little Rock.

Fitzsimmons Expected To-night.

A dispatch from San Antonio, Tex., says that Fitzsimmons passed through there yesterday and that he expects to reach here to-night. Fitzsimmons stated that he would visit Corbett upon his arrival at Hot Springs and give the champion a chance to have a rough-and-tumble fight if he was looking for it. Governor Clarke says he will plant the militia in Hot Springs if Fitzsimmons shows up and that it is his purpose to keep strictly to business. Almost everybody in this county believes the fight will take place in spite of the governor. Over 700 fight tickets were sold here to-day at $25 each.

WOMAN'S SUFFERING.

RELIEVED BY MAIL. HOW IT IS DONE.

How a Woman Works for Her Sex.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Seated at her desk in the bureau of correspondence, this wonderful woman opens her letters from all parts of the world. A few extracts from their contents tell the story.—

FROM IOWA. "I am in a very bad condition. My courses have stopped from catching cold, and the pain is fearful. I am all bloated up; and the pain in lower part of my body is terrible. My back and head ache all the time. What shall I do for it?" MISS L——, Des Moines.

FROM NEW JERSEY. Mrs. Lizzie DeCline, 224 Grand Street, Jersey City, relates her miseries resulting from womb trouble, from which she was relieved and cured by the timely use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She ends her letter by saying, "I owe all to you."

FROM OHIO. Mrs. Newton Cobb, of Manchester, O., writes: "I used eight bottles of your Vegetable Compound, and I am happy to say it has cured me of painful menstruations and backache. My suffering every month was dreadful. The doctors gave me morphine to ease the pain; nothing to cure me. Oh, I want to tell every one what cured me! I wish every suffering woman would write and get your advice."

FROM ILLINOIS. Miss Jennie ——, Chicago, states that she is twenty-two years of age; occupation, saleswoman in large dry goods store. Constant standing has brought on womb trouble, the symptoms of which she describes fully. She says: "Help me if you can. There are several girls I know who have written to Mrs. Pinkham, and been cured by her advice and medicine."

FROM PENN'SYLV'N'A. Miss Mary Smylie, who resides at 2078 E. Susquehanna Avenue, Kensington, Phila., writes: "I am a working-girl, and must stand eleven hours every day. I have suffered terribly from painful menstruations and kidney trouble. At times my head was so dizzy I could hardly see. A friend recommended your Vegetable Compound. I am a different girl now; no more aches and pains. Oh, thank you, thank you!"

The above extracts from many hundred letters received daily by Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., go to show how easily ailing women can obtain advice and relief. Write to Mrs. Pinkham.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, the most successful female medicine known to the world, can be obtained of any druggist in the land.

TORTURED TO DEATH

Negro Murderer Tied to a Tree and Roasted.

Fat Pine Splinters Fixed in Various Parts of His Body and Fired—His Agony Lasted Nearly an Hour—Bloodhounds Tracked Him—His Fiendish Crime.

Fort Worth, Tex., Oct. 30.—A young negro was arrested yesterday at Long View, Gregg county, Texas, charged with the murder of Mrs. Leonard Bell, near Tyler, the county seat of Smith, an adjoining county. He was taken back to Tyler and there by a mob taken from the officers, removed to the scene of his fiendish crime and then slowly roasted to death. He was tied and splints of resinous pine and small twigs were applied to various parts of his body until, after fifty minutes of torture that would have done credit to the inquisitors of old, the negro died.

He Confesses.

He confessed to his participation in the murder of Mrs. Bell. The crime for which he was so swiftly punished was the murder of Mrs. Leonard Bell, wife of a young farmer living four miles northeast of Tyler, who had been ravished and her throat and body cut half in two from the thighs to the throat. She was found lying in the public road a short time after the terrible deed had occurred. She was last seen at her mother's house, which she left for home about 5 o'clock, at which time it is supposed the crime occurred. Evidences of a terrible struggle are plain, as the woman's clothes are torn from her body and all around in the road are tracks, and these are so many that it is hard to determine at this writing whether there is more than one person connected with the crime. The body was found lying in the road about a quarter of a mile from a gin where a number of men were at work.

Bloodhounds on the Trail.

They knew nothing of the crime until the body was discovered. Mrs. Bell was a young married woman, 19 years of age, and her husband and relatives are highly respected citizens in the community. Bloodhounds were brought from the state penitentiary at Rusk, forty-eight miles from Tyler, Superintendent Edson of the Cotton belt furnishing a special engine for that purpose, and four hours after the discovery of the crime the dogs were on the trail.

Execution of Murderers Smith and Davis at Dannemora Prison.

Dannemora, N. Y., Oct. 30.—Smith and Davis, who were executed at the prison here yesterday, were the twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth victims of death in the electric chair since that device was adopted by this state as a mode of capital punishment. It was the second time in the history of the state that two murderers were executed on the same day and in the presence of the same witnessss. Another interesting feature of the killing of the two men was the fact that the usual sentimental features were lacking. The men were not bothered by being dressed in funeral black clothes, but came to the execution room in flannel outing shirts, without coats or vests, with plain dark trousers and slippers, which were taken off as they sat down in the chair. Both men met death firmly.

A DRAMATIC INCIDENT.

The attorney showed the effects of his illness, but his argument was strong and before it was completed Mrs. Durrant, the defendant's mother, was in tears. Deuprey's physician accompanied him and administered stimulants while he spoke.

IRISH AUTONOMY.

William Redmond Says "England's Danger Is Ireland's Opportunity."

Dublin, Oct. 30.—William Redmond (Parnellite), M. P., for East Clare, delivered a speech at a political meeting here last night. He declared among other things that the Irish question would never be settled until European questions placed England in such a position that she would be unable to ignore or resist the Irish demands. If Ireland did not receive a measure of autonomy in the near future, Irishmen would certainly endeavor to realize the old saying that "England's danger is Ireland's opportunity."

Commissioner of Pensions Lochren has submitted his annual report to the Secretary of the Interior. It shows that up to June 30th, 1894, there were 969,544 pensioners, and in the last year 39,185 new pensions were granted and 4,206 restored which had been dropped from the rolls, making an aggregate of 1,012,935. Unless further pension legislation is enacted, the Commissioner thinks that the appropriation of $140,000,000 will be sufficient for the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1896.

Logically, the fight which the Republicans are making is a most absurd one. If they believe that "the same old gang" of Democrats will ride into power with McGill, it necessarily follows that the latter cannot be the man that they freely admit he is. If he is in all respects worthy of the office for which the Democrats have nominated him, then is it not preposterous and irrational to expect the people to believe that they have anything to fear from "the same old gang," or anybody else, while he is in the Governor's chair?—Hoboken Observer.

THEATRICAL.

The Boston Globe says of "Lost in New York," which comes to Music Hall next Friday evening: The Bowdoin Square theatre was crowded last night by an enthusiastic audience, assembled to witness the return of that realistic melodrama, "Lost in New York." The play was excellently staged, and the acting through the entire piece was commendable. "Lost in New York" is one of the best productions from the pen of Leonard Grover, who, in this work, has dealt with almost every phrase of life in a metropolis like New York, not neglecting, of course, the thrilling and sensational elements so much enjoyed by a good proportion of theatre-goers. The play needs no introduction to a Boston audience, as it has been presented here several times, but it is doubtful if the realistic features have ever been so picturesquely presented as they were last evening.

Many of the popular songs now being sung on the stage are from the pen of James Thornton, whose elite vaudeville company appears in Music Hall on Saturday evening, and there is nothing so pleasing as to see the original, so that no doubt a large crowd will attend the performance and hear Mr. Thornton sing himself. He not only sings, but also gives a monologue talk that is real funny. And then Bonnie Thornton, America's mascot, is a dainty bit of humanity who wins her way into the good graces of the audience the moment she steps on the stage. How Does He Know?

A French medical authority has decided that death by falling from great heights is absolutely painless. He says that the mind acts with great rapidity for a time, and then unconsciousness follows, and now a scoffer has come to the front with a pertinent inquiry as to how the Frenchman knows anything about it. The argument is made that no man has fallen from the height of, say, a mile or so and landed on the earth in a condition to tell anything as to his feelings. Most of the people who have fallen great distances have not been greatly inclined to talk of their adventures, and, in fact, most of them, on arrival from their trip, have, if any acquaintances have been handy, made quick trips to an undertaker's shop.—New York Tribune.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury.

OH, SWEET!

Oh, sweet beneath this tree to lie
And watch with wide incurious eye
The broken glimpses of the sky
And where the sunlight through the leaves
A subtle flickering broidery weaves,
To hear the low eternal sigh
Of happy winds in tree tops high
Or gnats hung in a wavering cloud,
Now far and faint, now near and loud;
Or bees that quickly come and go
On noisy errands to and fro;
To see the swallows far, far up,
Like motes in heaven's azure cup;
To lounge and lie with dreamy eye
And feel the world go whirling round,
And half in sleep to hear the sound
Of winds that shake the tree tops high.

TREACHEROUS REDSKINS.

Experience Shows It Is Not Safe to Trust the Indians.

Lieutenant Thomas Cruse was in command of a company of Indian scouts in the summer of 1880 in Arizona. They were White mountain Apaches and had been under him for over a year. Throughout this period, which was a stormy one for the Arizona troops, these Indians had been good soldiers and were faithful to the service in shooting down their own race and showing absolute loyalty to Uncle Sam.

Lieutenant Cruse was often complimented on the spirit which his Indians exhibited, when those under other officers were constantly proving disloyal. It isn't betraying a confidence to say that Cruse was a little vain over his redskin cavalrymen, and he didn't hesitate to give his brother officers a "tip" occasionally as to how to manage them.

"Just take them into your confidence, so to speak," Cruse would say, "and show them that you have faith in their loyalty." The lieutenant was thoroughly honest in giving this advice.

For more than a year he has been in command of these Apaches. He fought side by side with them, shared their dangers, ate with them and slept with them, and they had always been as true as steel.

Not long after Cruse had been giving pointers about how to manage the Apaches the Messiah craze took hold of the Indians of Arizona and the old time loyalty gave way to Indian superstitions. Troop A stood by Cruse well enough, but he was too familiar with the Indian character to mistake the sullen look that showed itself in the faces of the redskins. He asked that they be discharged and Mojave Indians put in their places. This was not done, and on Aug. 30, 1881, without a word Troop A broke away from the United States service and joined the hostiles at Cibicu creek.

The battle which followed this revolt is a familiar story in army circles. Two or three days after the unceremonious departure of Troop A, 500 Indians swept down on two troops of Uncle Sam's cavalry, and it looked for awhile as though there would be a repetition of the Custer tragedy, but by daring heroism the brave cavalrymen cut their way through the circling band of redskins and made their escape with only ten men killed, though at least a score were badly wounded.

"Never trust a redskin as far as you can throw a bull by the tail," is the way the lieutenant put it a few days later when we were discussing the tragedy of his former trusted comrades.—Washington Post.

Paris Cafe Waiter's Tale of Wrong.

The Paris cafe waiter has been throwing himself upon what, owing to his failure to appreciate where the sympathy comes in, he somewhat fondly hopes may prove a sympathetic public, with his tale of wrong. He is, he says, neither paid nor fed nor slaked by his employer. So far from that, he pays his employer, and is fain to feed and slake himself into the bargain. Moreover, he pays his employer every morning, in advance, 5 per cent upon the sale price of the consommations he has got to work off in the course of the day. To recoup himself he must look to his tips, and till he has been tipped to the amount of 5 shillings, his profits do not begin to run. When they do begin, however, they must needs run to something considerable, seeing that there is a brisk competition for every vacancy in the ranks of his profession.

It follows, therefore, that it is really the public who pays all concerned, and the public is thus likely to keep its sympathy for itself. Of course, if it withheld its tips also, the waiter would have to be paid and provisioned by the cafe proprietor. But then, the public shrewdly surmises, the prices of its consommations would be put up, and, though tipping might come into the fashion again, the price would never come down. It naturally prefers the indirect contribution as it is.—Pall Mall Gazette

TAKING THE TESTIMONY

Real Work Begun in the Holmes Murder Trial.

Daughter of the Victim on the Stand—Objection by Holmes Sustained — The Prisoner Exasperated—His Lawyers Permitted by the Court To Resume Charge.

Philadelphia, Oct. 30.—Public interest here in the trial of H. H. Holmes, the insurance swindler, for the murder of B. F. Pietzel is so great that notwithstanding judicial orders that only those persons having business with the case should be admitted to the court room and notwithstanding the presence of a platoon of reserve policemen and an increased force of court officers, a crowd surged and struggled along the corridors of the city hall this morning in an effort to reach at least the outer door of the room in which one of the strangest criminal narratives of the age is to be unfolded.

Holmes in the Dock.

When Holmes was placed in the dock he busied himself for a few minutes in arranging his papers and reading his notes. He then said that, although he had seen his wife by permission of the court, the interview had been so short that he would like to meet her again. Permission was given. Then the prisoner wanted to know whether during the testimony of one witness all the others should not be excluded from the court room. Judge Arnold answered that this would be done if the exigency arose. There was a lull for a moment and then began the great work of the trial—the taking of testimony.

Taking Testimony.

Jeannette Pietzel was the first witness called. She merely identified photographs of her father. Eugene Smith, who found Pietzel's body in the Callowhill street house on September 4, 1894, then told the story of his discovery. While he was testifying he drew a packet of papers from his pocket to consult as to dates, but Holmes objected to his doing so because they had not been prepared by the witness, and the motion was sustained. Holmes then asked a number of immaterial questions. Smith, at the request of the prisoner for a plan of the house in which Pietzel's body had been found, gave way to Marshall D. Pugh, who had drawn a plan. He identified it and then Smith resumed the stand. Holmes submitted Smith to a long examination, dwelling upon every point of the testimony adduced by the commonwealth, but the witness was unshaken.

The Prisoner Exasperated.

At last, becoming exasperated at his inability in this respect, and in consequence of an immaterial remark thrown in by Mr. Graham, Holmes exclaimed: "I object to the bloodthirsty manner in which the district attorney and this witness are trying to draw the inference that I rushed into this potter's field and mutilated the dead body of my friend." Dr. William J. Scott was called, and at this juncture Holmes renewed his request that all witnesses except the one on the stand be excluded from the room. Mr. Graham objected to this, and Holmes sarcastically said: "I would like to know whether you, Mr. Graham, or the honorable court is to make the rulings in this case. I have been anxious to know since the trial began." Judge Arnold upheld the district attorney and Holmes asked for and was granted an exception to the ruling. Holmes then asked that the witnesses connected with the murder of B. F. Pietzel be excluded. This was granted him, and as Holmes called out the names of these witnesses they left the room.

Evidence of Doctors.

Dr. Scott was then permitted to tell his story, which concerned his having been called in to examine Pietzel's body after its discovery. The doctor dwelt upon the discovery of chloroform in the stomach, and said that large quantities of the drug had been used, and from the congested condition of the lungs and the empty heart, it was apparent that the man met a sudden and violent death from chloroform poisoning. In the examination of Dr. Mattern, another physician, Holmes seemed to have made a point by getting him to contradict himself, but the witness finally explained himself, and the point went for naught. Holmes finally became confused himself and announced that he would call Dr. Leffman, who testified as to the effects of chloroform on the human system, as a witness for himself at some future time. Coroner Ashbridge testified as to the identification of the body of Pietzel.

Afraid of Breaking Down.

Holmes then asked the court to hold two sessions a day instead of three, as he was afraid of breaking down, and the court said the request would be considered. Holmes then said that the lawyers who had abandoned his case had reconsidered their action and wished to again undertake his case, and the court permitted them to do so. A saloon keeper and his bartender then testified as to the visits of Pietzel to the saloon, but said that they had never seen him intoxicated. Attorney Shoemaker attempted to shake the testimony of the next few witnesses, but was unsuccessful. Witnesses then testified as to his residence on North Eleventh street, this city.

Holmes Agitated.

During the examination of Dr. Alcorn by the district attorney with the object of showing that Holmes ruined young Alice Pietzel, the prisoner for the first time began to exhibit some agitation, and his relief was evident when the witness was dismissed. During the testimony of a subsequent witness, Mr. Graham introduced a crayon of Holmes before he had grown a beard, and Mr. Rotan entered a vigorous protest to the proceedings, claiming it was all done simply to influence the jury. At this point the commonwealth had presented all the witnesses for identification of the body and at 8:50 the court adjourned until morning.

Steamer Commodore Released.

Washington, Oct. 30.—Attorney General Harmon was notified yesterday afternoon of the release of the steamer Commodore at Wilmington, N. C., with her crew and cargo. The Commodore was seized on account of having arms and ammunition on board supposed to be for the use of the Cuban insurgents.

TOMBS OF LIVING MEN

FINAL RESTING PLACES PREPARED FOR NOTED MILLIONAIRES.

Expensive Mausoleums Marked by Severe Art and Solidity—Impressive and Massive Stone Structures Into Which No Ghoul May Make His Way.

A tour of a great city of the dead, like Greenwood or Woodlawn, is well calculated to impress one by the vast sums that are being spent of late years in monuments, sarcophagi and tombs, some reaching as high as $250,000 for a single mausoleum. But the most striking thing about the great cemeteries now is the tombs being built by living men who seem to have been forcibly struck by the adage, "If you want a long life, prepare for death."

Charles T. Yerkes, the Chicago cable king, is fond of his mausoleum in Greenwood. It is the acme of concentrated solidity. Nothing, it is claimed, could be more indestructible in the way of masonry. His plot cost him about $11,000. It is beautifully located, near Ocean Hill and within a stone's throw of Henry Ward Beecher's last resting place. It is built of crystal granite, light in color, with a fine grain, and is 50 feet 6 inches in length, 23 feet wide and 20 feet 6 inches high. The pure Grecian style, after the Parthenon, was followed. There are eight columns, with Ionic capitals and four pilasters. Within six pilasters of marble support a marble ceiling, which is divided into four panels. In the center rest two sarcophagi, the outer one being of polished granite and the inner receptacle, for Mrs. Yerkes, being of heavy bronze. The stained glass windows were imported.

The bronze entrance doors are as burglar proof as the great New York clearing house safe, according to the builder. They are double, and it would take an expert safe breaker at least 12 hours to gain an entrance. On the door fronts are lions' heads and grille work. The name "Charles T. Yerkes" is carved above the portal.

William H. Webb has carefully planned his tomb. Mr. Webb made the greater part of his fortune in shipbuilding. Not long ago Mr. Webb erected on a beautiful spot on the banks of the Hudson an academy for the training of the youth of the country in the art of ship construction. This academy and its endowment cost him $3,000,000. There are a series of beautiful bronzes in Mr. Webb's tomb, showing the different stages of the shipbuilder's art and bronze models of some of the great warships launched at the famous Webb shipyards on the East river, near Sixth street.

The Webb mausoleum is 22 by 40 feet and has ten separate tombs. The entrance is through massive bronze doors, of which it is said there is none more beautiful in any mausoleum. The interior is artistically adorned with fine marbles, and stained glass windows of great beauty of color lend additional richness to one of the most refined and beautiful examples of mortuary architecture in the world.

What is perhaps the largest and most imposing mausoleum in this country was recently completed in Salem Fields cemetery, Greenwood, N. Y., for Banker Jacob Schiff. Mr. Schiff is known chiefly for his philanthropy. Mr. Schiff's mausoleum, in which will also rest the members of the Loeb family, to which Mr. Schiff is related by marriage, is in a purely classic design, executed in granite, and it cost very near $180,000. It is 52 by 44 feet and 32 feet high. In addition there is a grand colonnade on both sides leading to the massive bronze doors. The mausoleum walls are absolutely proof against body snatchers, for it would take them several days, it is claimed, to chisel through the granite blocks weighing 40,000 pounds on the average. The interior is decorated in a most artistic manner. This grand tomb is now empty.

When that great philosopher, Dr. Chauncey M. Depew, seeks his last resting place it will be in a handsome mausoleum erected at Peekskill. Over the entrance is Dr. Depew's name, and since its completion it has been visited by numerous tourists. Dr. Depew's wife now rests in this beautiful tomb. It is purely classical in design. The roof is formed of two mammoth pieces of granite, weighing together about 100,000 pounds. The interior is artistically finished in several varieties of marbles and contains 12 catacombs. The bronze double doors are exceedingly neat in design. Dr. Depew's mausoleum cost him about $25,000. The entrance faces the west, and it is in one of the most beautiful spots in Hillside cemetery, two miles from Peekskill.

The friends of Dr. Clark W. Dunlop claim that his tomb in Woodlawn is the handsomest one in the country. It is octagonal in shape and of Moorish design, costing about $100,000, including the lot. All the interior walls are of costly marbles in several varieties. There are three large stained glass windows and the floor is executed in mosaics. There are bronze portrait medallions of Dr. Dunlop and his wife. There are only two vaults in the tomb. The tomb is of granite and there is very elaborate carving about the entrance. There is 21 feet of granite approach, one large platform stone being 17 feet by 12 feet and weighing 50,000 pounds. The total height of the mausoleum is 40 feet. It is unoccupied.

There is one silent tenant now in the mausoleum planned by Banker Giovanni P. Morosini, the body of his wife. This superb temple of the dead is in the form of the Greek cross, and is of a modified type of the Byzantine school of architecture. The Morosini lot is 4,000 square feet, and this beautiful work of art occupies the central space. Mr. Morosini studied out every detail with the greatest care in company with a prominent firm of architects. Two lions couchant, resting on blocks of granite, from which they, too, are carved, flank the doorway to the right and left. The foundation for the structure is of solid rock. It would be an almost impossible task to tunnel through it. Every precaution is taken against body snatchers, and it is Mr. Morosini's intention to keep a constant guard in front of his tomb. Jay Gould's tomb in Woodlawn is now closely guarded by two former policemen night and day.—New York Herald.

Furniture Scratches.

When furniture gets very much scratched and the scratches are deep, they may be filled up as follows: Dissolve some yellow beeswax in sufficient turpentine to make it the consistency of thick treacle and apply it to the furniture with a woolen cloth. Polish briskly with a clean woolen cloth until dry, when the wood will be much improved in appearance.—Home News.

CHAPTER I.

Come Back.

There is not perhaps in the length and breadth of the country a prettier village than that of Little Drillingham, nor one where the boasted progress of the nineteenth century may more easily be forgotten. No railway comes within three miles of it. And although it lies on the high road between Canterbury and another market-town, communication between those two centres of sleepy life is sufficiently maintained by a small and intermittent omnibus.

When Ned Fothergill, on his summer holiday, chanced to bring himself and his bicycle into the wide, tree-bordered principal street of the place, he was struck with admiration, and getting off his "safety," lit his pipe and leaned against a tree to rest his eyes for a few minutes on the picture before him.

Glancing behind him along the road by which he had come, he saw a street ridiculously wide, with a great breadth of pebbly footpath on each side, and a greater breadth of road between.

On his right hand, on the opposite side of the road to the place where he stood, another road ran at right angles to the High street, down past the church, and the few more pretentious houses of the place, to the smooth water of the mill-pond. As far as that, however, Ned could not see. But what he could see was a row of irregular old cottages, with overhanging upper stories and with gable-windows in their red-tiled roofs, broken by two of the most fascinating old-world inns Ned had ever seen.

The one nearest to him stood at the corner of the street, well back from the road, and announced in every brick and in every window that it had sheltered travellers and refreshed wayfarers for three centuries and more.

As Ned, pipe in mouth, surveyed the old house appreciatively, he became aware that a handsome young soldier, with the sergeant's stripes on his arm, who was standing near him, knocking the new shoots off a tree with his little cane, was giving to the study of the place attention more earnest than his own.

He was such a fine young fellow, with a handsome, sunburnt face, and honest eyes, that Ned felt interested in him, and made a shrewd guess at the sentiment which inspired his interested gaze.

"HOME ON A FURLOUGH?" HAZARDED NED.

"Fine old house that!" said Ned.

"Aye, sir," said the sergeant. "I've been about the country a bit in the five years since I saw it last; but I haven't seen a prettier."

"Home on furlough?" hazarded Ned.

"Yes, sir."

Ned did not like to ask any more questions; but apparently the soldier liked his appearance as much as he liked the soldier's. At any rate, after a pause of a few moments, the latter added:

"It's kept by the husband of a woman I was sweet on, five years ago. And I'm blest if I don,t think, now I've a chance of seeing her again, that I'm sweet on her now."

"Ah, well!" said Ned cheerfully, "that's the sort of feeling that generally melts away fast enough when you come to see the slim, shy girl you remember transformed into a buxom lady, with a self-confident manner, who orders her husband and her servants about."

The sergeant shook his head.

"Harriet wasn't one of that sort,," said he with conviction. "And I could go in as bold as brass and wish her good-day if she was happy with a man good enough for her. But by what I hear the poor girl's not well mated."

"Well," said Ned, who thought the sergeant hardly likely to be impartial on the subject, and who was rather interested in seeing what sort of woman it was who had inspired the good-looking soldier with such a long-standing devotion, "I'm going in to sample their fine old ales. Will you join me?"

The sergeant appeared to hesitate for one moment only. Then he said, as he followd Ned:

"Thank you, sir. As I shall certainly end by going, I may as well go at once. But you'll have the laugh of me, sir, if I get snubbed, won't you?"

By this time Ned, of course, was almost as much interested in the meeting as Eben Miles, the soldier, himself.

As they went up the worn steps into the cool, wide, low-ceilinged passage, Ned caught sight of a young girl, with loose, light hair about her fair, but freckled little face, who was sitting on a three-legged stool in the yard at the end of the passage, shelling peas.

In her blue print frock, with her white apron, she made a charming picture in a frame of dark doorway, with a background of climbing nasturtiums.

"Is that the young lady?" asked Ned in a low voice.

The sergeant started.

"Why, no, but it's wonderful like what she used to be!" said he. "It must be Minnie, her little sister, who was in short frocks when I went away."

At that moment the girl looked up, peered through the doorway, and called:

"Harriet!"

But the next moment she had sprung up, letting most of her unshelled peas fall from her apron to the ground in the excitement which the sight of Eben evidently caused her. She ran through the passage like a whirlwind, and reached the two young men before they crossed the threshold.

"You, Eben Miles!" she exclaimed with surprise with which was mingled a little shy pleasure and some anxiety. She held out her hand. "I'm glad to see you, you know, and of course Harriet will be too, but—but I rather wish you hadn't come all the same."

"That's a nice welcome to an old friend!" said Eben, while Ned passed on into the deserted bar.

"Oh, you know it isn't that," said Minnie with a sigh. "Only there's been a row this morning. There are always rows. Bob's awfully bad tempered, and she won't knuckle under to him. So perhaps it isn't the best day in the world you could have come, you see!"

"Oh, well, I'm here now, and—"

Eben stopped short. Into the dark bar on the left had come a woman, a tall, well-grown, shapely matron, of no striking or special beauty of face, who looked across the bar rather disdainfully at Ned, and asked him, "What for you, sir?" as if it was too much trouble to serve him.

Ned turned towards the entrance, where the sergeant still stood talking to Minnie; and the glance of the disdainful matron passed in the same direction.

In an instant her tone and manner changed. Leaning across the bar, with an air of great excitement and interest, she stretched one buxom arm in the direction of the sergeant, crying in a voice of hearty welcome:

"What! Is that you, Eben? Eben Miles? Bless your heart, lad, I'm glad to see you!"

As Eben passed into the bar and shook her hand in response to this hearty invitation, Ned stepped out of his way, and in this manner came between the sergeant and the younger sister, who looked into his face and evidently concluded that he was a friend of Eben's. She shrugged her shoulders, therefore, and gave him a glance which was full of vexation.

"Look at that!" she said in a low voice; appealing as to one who knew all about it. "That's just like Harriet. She doesn't care how much she aggravates Bob. And such a humor as he's in this afternoon, too!"

"But," urged Ned, entering into the situation, "what could Bob object to in your sister's manner? I should think that frank welcome a much better sign, if I were a husband, than if she had started and blushed and been reticent and shy."

Minnie sighed, and glanced in from the passage, where she and Ned were standing, to the bar, where her sister and Eben were holding an earnest conversation.

"You might!" she said at last. "But I'm much mistaken if Bob will! And if he turns nasty, as he's pretty nearly sure to do, she will go on behaving just the same. You see, I know her spirit!"

As she finished speaking, Minnie turned her head towards the staircase, just as a heavy footstep made the old boards squeak.

A wide, old-fashioned staircase it was, with shallow steps, and an old tall clock standing at an angle. The light of the summer afternoon streamed warm and mellow through the little window, and showed Ned the host of the "Griffin" himself, as he lurched heavily down the stairs.

A young man of some two or three and thirty years of age, Bob France had a dark-complexioned, sullen face, a thick crop of black hair, and a muscular, sturdy figure.

"Who's that in the bar?" he asked shortly, as he aproached Minnie.

Then, without waiting for an answer, he pushed past her so roughly that he made her stagger, and dashed into the presence of his wife and her old sweetheart.

An exclamation escaped Minnie's lips; and it was so clear that she expected some violence on the part of her brother-in-law, that Ned instinctively made a step forward in order that he might interfere, if it should be necessary, between the two men. But Bob put strong constraint upon himself, and thrusting his hands into his pockets, cried out in a sort of jeering tone:

"Well, Miles, come back like a bad halfpenny, eh?"

"Yes, Bob, I'm back again," said the sergeant, stepping back without the least appearance of confusion or awkwardness to greet his old acquaintance.

Bob affected not to see the other man's outstretched hand.

"And you're talking over old times, I suppose, with Harriet?" went on Harriet's husband, in a snarling tone.

His tone was insulting, and it was not surprising that the high-spirited matron should feel annoyed by it.

"Yes, we were talking over old times," she said boldly and with an honest frankness which, in the face of her husband's mean suspicions, enlisted Ned's sympathies at once on her behalf. "And where's the harm? The old times are over and gone now, but there was nothing in them to be ashamed of, and nothing we can't have a laugh over now. And I should hope, Bob, if we have had a few words this morning you and I, which I won't deny," and she laughed a jolly laugh as she looked from the one to the other, "that you'll be ready to make it up now, on the strength of the home-coming of an old friend, and that you'll ask him in to have a cup of tea with us?"

Her tone was so pleasant, her manner so winning, that Ned would have thought it impossible for mortal man to refuse her.

"Oh, you've made up your mind to be amiable now, have you?" said the landlord. "I've to thank Miles for that, I suppose."

"Come now, Bob, am I not always the first to give in, tell me that?" said his wife, who was still leaning over the counter, showing her white even teeth in a smile which gave her face the beauty Ned had previously thought it lacked.

"So you ought to be," retorted her husband.

"Well, if I do what I ought, always, isn't it fair you should do what you ought too, and make it up?"

But Bob, hesitating still, caught sight of a look on the face of the young sergeant, a shy look of admiration, which inflamed his sombre jealousy afresh.

"Well, I suppose," said he, in a jeering tone, "that I must be one of those people who never do what they ought. For I never felt less like making it up in my life, and so I tell you. And you can go into the parlor there, and find out what those people want that have just come in. I'll serve the gentlemen here."

And he went through into the bar, and jerked his thumb in the direction of the little private room on the right at the end of the passage, towards which a party of travellers from a cab outside were making their way.

Harriet bit her lip, threw a demurely saucy glance at the sergeant without taking any pains that her husband should not see it, and walked down the passage.

Ned and the sergeant had their drink, and, not being encouraged to talk by their surly host, they then went out, Eben leading the way through the yard at the back, so that he might exchange a few words more with the younger sister, Minnie. She looked up from her pea-shelling with a demure smile, and a nod of great sagacity.

"I told you how it would be, you know, didn't I?" she whispered solemnly.

"Ah, you're a 'cute one," said Eben smiling.

Minnie blushed very prettily, but put on a little air of importance and wisdom.

"Ah, you may laugh, but I don't come up here nearly every day from the farm for nothing! I see all that goes on here, and I see how wild Harriet makes him time out of mind, just for want of a little care, you know, and not because she's doing any harm."

"But he's a fool to be jealous. I shouldn't have been with a girl with a heart as sound as hers."

"Well, but you've got to take a husband as you find him," said Minnie sagely.

When who should come out from the parlor, out by the other door, between flower-beds which were a tangle of Canterbury bells, white pinks, and London pride, but Harriet, fresh, smiling, jolly, with a twinkle of mischief in her brown eyes.

"AH, YOU'RE A CUTE ONE!" SAID EBEN.

"Well, I supose here we may get a few words in without having our noses snapped off our faces," she began with a merry laugh, planting herself with her right hand on her hip between her sister and Eben.

"Now, Harriet, do be good and don't let Bob hear you say anything like that," pleaded the little sister, looking up into her face with warning in her blue eyes.

Harriet tossed her head a little with a reckless and petulant air.

"Oh, I'm sick of it!" she cried impatiently. "If one had done anything to deserve it, it would be another thing. But to be chivid about and scowled at for nothing at all, why, it's enough to make one say one would give him something to be jealous for."

She had raised her voice, her deep-toned, full voice, ringing with health and vitality, high enough for her husband in the bar to hear her. The young men found themselves instinctively forming with their lips the word "Hush!" as they heard the heavy steps of Robert France in the passage behind them.

There was something in the contrast they made, as they exchanged looks, the one of anger, the other of defiance, that made all three by-standers breathe quickly. Without a word he directed her, by a gesture to go into the house. After a moment's hesitation, whether upon an impulse of real alarm, or in order to please Minnie, who was pulling at her sleeve, she went in.

Robert looked, scowling, from Ned to Eben.

"Any more orders for you, gentlemen?" he said shortly.

"No. We're going," said Eben in a tone as surly as his own.

And the sergeant shook hands with Minnie, and passed out through the yard into the street by the back way.

"That man's a brute. It's a dog's life he leads her!" he muttered as he and Ned went into the street together.

"I think I should keep out of the way, if I were you!" suggested Ned in a friendly manner. "You can't do any good, you see; and you might do harm. When a man and his wife are in for life together it's best that they should shake down together without interference from outside."

The advice was unpalatable, but wholesome.

With the exchange of a few more friendly words, the two men parted; the sergeant entering a saddler's shop, the cyclist continuing his route towards Canterbury, with his mind full of the bit of domestic history he had lighted upon so unexpectedly. It interested him so much, that when he presently met with a slight accident to his machine, which obliged him to walk with it to a blacksmith's for repairs, he did not go on in search of one, but went back to Little Drillingham, left the machine at the forge at the entrance to the village, and walked on to the "Griffin" with the intention of passing the night under its ancient roof.

The landlord was standing on the step outside his door. But Ned was glad to see that the tempest of the afternoon had passed away, and that he looked more cheerful, and that he was humming a tune.

"They've made it up!" thought Ned.

"What! you're back again, sir?" said France quite good-humoredly, as he stepped back into the doorway to welcome his visitor. "No accident, I hope?"

"Only a small one. I broke the screw of my brake," said Ned, as he entered the house, and saw that the bar was empty.

He had a drink; he had a smoke by the door; he ordered some supper and arranged for a bed. Then he was shown upstairs by his host himself, and led along a wide, low corridor, with primitive doors on either side, made of rough plank and opening with a latch.

Ned was delighted. It was old-fashioned, quaint, charming. His little bedroom, looking into the yard behind the inn, and furnished with absolute simplicity, was just what he would have chosen.

And there stole upon him very gradually a sense of the wonderful silence of the place, at the absolute rest which prevailed at the absence of a sound of voices or of footsteps in the whole house.

Where was the busy, bustling hostess, with her full voice and her merry laugh? Where was pretty Minnie, with her light fairy-like steps, and the soft singing voice which she accompanied her work? Where was the 'osfler?

He was getting quite puzzled by the silence, when a little flying figure dashed into the yard below from the street.

"Harriet! Harriet! Where are you? Why don't you call me?" cried a voice which Ned recognized as Minnie's.

Ned ran downstairs, quite glad to a little life about the place; for the deep silence was getting on his nerves. In the passage as he went, he saw the little sister meet Robert France.

He had come out from the bar to light the lamp in the entrance where the dusk had already cast deep shadows.

"Hallo, little one!" said Robert, quite genially. "Where are you running to in such a hurry?"

"Harriet! Where's Harriet?" panted the girl, whose voice was shaking as if with terror.

"She's gone to the farm," answered Robert in a tone of surprise.

The girl gasped.

"She hasn't!" she said wildly. "I've just come from there. And—and she hasn't been there. I should have passed her."

"Well, she said she was going there," repeated Robert.

Minnie stared at her brother-in-law in the yellow light of the lamp, which was not yet turned up.

"She never passed me!" gasped she. "But, as I came over the fields, she called to me! I heard her voice, quite plain, crying 'Minnie! Minnie!' And it—it frightened me! I must find her, find her at once!"

And she turned away, and ran up the stairs, calling, with a shrill, unearthly voice of terror and distress:

"Harriet! Harriet! Where are you? I've come, dear, I've come!"

BLUEBERRY PIE.

Of All New England's Fine Things There Is None Better.

These old New England pastures and hillsides, what amazing secrets are locked up in their rugged bosoms—more wonderful by far than all the dreams of alchemy! Who, to look at them, would ever predict the marvelous things they produce for us, season after season? And of all the fine things with which they annually present us none is better than the blueberry, a simple, unaffected fruit, both in growth and appearance, yet remarkably satisfying to the human taste. Gathered by a straggling but tireless army of sunbonneted and straw hatted pickers, this crystallized nectar of the hills is sent abroad through the land into homes of both rich and poor—a welcome guest everywhere.

And of all the fine things to which the blueberry contributes or into which it is made who that was unacquainted with such mysteries could ever have predicted such a delectable dish as blueberry pie? Not the pie of commerce of course, nor the restaurant pie, nor yet the hotel pie, but the pie your mother used to make or which your wife or your sister can make now if they have not been cheated of their New England heritage of knowing how to cook. A dainty, brown, flaky crust has the genuine blueberry pie. It is made up in a dish not too deep—"just deep enough"—which holds, under this hope quickening crust, a lake of purple, mouth watering, soul ensnaring fruit—a half liquid quagmire in which the plump blue spheres have drowned themselves in their own richness.

The blueberry has a delicate but distinct flavor of its own, which should never be smothered by mixing with any others in a pie. Uniting happily and naturally with the sugar, it forms a delicious sirup which no under crust ought to be allowed to absorb. For perfect success a subtle balance of parts is needed, not too much crust, not too little fruit and sirup, the exact adjustment of which is rarely compassed by any but a native New Englander—it is bred in the bone. There is, too, but one time to eat blueberry pie, and that is when it has been out of the oven just half an hour. At exactly this moment a whole one is just enough for a well man.—Boston Transcript.

THE CHINESE DOCTOR.

He Killed the Snake In the Patient's Body With a Pin.

"When I was acting American consul at Amoy, China," said Mr. W. E. Fales, "one of my employees fell sick with a severe attack of rheumatism. He stood the pain bravely for three days, refusing all 'foreign devil medicine,' and on the fourth sent for a native physician. The latter duly arrived and began preparations for treatment of the malady, which he announced to be due to the presence of a 'darting snake' in the sufferer's body. Incense sticks were lighted and placed just outside the door, and also in the room. A pack of firecrackers was set off and a talismanic paper pasted to the wall. This was done to drive away evil spirits and attract good ones.

"The doctor next wrote a lot of characters on a thick piece of paper with a vermilion pencil and set fire to it. It burned into a black ash, which was broken into a cup of water and drunk by the patient. A great bowl of herb tea was made, of which a cup an hour was the allotted dose. The son of Æsculapius next bared the body of my servant and drove deep down into it at nine points a long needle moistened with peppermint. He did it with such skill in avoiding large blood vessels that the hemorrhage was insiguificant. He then covered each acupuncture with a brownish paste, and this in turn with a piece of dark paper. He then collected his fee, 50 cents, and departed.

"The sufferer soon fell into a sleep and the next day announced that his pains had departed. He remained in his bunk two more days, laughing, chatting, smoking cigarettes and once or twice using the opium pipe, and then reported as being well. He left the paste and paper in place until they fell off. The skin was smooth and the scar hardly perceptible. He took his recovery as a matter of course, his only comment being that the darting snake was thoroughly dead."—New York Recorder.

Designer of Old Ironsides.

The designer of the frigate Constitution and of all the old frigates of the United States navy was Joshua Humphreys of Philadelphia, the designer and architect of the American navy. The molds and instructions for the building of the Constitution were sent by Mr. Humphreys to Mr. Henry Jackson, the navy agent at Boston, and she was there constructed. In a letter from Mrs. R. H. Humphreys, widow of Major General and Chief of Engineers A. A. Humphreys, recently addressed to The Star, she states that Joshua Humphreys was appointed chief naval constructor by General Washington, and copies of letters in reference to these frigates from General Knox, then secretary of war and acting as secretary of the navy, there being at that time no secretary of the navy, are in the possession of the late General A. A. Humphreys' family. A model of the frigate Constitution in wood, cut by Joshua Humphreys' own hands, was sent to Charles Humphreys of Philadelphia, a son of Joshua Humphreys, from the navy yard at Philadelphia, at the time of its dismantling, and is now at the old homestead of Joshua Humphreys in Haverford township, Delaware county, Pa.—Washington Star.

Glass Houses to Live In, Glass Clothing to Wear and a Glass Coffin to Rest In at Last—Strange and Uncommon Devices That Are Not Yet Publicly Known.

There is an inventor who is known at the patent office in Washington as the glass man. His name is C. W. McLean of New Bern, N. C., and during the last few years he has obtained patents for a surprising number of devices in glass. Among these is a glass coffin, which is guaranteed proof against decay and rats. So long as no deliberate attempt is made to smash it it ought to last forever. Another contrivance is a staircase made wholly of glass, steps, landings and newel post being all of that material. Yet another is a glass barrel. But perhaps the most remarkable invention of the glass man is a billiard table of glass.

The day may yet arrive when people will live in glass houses. A patent has been secured by another inventor for glass bricks of a peculiar pattern. The material of which they are composed being a first rate nonconductor, these bricks will keep the cold out of a dwelling built of them, while admitting the light. It is claimed they will exclude noise, being hollow. Furthermore, the inmates of a glass house need not be afraid of being under too close observation by neighbors, inasmuch as it is not requisite that the bricks shall be transparent. They may be of opaque ground glass or of any color that may be suitable for decorative effect.

Thus before many years have passed it may be considered the height of luxury to occupy a dwelling of glass. Glass bricks, of course, are expensive. People who live in glass houses will be able to afford to wear clothes of glass. That sounds like nonsense, but the fact is that beautiful and most delicate fabrics are made out of spun glass. Nearly 20 years ago there was shown at the Centennial exposition in Philadelphia a bonnet composed entirely of glass. It was a love of a bonnet. The flowers on it were glass, and so were the ribbons, which looked like the finest satin. The patentee of this process describes it as suitable for the manufacture of neckties, shawls, table covers, etc.

In fabrics of this kind a very fine quality of glass is used. It is spun in threads of exceeding delicacy, and of these several colors may be produced at the same time. They are woven in a loom of ordinary pattern. Anybody may observe that a thin sheet of glass is somewhat elastic. The threads employed in weaving are of such fineness as to be perfectly pliable and not at all brittle. With a gown of glass would naturally go a pair of glass slippers.

A Pittsburg man named Smith has invented a process for making glass slippers in molds. They would not do very well for dancing. There is no reason why a glass gown should not be woven of iridescent glass, so that the wearer would look like an animated rainbow on a ballroom floor—one dazzling shimmer of ever changing hues. Until recently the manufacture of iridescent glass was set down in the list of the lost arts. But in 1878 it was rediscovered, and now it is a common commercial article. It is made by exposing the melted glass to the vapors of salts of sodium. At the Metropolitan Museum of Art, in New York city, are exhibited great numbers of bottles, plates and other articles of glass which were made and used long before Christ was born. They were dug up in Cyprus and elsewhere. Many of them have a beautiful iridescence, but it is the result of decay. Glass will rot like anything else, and decay has split the structure of this ancient glass into laminæ, or flakes, which interrupt the light so as to produce brilliant red, green, purple and other rainbow colors.

The window blinds of the glass house of the future will be of glass, of course. That is another patent, and the inventor suggests that such blinds may be made of whatever colors are desired. Baby in the nursery perhaps will play with glass building blocks and at a suitable age he will receive a Christmas gift of a pair of roller skates with glass rollers. Both of these ideas have been patented. When he is old enough to go fishing, he will not dig worms in the garden, but will be provided with artificial bait in the shape of a hollow minnow of glass, coated on the inside partly with a solution of gold or silver and partly with a luminous paint.

Glass bedsteads may be proof against lightning and bugs, but it is hardly to be expected that glass houses should be free from mice. The inmates could hardly do better than to employ glass traps for the capture of such vermin. The great advantage of the glass mousetrap, according to the statement of the inventor, is that "if one mouse enter the trap he may be seen by others who chance to go that way, and they will be inclined to join the one inside, especially when they observe that he is nibbling a choice morsel." Up to date the glass mousetrap has not made itself popular, notwithstanding the important arguments in its favor, and of most of the other devices described it is unfortunately true that they have not proved profitable to the persons who contrived them. This remark, however, by no means applies to the glass lemon squeezer, which is already a familiar household utensil. The inventor of it is said to have sold his rights for $50,000. One of the most remarkable inventions in glass, by the way, was that of a Venetian named Joquin, in 1656. He noticed that the scales of a fish called the bleak gave a milky hue to the water, and that glass beads dipped into such water looked like pearls when dried. Subsequently the idea was conceived of making hollow beads of glass and lining them with the peculiar substance from the scales of the fish, and it is in this way that the so called Roman pearls are now manufactured. It is to this substance that the iridescence of the scales of many species of fishes is due.—Washington Cor. Philadelphia Times.

To Increase Rex Begonias.

If you wish to raise a number of new plants of Rex or other large leafed begonias, take a sharp knife and make a cut at the intersection of the veins. Then lay the leaf, veined side down, on a saucer of wet sand, place in a sunny window and keep damp. Tiny plants will form at the cuts. When an inch high, they may be lifted into thumb pots. This is a very fascinating way to grow begonias.—Womankind.

Pio Nino's Fad.

Pope Pius IX was a collector of slippers. He always had 24 pairs in his wardrobe, made of red cloth, embroidered with gold and ornamented with a solid gold cross, his chamberlain being strictly enjoined not to part with a single pair, however well worn they might be, to any of the many devout applicants for them.

are doing all the business. Our stock is the largest, prices are the lowest and terms the easiest in the city. Just give it a passing thought that you can get an antique oak bedroom suit, 8 pieces, for $15, $20, $25 and $30, including a woven wire bed spring and a mixed mattress. No house in the city offers such inducements.

And then to think again that you can get tapestry Brussels carpet for 50, 60, and 70 cents a yard, made and laid with paper, which is a saving of 15c per yard. Where is there a house in the city that will offer such bargains?

And then imagine and wonder how we can afford to give away a moquette rug or parlor table with a parlor suit for $20, $30, $40 or $50.

Some of our competitors say that our ads are too much sameness, and that this ad. is old. Well, we will admit it, but as long as it does the business and saves the people money we will continue to run it.

QUARTET AT HYMEN'S ALTAR

TWO MARRIAGES IN MT. OLIVE CHURCH LAST EVENING.

An Immense Crowd Attend the Event—Both Ceremonies Performed by Rev. P. J. Gibson—The Wedding Party.

There was hardly standing room in the Mt. Olive Baptist church last evening when two marriages were performed by the pastor, Rev. P. S. Gibson. The first wedding was that of Charles Barber and Miss Mattie Kinney, which took place at 8:30. While Horatio Randolph was playing "Nellie Grant's" wedding march the bridal party entered. The ushers, groom and best man came first, then the maid of honor, Miss Paulina Cole, gowned in blue henrietta, trimmed in lavender ribbon and jets. She carried pink roses. Following came the bridemaids, Miss Minnie Carey and Miss Harris, wearing gowns of white crepon trimmed with lace and satin ribbons. They also wore white satin bows in the coiffure. Then came the bride leaning on the arm of William Douglass who gave her away. She gowned in white satin trimmed with lace and ribbons. She wore a tulle veil with a wreath of wax flowers and carried white roses.

The best man was William Burden, assisted by Joseph Bolden and J. Walker. The bridal party formed gracefully about the altar when the ceremony was performed, after which they were taken to the home furnished by the groom, 320 Arlington avenue, where a reception was held and supper served. Mr. and Mrs. Barber left during the evening on their wedding trip which they will spend in Philadelphia.

On their return they will live on Arlington avenue. They were the recipients of a large number of handsome presents, one of which was $50 from the groom's employer.

The second wedding was performed at 8:45, when Miss Mary Morris and Charles Shelton were united in marriage. Horatio Randolph also presided at the organ at the wedding and rendered the same selection. The bride wore a gown of white satin, trimmed with lace and ribbon. She also wore a tulle veil with a wreath of wax flowers.

The bridemaids were Miss Marguerite Stewart and her sister, Miss Louise Stewart, of Germantown, Pa. They were gowned in dark silk. The best man was Benjamin Perkins. The bridal party retired to the home of Rev. P. S. Gibson after the ceremony, where they held a reception and a supper was served. Many costly and useful presents were received by Mr. and Mrs. Shelton.

The ushers at the first wedding were Wm. Jones, A. W. Brown, Arthur Venable and Burrill Gibson. At the second ceremony they were N. J. Pollard, S. Venable, and James Saunders.

SCOLD'S VICTIMS GLAD.

The Ducking Stool Was the Former Penalty in New Jersey.

For the rest of her natural life Mrs. Esther F. Jacques, of Westfield, will be known wherever she goes as a common scold. She has been so branded by the blue laws of New Jersey, and on Saturday will be arraigned before Judge McCormick, of the Union County Court, to receive her sentence.

In the days of old, women who could not control their tongues were subjected to the ignominies of the ducking stool. It is hardly probable that such punishment will be meted out to Mrs. Jacques, and there is much speculation among her neighbors as to what penalty she will be forced to undergo. They would no doubt be pleased to see her suffer as did the scolds in Colonial times, as all of them, at one time or another, have felt the sharp lashings of her unruly tongue.

It is safe to say that the court house in Elizabeth will be crowded to overflowing with women when Mrs. Jacques is brought to the bar on Saturday morning.

SCHEPFLIN, SCHULTZ & CO., WIN.

The Middlesex Court Decide in Their Favor.

Schepflin, Schultz & Co., have won their law suit against James J. Boyd, and The Press extends its congratulations to them and their counsel, Craig A. Marsh, over the result. The amount in dispute was not much over a thousand dollars, but besides that, the firm felt that their honor was attacked, and they are now naturally gratified over their vindication. Mr. Boyd made out a bill against the firm's assignee for about $750, claiming that amount as the balance due him for salary at $2,500 a year in addition to his traveling expenses as a salesman for the firm.

Schepflin, Schultz & Co., repudiated the claim as illegal and unjust to their creditors. They also declared that Boyd was not under salary, but on commission, and was required to pay his own traveling expenses, and had, in fact, overdrawn his account hundreds of dollars. The Orphans Court of Middlesex county gave a whole day to the trial of the cause, and yesterday the decision was announced as stated above.

BILL LANE KICKED IN THE DOOR.

A Hilarious Trio of Colored Men in the City Court Last Night.

Three colored men were arrigned before Judge Coddington in the city court last evening on the charge of being drunk and disorderly and using improper language. Last Saturday evening Albert Shipley, George Gillette and Edgar Kline went out to enjoy themselves. They visited one of the saloons in the city and then wandered up to Sycamore street. Shipley came to the house of Bill Lane, broke in the front door and wanted to go up stairs. His friends tried to persuade him to go home and there was a general good time for everybody.

Yesterday the three men were arrested. Gillette and Kline explained their share in the racket and were allowed to depart, sentence being suspended on them. Lane looked upon Shipley's gayety as a joke, but that did not help Shipley's chance at court and he was given his choice between a fine of $5 or twenty days in the county jail.

NOT A CANDIDATE.

Judge Coddington Will Not Serve on the City Bench Again.

City Judge William A. Coddington was asked by a Daily Press reporter yesterday in regard to his again accepting the Democratic nomination for the city judgeship. The Judge said: 'I have been asked by many people whether I will take the nomination and run for office this fall. I desire to state that I am not a candidate for re-election for city judge, nor will I accept renomination."

During the three years that Mr. Coddington has held the office of city judge, he has served faithfully and discharged his duties creditably.

A Handsome Present.

General Eli Long, of Grove street, has sent a handsome basket of grapes from his vineyard at Bluff Point, N. Y., to each of his fellow members of the Chestnut Club, formerly known as the Asbestos Club.

"Many of the citizens of Rainsville, Indiana, are never without a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house," says Jacob Brown, the leading merchant of the place. This Remedy has proven of so much value for colds and croup in children that few mothers who know its worth are willing to be without it. For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, corner of Park and North avenues.

WHO IS THIS MAN ALLISON?

REPRESENTED HIMSELF TO BE AN AGENT OF A WILMINGTON FIRM.

Came Ostensibly to Negotiate a Contract for Extending the Street Railway, but Told Lies and Left a Hotel Bill.

Last Friday a rather stout individual, with a stubby moustache, registered at the Hotel Grenada as G. A. Allison, of Jersey City. He was accompanied by another man who did not register, but who claimed to be a detective in Jersey City. Allison said that he was a representative of Jackson & Sharp, of Wilmington, Del., railroad contractors, and had come to this city to negotiate with the street railway officials with a view of making the prospective extensions of the trolley line. The first thing he did was to apparently accumalate a jag of a quantity and quality that made him teeter about as though in a ballet of a comique opera. But later developments gave evidence that his inebrity was assumed.

He called on Dr. Fritts, the president of the street railway, and stated that he was here to represent the Wilmington firm, but his manner and conversation aroused suspicions in Dr. Fritts' mind that he was not what he seemed to be. Mr. Fritts made an engagement with him for Monday, intending in the mean time to learn from Jackson & Sharp if he was their agent. Monday came but Allison failed to put in appearance. Yesterday morning Dr. Fritts received a letter from Jackson & Sharp stating that they had no such man in their employ and knew of no one in the business by that name.

Saturday night Allison tried his persuasive tongue on Proprietor Miller, of the Hotel Grenada, in the endeavor to get him to cash a $10 draft on the contractors, but his efforts were fruitless. During the evening he made his disappearance without paying his hotel bill.

The men are evidently sharpers, but they found a rather barren field in this city.

Good Plainfield People.

The census proves the oft-asserted fact that this city has a class of citizens somewhat above the average of New Jersey towns. The bars and barber shops are closed, and anyone who secures a sup of soda-water or a cigar does so because of personal favoritism, as none are regularly on sale at the drug stores.—Plainfield Correspondent New York Tribune.

Where Are the Overcoats?

The new winter overcoats for the borough marshals seem a great way off, and these frosty nights are gentle reminders that they are very much needed. Chief VanHorn says he understands that a local undertaker has the contract to make them.

Large Enrollment.

The following is the enrollment in the classes at the Y. M. C. A: Short hand, 20; German, 9; bookkeeping, 11; mechanical, 27. There is an unusual amount of interest this year in all the classes and they promise to be very successful.

Stepped on a Nail.

A colored man named Cawley, in the employ of the Plainfield Gas & Electric Light Co., stepped on a nail a few days ago, which penetrated his shoe and entered his left foot. He has great difficulty in walking as it causes him considerable pain.

Mayor Hegeman's Good Plan.

Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., spent this morning in looking around the borough to see if everything was in first-class condition.

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chambertain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family has need of it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once and you will never regret it. For sale by Reynold's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

REWARDS OF UPRIGHTNESS.

JUDGE CODDINGTON TO LOOK AFTER C. E. CATLIN'S AFFAIRS.

The Deceased Made it as His Last Request to His Wife—As There is No Will Considerable Legal Work Will be Necessary.

Charles E. Catlin came to Plainfield five years ago and made this city his home up to the time of his death, two weeks ago. In 1893 he purchased an elegant home on Webster place and he and his wife have lived there ever since. When he first came to Plainfield, he met Judge W. A. Coddington in a business way and he attended to what legal business Mr. Catlin had to do.

This summer Mr. Catlin was taken sick and was almost helpless for over two months, and on October 17th died at his home, leaving a wife.

His last request was that the management of his legal affairs be left entirely with his friend, Judge Coddington. After his death, his widow sent for Mr. Coddington and told him of the request of her husband and handed over all the legal documents and papers that had belonged to the deceased.

When the Judge looked over the papers he found that aside from the individual estate, which amounted to considerable, that Mr. Catlin had been one of the principal legatees under the will of his mother, who died last January in Brooklyn and left an estate amounting to upwards of $200,000.

As Mr. Catlin left no will, there will be considerable legal work necessary.

Yesterday Judge Coddington made application to the Orphan's Court of this State asking that Mrs. Catlin be appointed administratrix of the estate. On consulting with the authorities in New York, the Judge ascertained that a final settlement would be made in the will of Mr. Catlin's mother about the first of next year.

Close attention to business has its rewards and this is an example of what uprightness and honesty in dealings will do for a business man.

QUIET HOME WEDDING.

Miss Amelia M. Lindsay Becomes Mrs. Robert G. Slorah.

A quiet but very pretty wedding took place at the home of John Lindsay, of 424 West Front street, last evening at eight o'clock, when the marriage of Mr. Lindsay's niece, Miss Amelia M. Lindsay, and Robert G. Slorah, of this city, was solemnized. Rev. J. O. McKelvey performed the ceremony. The bride was given away by her uncle, John Lindsay. Her gown was a handsome one of metropolitan blue figured Henrietta, trimmed with blue velvet and white lace. She carried a bouquet of white roses. Miss Lizzie Parker, the bridemaid, was charmingly gowned in dark grey broadcloth with silk and white lace trimmings.

The wedding was a private one and about fifty relatives and near friends were present. After the ceremony a reception was held and the evening passed very pleasantly with music and dancing. An elaborate collation added to the pleasure of the occasion. The house was very prettily decorated throughout.

The newly-wedded couple will remain at the home of John Lindsay for a short time, after which they will go housekeeping in the west end. Mr. Slorah is a trusted employee at the Pond Company Tool Works.

For Funeral Benefits.

At the annual meeting of the Great Council of the Improved Order of Red Men, held in Providence, R. I., in September, permission was granted the New Jersey Council to organize a funeral benefit association. The report of the Great Council shows the total membership of the order to be 133,485, and the total wealth $1,512,559.16. During the past year $1,087,787.50 has been received and $319,252.71 expended for relief. $8,892 was expended for widows and orphans and $80,613.18 for the burial of the dead.

Winter Sociability.

The Social Committee of the Y. M. C. A., have formed plans for holding receptions this winter. They also arranged to have more members at the building to act as a reception committee.

Every mother should know that croup can be prevented. The first symptom of true croup is hoarseness. This is followed by a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given freely as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the cough has developed it will prevent the attack. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues.

A BARN FESTIVAL.

Novel Affair to Be Held This Evening for St. Stephen's Church.

The vestry and congregation of St. Stephen's church in Netherwood are justly proud of the earnest and successful church work that has been carried on in their parish this fall by their rector, the Rev. S. P. Simpson. Although the parish of St. Stephen's is a new one, great progress has been made in interesting its members in the church, and the success that has been achieved is indicated by the unusual number of baptisms in the past month. During this period there have been 28 baptisms, the largest class being of 15, which is the greatest number that has ever been baptized at one time in the Episcopal church in Plainfield. The total number that desired baptism in the last three weeks was 31, but owing to illness the number was reduced to 28.

The ladies of the church have planned a Hallowe'en Barn Festival to be given at Constantine P. Ralli's, Belvidere avenue, Netherwood, this evening. There will be many unusual attractions besides the customary ones of cakes, candies and fancy goods. A short play has been provided for the amusement of the guests in which six well known young ladies will take part. It is called "Six Cups of Chocolate," and will include the following ladies in the cast: Miss Anthony, Miss Sprage, Miss Lord, Miss Simpson, Miss Beale and Miss Madeline Ostermore. In addition to this there will be a mystery table under the management of Miss Georgiana Hoadley Smith, of Netherwood, and the best fortune teller in Plainfield will be there. Twenty-five cents will be received at the door.

Talking to the Boys.

Prof. John Gifford, State Forester of New Jersey, addressed the lads in the room of the Boys' Club last evening. He spoke of forest fires, their cause and the means of preventing them. Among the causes are locomotives, lightning, careless small boys and vicious men, some of whom will cause disastrous fires to spite a neighbor; one such fire which the professor witnessed was twenty miles wide and traveled as fast as a horse could gallop, burning over 197,000 acres, worth 50 cents an acre at a low computation, besides burning dwellings and destroying the birds throughout the region. The boys and their friends showed great interest in the address.

Fears Tramps Kidnapped Her Child.

Mrs. F. Josephs, a colored woman, of Cranford, has asked the aid of the police to find her ten-year-old daughter, Mary, who strangely disappeared Monday afternoon last. The child was sent to school at 3 o'clock to get her weekly report. The child never reached the schoolhouse, nor has any trace of her been found since. She was bright and quite good looking. Her mother fears she has been kidnapped by tramps.

Terrorized By Tramps.

A gang of about twenty tramps assembled at El Mora, near Elizabeth, Tuesday night, and marched, yelling and hooting, along the country road to the tramps' headquarters in the woods between Westfield and Garwood. Couples in carriages and wheelmen were insulted and stoned, and the crowd chased one wheelman nearly half a mile, threatening to kill him because he answered back to them.

Two Things About Plainfield.

Captain Voight, of Truck 1, Newark, was the guest of Abner Bartlett, of Alert Hose Company, yesterday. He had a royal good time while in Plainfield, and went home with the idea that not only did Plainfield have a first-class fire department, but that the boys know how to entertain visitors.

Stricken Down in the Cellar.

There was excitment in the household of Alonzo Weseman, of East Sixth street, yesterday morning at about eleven o'clock, when it was discovered that the maid was attacked with a fit while down celler. Dr. Endicott was called and after being insensible for about an hour, was brought to, but was still very weak.

Shriners to Meet.

The Mecca Temple of the Mystic Shrine will meet this evening at Scottish Rite Hall, at the corner of Twenty-eighth street and Madison avenue. About twenty-five members are from this city. All the members received four tickets last week for the food exhibit at New York last Monday evening.

"I would rather trust that medicine than any doctor I know of," says Mrs. Hattie Mason, of Chilton, Carter Co., Mo., in speaking of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

A POOR WOMAN BUNCOED.

ACCEPTED A $50 CONFEDERATE BILL FOR GOOD CURRENCY.

The Woman Keeps a Polish Boarding House on Cottage Place, But Her Ignorance Made Her the Dupe of Another.

A Polish woman came into the Postal Telegraph Company's office this afternoon at about 1:30, weeping and wringing her hands. After considerable trouble Manager W. E. Martin heard her story and telephoned to Sergeant Kiely who took the matter in charge.

Her name is Mrs. Henzell, and she keeps a boarding house at 401 Cottage place. About two weeks ago, a tall Polishman, spare in build and rather old in appearance called there. He took board and worked on the sewers. He gave up his job a day or two ago and said that he did not like the work and was going back to his home in Pennsylvania.

This noon he brought a $50 bill to Mrs. Henzell and asked her to change it. She had $55 in gold and bills, the hard earned savings of her husband who works on the farm of a Mr. Jones. She gave him all but a $5 bill.

Joe Denman, another of the boarders, accompanied him to the corner of Front and Somerset streets, where he left him. The stranger, for no one seems to know his name, said that he was going to buy a box of beer and a pair of overhauls. In the meantime Mrs. Henzell wanted to change the $50 bill.

"I went to the Italian store on Cottage place," she said to a Daily Press reporter in her incoherent combination of Polish and English, "but he say no good! Then I go to the depot but he say 'no good,' too, and my money is all gone, all gone!" and she burst into tears.

She was accompanied by Joe Denman and the Pole named Al VanDyke. The three came to the Postal Telegraph office to tell their tale of woe. The bill was a $50 Confederate one and Mrs. Henzell, not knowing the currency of this country well enough, had exchanged $50 of her good money for it.

Sergeant Kiely accompanied by Denman and VanDyke, went up and down Front and to the North Avenue station in their endeavor to find the man, but he was not to be seen, so Kiely took a carriage and with one of the Poles, started to scour the surrounding country for him.

CONSOLIDATION OF PRESS WORKS.

Potter's and Campbell's Make Combine and Make This City Headquarters.

It is understood that several conferences have recently been held between the proprietors of the Potter Press Works, of this city, and the Campbell Press Works, of New York, with the idea of consolidating the firms and making this city the manufacuring headquarters for the printing presses which they would turn out.

Those most directly interested believe that such a move would result beneficially to the two firms who already have national reputations among the printers of the country, and their interests combined would make one of the strongest business alliances in the trade.

The consummation of such a deal would mean a good deal to Plainfield in the way of making increased business for the merchants, as the force of men would necessarily have to be greatly increased, and their shops also enlarged to greater capacity than at present.

All on Account of Coming Elections.

The cold weather has driven Tom Martin's Fourth Ward Club from Vail's grove into winter quarters. A basement under Lister's on North avenue will be opened tonight by an anvil chorus by Martin Brothers' Quartette, assisted by "Gamey" Nelson's son Oscar, who is the Fourth Ward Josseffy piano player. 'Zander Brown will recite. A collection is being taken for a stove this afternoon, and if the coal trains pass through the city anyway slow there will be plenty of fuel to burn. A collection will be taken at tonight's meeting to assist the different candidates of both parties. Tom, why he'll pass the hat. Next Monday night a big dinner will be served to club members only.

Big Money Made.

The amount realized by the cake and candy sale in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church last Saturday afternoon under the auspices of the Opportunity Circle of King's Daughters, was not $31, as was stated in the Daily Press of last Monday, but was more than double that amount. The correct amount realized was $65.

AS TO GUNS AND POWDER

Annual Report of the Ordnance Bureau's Work.

No Other Rifle Should Be Substituted for the One Now in Use—Difficult To Get Satisfactory Explosives—The Armor Question—Explanation of Delays.

Washington, Oct. 31.—In his annual report on the work of the ordnance bureau, Captain Sampson starts off with the statement concerning breech-loading rifles and an expression of opinion that the advantages claimed for them are not sufficient to warrant the substitution of the wire-wound or any other system of gun construction at present known for that now in use. Captain Sampson points out that "The wisdom of the department's decision in favor of 13-inch calibre for the new battleships has been conclusively demonstrated by recent armor tests." He refers at length to the test of the 8-inch Hurst gun for high explosives, under authority of congress, and states his reasons for believing that it was a failure, concluding with the remark that the bureau is satisfied that it can obtain higher velocities with equal projectile weights in a single charge gun of one-half the weight of the Hurst gun.

The Question of Powders.

Attempts to secure a satisfactory powder for the 13-inch guns have met with failure. A California powder company has succeeded in manufacturing excellent powder for the 8-inch as well as for the 5-inch guns, and is now in a position to make prismatic powder for all calibres. Lack of means of testing powder in the larger guns on the Pacific coast, with the consequent necessity of shipping samples to the naval proving grounds here for test, prevents the bureau from ordering powder for the 10-inch, 12-inch and 13-inch guns from this company at present. The difficulty of obtaining a satisfactory brown powder for the larger calibres, as well as the many inconveniences attendant upon the use of brown powder, emphasize the importance of developing a smokeless powder for all calibres.

Proposition Not Favored.

The experimental manufacture of a gun cotton powder at the naval torpedo station has reached a point justifying its issue to service, and accordingly as a first step the bureau has put 500 rounds of six-pounder ammunition loaded with smokeless powder on board the ships of the North Atlantic squadron for use in target practice. The proposition to contract with the shipbuilder for the armor as well as for the hull and machinery of ships does not meet with the bureau's approval. While not intending to advocate anything that savors of paternalism, Captain Sampson says the bureau feels that the government has an interest in the two armor plants.

Explanation of Delays.

The explanation of delays in manufacturing and delivering armor is made by Capt. Sampson, who states that when it is understood that the effort has been made to satisfy the almost simultaneous demands for the armor of fifteen ships whose authorization by congress covered a period of ten years, and that this has been practically accomplished in a little over four years, even while the plants were being erected and labor trained, the enterprise and vigor of the manufacturers is worthy of praise rather than censure.

An Interesting Feature.

One of the most interesting features of the report is that relating to the adoption of the Lee rifle as the naval small arm. Capt. Sampson states that the change in the navy calibre from 0.45 to 0.236 will result in a lighter gun, less shock of recoil, almost double velocity and danger space, more than double penetration, and more than a double quantity of ammunition carried on the person, and adds that these are enormous advantages, and, moreover, they are not theoretical only, but are actual results.

Appropriation Recommended.

Capt. Sampson earnestly renews his recommendation of last year, that a yearly appropriation be made for the manufacture of guns and mounts for merchant steamers capable of efficient work as transports and cruisers, and submits an estimate of $500,000 for commencing the work.

Galveston, Tex., Oct. 31.—It has been learned by a representative of the United Press that Sells Brothers, the showmen, have consummated the purchase of the interest of the heirs of P. T. Barnum in the Barnum-Bailey shows. Nothing further than the fact that the purchase had been made could be learned.

THE DURRANT TRIAL.

Closing Address of the Attorney for the Prosecution.

San Francisco, Oct. 31.—The closing address in the Durrant trial was delivered yesterday by District Attorney Barnes for the prosecution. After reviewing the known details of the murder of Blanche Lamont, which he said was without parallel, he said that the circumstances which had been brought to light showed that Miss Lamont was murdered by some member of the church who had keys to the building and in whom she had confidence. The murderer must also have been a man whose cunning was sufficient to enable him to stifle the natural feeling of timidity which always accompanies innocence, and induce the girl to go along with him to church. "Such a man," said the district attorney, "is Theodore Durrant. Only a monster capable of taking the life of an innocent girl could remain cool, impassive, and almost defiant when accused of such a crime. Durrant's testimony is a mass of contradictions from beginning to end. Not only has he contradicted the testimony of the prosecution's witnesses, but he has contradicted the testimony of his own. I submit to to you, gentlemen, that there is nothing in the testimony of the defendant or any witnesses presented by the defense to establish the alibi that the defense has tried to build up in this case." A dispatch from Rockford, Ill., says that the police assisted by Hon. James Lamont, uncle of Blanche Lamont, are searching for the sister-in-law of Richard Smythe, one of Durrant's witnesses, who tried to fasten the crime on Pastor Gibson. Smythe claims that his sister-in-law met Blanche Lamont in Rockford and is an important witness. She has not been found there yet.

THE ELECTION IN VIENNA.

Rejoicing of the Anti-Semites—Possibility of an Imperial Veto.

London, Oct. 31.—A Vienna dispatch to the Daily News says: "When Dr. Lueger's election as burgomaster became known, the streets of the city were quickly filled with a dense and enthusiastic crowd of persons shouting, 'Long live Lueger,' throwing their hats in the air and greeting the various well known leaders of the anti-Semitic party with renewed outbursts of cheering. In a speech following his election, Dr. Lueger harped incessantly upon Vienna's being freed from its enemies and all foreign enterprise being excluded. The election still requiries the emperor's sanction, but this will undoubtedly be given." The Times and the Chronicle have dispatches from Vienna which express doubts whether the emperor will sanction the election, and which say that the decision is awaited with great anxiety. The Chronicle's dispatch says: "The fact that the Jews form so large a section of the Vienna community may be regarded as sufficient to justify a veto of the election. Premier Badeni opposes the anti-Semites, and his influence may count for something."

NEWFOUNDLAND SMUGGLERS.

Customs Officials Suspected of Complicity in the Frauds.

St. Johns, N. F., Oct. 31.—The smuggling prosecutions are proceeding. Another arrest was made yesterday. Several cases were docketed. The government has ordered an investigation into the whole customs department, suspecting connivance on the part of many officials in the operations of the smugglers. Little doubt is entertained that many officials at the outports are implicated and several in this city, also, it is thought, were accomplices. Many seizures miscarried owing to the premature disclosures of plans arranged by the board of revenue.

HOLMES STILL UNMOVED

He Listens Calmly to Mrs. Pietzel's Testimony.

The Bereaved Woman's Story Causes Tears Among the Audience—The Prisoner Twice Interrupts the Proceedings To Coach His Counsel—Defense's Objection Sustained.

Philadelphia, Oct. 31.—The story of Mrs. Pietzel, wife of the man for whose death Holmes is being tried, who occupied over four hours in its recital, furnished the first really sensational feature that has yet been brought out. The whole scene was intensely dramatic. Mrs. Pietzel and Holmes have never been brought face to face before since the dreadful revelations of her children's murders have come out. When a woman, bent and feeble, was assisted into the witness box there was a craning of necks in the courtroom, for it was at once surmised that this was Mrs. Pietzel. Whether Holmes had schooled himself to face her, or whether the man really lacked sensibility, it was impossible to say, but as the woman stood erect before him he exhibited no emotion of any kind, but, on the contrary, gazed fixedly at her for fully a minute.

Mrs. Pietzel's Story.

She was so weak that throughout the giving of her testimony the court officers stood by her side and repeated aloud her whispered replies to questions asked her. Only once throughout the day and evening did she look in Holmes' direction. At the beginning of her testimony she was asked if she knew the prisoner. She cast one hurried glance in his direction and then quickly averting her eyes replied that she did. She was led somewhat hurriedly over the events prior to Pietzel's death. Then she told of Holmes coming to her and telling her that her husband still lived, but was in hiding for his connection with the swindle of the insurance company, of the loss of her children, and of her journeys with Holmes in the search for them.

Spectators Affected.

There was more than one moistened eye in the court while the sobbing woman was speaking, and the defense, realizing the probable effect the sight a bereaved and suffering mother would have upon the sensiblities of the jury, interposed an objection. Mr. Graham was so vehement in his indignant reply to the defense's objection that he was rebuked by the court who, however, sustained his line of questioning.

Object of the Defense.

The first object of the defense was to show that Mrs. Pietzel paid out but $8,000 of the $9,700 insurance, and that she got $1,700 instead of only $500, as she stated. It was directly shown by the testimony of the witness that Holmes had several times paid the rent for the Pietzel family, and grocery and provision bills. The witness further said that her husband had told her that Holmes owed him this money, and if he did not provide for his (Pietzel's) family while he was in prison, he would make it hot for Holmes. By indirect admissions Mrs. Pietzel showed that Pietzel was practically dependent upon Holmes for support.

Holmes Coaches His Counsel.

At this point Holmes called Mr. Rotan to him and coached him again about the line of examination. Mrs. Pietzel was shown a note for $16,000, signed with the name of "Benton F. Lyman" (an alias of Pietzel's), and she identified the signature as that of her husband's. It was to pay this note that she gave Holmes the $5,000, and in return she was to have full possession of the Fort Worth property. Holmes supplied the money for Pietzel to set up in business. Here Holmes interrupted the proceedings by advising with Rotan again. Mrs. Pietzel's overwrought nerves again gave way and she sobbed bitterly, but quietly. Her examination ended and she feebly staggered to her seat with the assistance of two court officers, and in a few minutes left the court room. Jeannette Pietzel was called to the stand. She corroborated her mother's testimony.

The Daughter's Evidence.

Under cross-examination Dessie admitted that her father had instructed her to use a cipher in writing to him, and he wrote to her in cipher. He did this in the event of their mail being tampered with, as he thought the Indiana detectives were after him at the time. Her father told her that he expected to make some money by a fraudulent scheme, but what the nature of the scheme was Pietzel did not tell the witness. Dessie was on the stand for fifty minutes and then her mother was recalled by District Attorney Graham. In reply to the question she said that Holmes came to the house at Burlington and went down in the cellar. She went with him.

Objections by Defense Sustained.

Holmes tried to get her to go upstairs on the ground that she would catch cold. When she said that she was used to going down in the cellar and would not catch cold, Holmes got her to leave the cellar to procure a hammer and some nails with which he proposed to fix a broken window. When she returned Holmes had raised some boards that were on the floor. At this point the defense entered an objection. The court sustained the objection and Mr. Graham attempted to explain that he proposed to show that Holmes had dug what was believed he intended for a grave in the cellar of another house and that it was probably what he intended doing in the present case. Here the defense objected to Mr. Graham making his explanation within the jury's hearing and the court sustained the objection again. At this point court adjourned.

Stubborn Ulcers

due to disease, or an impoverished condition of the blood, are a source of annoyance to the medical fraternity. While continually growing deeper and larger the circle of diseased flesh surrounding them is all the time extending, closing up the ducts through which replenishment of tissue should come. For such troubles physicians everywhere are praising the results obtained by the use of

Bovinine

In the first place the system needs re-invigorating, new flesh tissue should be formed, new and pure blood created, in fact, a new and well nourished body where room for disease does not exist. Food is the thing, and Bovinine, that greatest concentration of the vitalizing elements of lean beef, is the most fitting nourishment of all for speedy results. Then applied externally it nourishes by absorption, where the disease is most apparent, thus striking the enemy on all sides. Ask any Druggist.

IN A CHAOTIC STATE

The Corbett-Fitzsimmons Fight Situation.

Gov. Clarke Says There Will Be No Contest, But Friends of the Pugilists Say There Will—Corbett in Hiding—Where Is Fitzsimmons?

Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 31.—Fight matters are in a chaotic state. At one time it was thought an amicable agreement had been brought about between Governor Clarke and Corbett and Brady, so that Corbett would appear here to answer to a writ issued by Chancellor Martin. Corbett is in hiding, and will not be brought to Little Rock to-day. This information is said to come from a thoroughly reliable source. The same authority said that the agreement to bring Corbett here was a flank movement on the part of the citizens' committee to keep the militia from being sent to Hot Springs.

Gov. Clarke Incensed.

The governor was thoroughly incensed when he heard this report and he threatens to stop the fight now at all hazards and to order out the militia force of the state to prevent it, if necessary. This shrewd move on the part of the Hot Springs people may cause such a delay, however, that the fight may be pulled off before the soldiers can arrive at the Springs. In the meantime Fitzsimmons is bobbing around the state somewhere, but his exact whereabouts is not known here. That he is in custody there is little doubt, but just what sheriff has him under arrest is the question. If Sheriff Houpt of Garland county, in which Hot Springs is located, has him, then Fitz may be smuggled into the Springs and the fight pulled off before the governor can mass his forces. It is also rumored here that the citizens of Hot Springs intend to burn the railroad bridges on the Hot Springs roads to stop the passage of troops.

Resentment Against the Governor.

There is a feeling in Hot Springs that the fight will take place, notwithstanding the efforts of the governor to prevent it. Work is still going on in erecting the ring, and seats and tickets are being disposed of rapidly. Corbett is in hiding, but he says he will be ready when Fitzsimmons shows up and fight him by candle light, if necessary. Resentment against the executive is intense, and is not confined to the fight advocates, but is shown by many people on the other side, who hold that he has no right to force the county officials to do as he demands until they have shown themselves either unwilling or unable to preserve the peace. Fitzsimmons is expected here at any hour. The latest rumor is that Sheriff Houpt beat all rivals in the great race and has the Cornishman safe. Trouble is expected to-day.

CAPT. PERCIVAL DEAD.

Scarcely a Port on the Globe into Which He Has Not Sailed.

Boston, Oct. 31.—Captain J. P. T. Percival dropped dead while walking down town across the common yesterday. He was born in Hanover, this state, 77 years ago. Captain Percival at an early age went to sea and gradually working his way aft came to command some of the finest ships sailing out of this port. There is scarcely a port on the globe into which the captain has not sailed. During the rebellion Captain Percival was sent to Chinese waters on a trading voyage and remained in this trade throughout the hostilities at home. He became universally popular among the merchants of the Flowery Kingdom. He took the first cargo of ready made houses out of this port to supply the government land grant takers in the newly opened territory of Texas in 1838 or 1839. At the close of the war he retired from the sea.

FOR THE EDAM'S LOSS.

The Owners of the Steamer Turkistan To Pay in Full.

London, Oct. 31.—In the queen's bench division of the high court of justice judgment was given against the owners of the British steamer Turkistan, which ran into and sank the steamship Edam of the Netherlands-American line, off Start point, in a fog early during the morning of September 19, her passengers and crew being saved by a trawler. The owners of the Turkistan will therefore have to pay all the damages resulting from the collision. The Edam was valued at $250,000 and her cargo was estimated to be worth about $120,000.

RAILROAD PRESIDENTS.

Another Meeting To Consider Suggestions as to the Compact.

New York, Oct. 31.—The following official statement was made at the conclusion of the meeting of railroad presidents: The trunk lines and western connections were fully represented at the meeting to-day. The presidents received, considered and further amended the amended contract submitted to them by the committee of revision. By reason thereof and of additional suggestions received from counsel and others, a further meeting of the presidents and another meeting of the committee will be deemed desirable, to be held on dates to be hereafter announced. No dissent was expressed and the boards of directors of railroads party to the agreement have acted favorably upon it. The next meeting of the presidents will be held on Nov. 19. One of the principal points of discussion was a proposition to restrict representation in the board of control. It was held that if small roads were given the same voice as the large systems there would be too great a risk of obstructive tactics on their part. The Pennsylvania was particular to insist that no clause or feature of the new agreement should in any way conflict with the interstate commerce law. One reason for the adjournment was to obtain further opinions of counsel as to the legality of the compact. The meeting was entirely harmonious. All present expressed themselves in favor of the agreement.

THE WALLER CASE.

Secretary Olney To Listen to the Consul's Wife To-day.

Washington, Oct. 31.—Mrs. Waller has been notified by Secretary Olney that he will listen to any statement she has to make and Crammond Kennedy, Waller's attorney, has made an engagement for the hearing to take peace today. Assistant Secretary Uhl, who is more familiar in the matter than any other state department official, has already looked over the copy of court martial proceedings and other papers relating to Waller's arrest and imprisonment, and it is understood that immediately upon securing Mrs. Waller's statement the case in its entirety will be taken up and a definite conclusion reached as to the action the United States will take in the premises. It is not expected that Mrs. Waller will contribute any information tending to materially alter the facts already in the possession of the state department.

The Democratic managers estimate that Union county will give McGill a plurality of 250.

The trolley has at last got into politics. Elizabeth Republicans will have a trolley car parade on Saturday night. Each ward will be represented by one or more open cars, and at the head of the procession there will be an illuminated car, with a band. There will also be two flat cars, from which fireworks will be set off along the route. The parade will go over the entire trolley system twice, covering over eighteen miles.

There were more visitors at Democratic headquarters in Jersey City yesterday, says The World, than on any day since the campaign opened. All spoke encouragingly of the situation, and it was evident that if any doubt had existed in the mind of State Committee Chairman Young of Democratic success it has been removed. Mr. Young was in a most cheerful mood. His advice from all over the State was such that he unhesitatingly declared that Chancellor McGill's majority would not fall short of 8,000.

THEATRICAL.

The great New York success "Lost in New York" comes to Music Hall next Friday evening. We clip the following from the New York World: In spite of the fact that this is Holy Week, the People's Theatre was crowded to the doors last evening, the attraction being the five-act comedy-drama, "Lost in New York." To tell the story of "Lost in New York" would be a somewhat lengthy task. It is a play with a very deep-laid plot which develops in the first act, has an addition built on it in the second, is frustrated in the third, then partially rebuilt in the fourth, and finally dies a natural death in the last act. It introduces some very clever people and a wealth of magnificent scenery.

On Saturday evening Jas. Thornton's Elite Vaudeville Company will be the attraction at Music Hall. The combination of artists is selected from the creme of the entire vaudeville world and is headed by the peerless queen of comediennes, Bonnie Thornton, and the olio includes, Gilmore and Leonard, the people's choice of Irish comedians; Norma, Wills and Collins-Monte, America's favorite high class entertainers, the three Marvelles, Archie, Dan and Ed., supreme monarchs of all grotesque artists, Ed. Lattell, an up-to-date musical melange; Thos. J. Clark and St. Clair-Violet, the leading comedy team, a female barber; Sherman and Morrissey, the great burlesque trapeze artists; Whitten Sisters, Mollie and Frankie, (Jas. Thornton's latest song), The Original Coney Island Girls, and the invincible James Thornton, the Napoleon of song writers forming a strong production.

F. F. Proctor will next week inaugurate a system of transfers between his two theatres—Proctor's Pleasure Palace, Fifty-eighth street East, and Proctor's Theatre, Twenty-third street West, New York. For example, a patron purchasing a ticket either house before 1:30 p. m., will obtain a transfer entitling the holder to admission at the other theatre on the following day up to the same hour.

A Unique Wedding Ring.

The Misses Shreve referred to in the following clipping from Harper's Bazar of October 5th, are sisters of B. J. Shreve of Grove street:

A precious heirloom in the possession of the Misses Shreve, of Mount Holly, New Jersey, is a wedding ring, on the inside of which is engraved this inscription:

"In Christ and thee
My comfort be."

The ring is of plain gold, and was given to their great-grandmother, Mary Cook, on the day of her marriage, in 1757, to Jonathan Lippincott, of Monmouth county, New Jersey. The father of this Jonathan Lippincott was David Lippincott, who, in 1731, married Rebecca Stockton, a granddaughter of the first Richard Stockton, who settled in Burlington county, New Jersey. This pioneer was born in 1707, and was the grandfather of Richard Stockton, the signer of the Declaration of Independence.

No More Dances There.

An engineer on the Central railroad telephoned Chief Doane from the North Avenue station about 3:30 o'clock this morning and told him there was a fire near Clinton avenue. The Chief and Second-Assistant John Murray went to the place in the former's wagon, and learned that the woods near the brook had been burning and had set fire to the dancing pavillion in Greder's grove, totally destroying it. The fire was practically out when they reached the place and nothing could be done.

Successful Operation.

Joseph Brown, so seriously injured by a piece of steel entering his eye, is under the care of Dr. Ard at the Eye and Ear Infirmary in New York. By means of a large magnet connected with the street current the doctor removed the steel which could not have been removed by any other method, and the prospects are good for saving the eyeball and possibly a little vision.

—A union meeting of Plainfield Methodists will be held at the Monroe Avenue chapel tonight. The sermon will be preached by Dr. Barnes.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—A. Walter Haviland, of Rockview avenue, is building a bridge across Stoney brook to connect his premises with his lot on Greenbrook road.

—Woolston & Buckel, who have been for the past two months decorating the interior of George P. Dupee's residence on Rockview avenue, are now painting the exterior a pretty shade.

—A treat is in store for the people of Plainfield on Friday evening of next week, November 8th, in the lecture room of Trinity Reformed church by Rev. James F. Riggs, D. D., of New Brunswick, on "Constantinople."

—Quite a scare occured to the residents in the vicinity of Rockview avenue on Tuesday evening about 6 o'clock caused by somebody setting fire to the leaves in the vacant lot belonging to Col. John F. Wilson and adjoining the residence of B. M. Day, of Rockview avenue. Elias Hotchkiss on seeing the danger telephoned a still alarm to Warren enginehouse, and as there was some delay in transmitting the message an alarm was sent in from Box 154. The hose wagon arrived very soon and the laddies got water on the flames just as they reached the fence and made quick work in subduing them.

A Large Electric Lighting Plant.

The Chapot Glove Manufacturing Company, whose factory is located on Grant avenue, has awarded the contract for a large electric lighting plant to the Standard Electric Equipment Company, which is represented here by H. H. W. Tomlinson and A. B. Laing.

A Household Treasure.

D. W. Fuller, of Canajoharie, N. Y., says that he always keeps Dr. King's New Discovery in the house and his family has always found the very best results follow its use; that he would not be without it, if procurable. G. A. Dykeman Druggist, Catskill, N. Y., says that Dr. King's New Discovery is undoubtedly the best cough remedy: that he has used it in his family for eight years, and it has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. Why not try a remedy so long tried and tested. Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c. and $1.00.

The market is full of cough mixtures but one trouble with most of them is that when they do a little good the patient has to take so much that he gets to loathe the taste. The Pineola Balsam is superior to other cough remedies because it is agreeable to the palate and its good effects are immediate. In a few days an ordinary cough is gone altogether. Bronchitis and asthma are more stubborn, but they too are cured by Ely's Pineola Balsam. A remedy worth trying. 25 cents is all it costs.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces, such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

STUDYING STENOGRAPHY.

Excellent Opportunity Afforded in the Y. M. C. A. Class.

Shorthand is not a hard study. The impression that seems to prevail to the contrary is due largely to want of acquaintance with the subject, and also to the fact that some systems of shorthand are difficult and unscientific. Choose the best system, and you will find the study of shorthand at once pleasant and easy. The direction of a competent and careful teacher will add to the pleasure of the study, for the manner of study makes a great difference in its attractiveness.

The Young Men's Christian Association offers to young men a good practical course in the leading system of shorthand, extending through the winter of 1895-'96. Typewriting will complete the course for those who desire to be at once qualified for positions. The course in shorthand will consist of fifty lessons, with two sessions weekly on Monday and Thursday evenings at eight o'clock. The instruction will be largely personal, thus giving each student a thorough mastery of the subject. John C. Whiting, who has had five years active experience in teaching stenography, and who is a practical stenographer, will conduct the class.

The system used will be the Isaac Pitman—the leading, and for fifty years the standard system, adopted by the public schools of New York, St. Louis, Jersey City, Trenton and other large cities, and used by more stenographers than all other systems combined. A five dollar membership in the Y. M. C. A. gives the privileges of the Educational Department without extra charge, besides admission to the lecture course and other advantages. Classes are held in book-keeping, arithmetic, mechanical, drawing, German and English. The shorthand class is just starting, and new members will be received up to Thanksgiving, but it is hoped that all interested will apply at once.

A class in stenography for ladies, with the same course as that for men, will soon be formed. The cost will be nominal, and the lessons will be given afternoons, to enable the ladies to attend with the least inconvenience to them.

Thrown Out of His Wagon.

The team of horses belonging to Moses Carney became frightened last night at the corner of West Third street and Central avenue at six o'clock and ran away before Mr. Carney could get them under control. They had only gone a short distance when he was thrown out of the wagon and one of the rear wheels passed over his leg. Several witnessed the accident and thought at first that he had been killed, as he lay stunned. He was picked up and after a time revived so that he was able to move his leg. He was taken to his home and a physician called. The injury, though a painful one, is not serious.

CUBA'S CAUSE INJURED

Gen. Gomez Said To Have Resigned as Leader.

Believed in Washington That He Has Left the Island—In That Event the Negroes Would Be in Control—Gen. Campos' Health—Reported Rebel Surrender.

Washington, Oct. 31.—While no official information has reached here concerning the reported resignation of Gen. Maximo Gomez, it is not doubted that the Cuban rebel chief has taken this step, which private advices from Havana have long forshadowed. Gomez is regarded by the Spanish authorities as the ablest of the insurgent chiefs and his desertion of their cause cannot fail, it is believed, to affect it adversely. Gomez received a severe wound in the leg at the battle of Dos Rias last May, when Gen. Marti was killed. He escaped capture, however, and succeeded, ultimately, in reaching the province of Puerto Principe, where he has since been succored by his friends.

Thought To Have Left Cuba.

Private letters which have reached certain of the Cuban sympathizers in the United States contained the intelligence weeks ago that the wound in his leg was very painful, and that if he could not receive proper treatment Cuba he would be compelled to leave the island. That he has at last done so is not doubted by those who are familiar with the situation here. Gomez is a white man and he has been from the commencement the direct representative of the white element among the insurgents and the impression conveyed through Spanish sources is that his departure from Cuba will cause the disintegration of his forces, the more especially as the jealousies among the insurgent leaders are reported as both deep-seated and numerous.

Would Give Negroes the Control.

It is contended for this reason that Gomez's white adherents will not serve under another commander, particularly as the remaining chiefs are all colored. The further effect of this departure, it is asserted, will be to give blacks among the insurgents a greater preponderance of power not only in the ranks but file as well.

Cen. Campos' Health.

Many rumors have been circulated in Spain as to the health of the captain-general, Martinez Campos. In ministerial circles they have met with absolute denial. It is said that if Gen. Campos is obliged to relinquish the Cuban command at any time he will be replaced by a general free from all entanglements with Cuban political parties.

Rebels Surrender.

The last of the rebels in the western province of Pinar del Rio have surrendered to the government. They brought in all their arms and ammunition. The province to-day is pacified. The general freeing of the upper central zone of Cuba is proceeding steadily.

Holland's Sympathy with Spain.

El Tiempo of Madrid states that Holland is in full sympathy with Spain and has cabled her authorities at Curacoa, off the coast of Colombia, to maintain the strictest neutrality and to immediately suppress any attempts by Cuban filibusters. Her policy will be that of Great Britain—that of absolute neutrality. Holland's reported action gives color to the Madrid rumors that the entente between the powers having West Indian possessions is perfect.

THE GALLERY GODS.

OUTSPOKEN CRITICS WHO SIT IN THE CHEAP SEATS NEAR THE CEILING.

The Kind of Plays and Players That Please the Habitues of the "Heaven"—Their Fondness For Particular Actors and Actresses—How They Applaud.

This is all because St. Louisans have their dramatic opinions made to order. Attractions before reaching here have been tried by the fire of eastern criticism. The local theater goer, a most indolent appreciator, accepts the dicta of others rather than energize sufficiently to formulate an opinion of his own. In this atmosphere of Philistinism the gallery is stifled. Indeed on the rare occasions on which it has attempted to assert its independence, physical force has been employed to coerce it into uniformity with the pit.

A case in point occurred some years ago, when Mary Anderson brought here her all English production of "A Winter's Tale." Mary was bad enough, but her troop of barnstorming cockneys were too much for the gallery. The pit and boxes were filled with the elite of the city, and they were in ecstasy over a production that had visibly charmed the Prince of Wales. But the "gods" could not understand the thick speech of the Englishmen nor appreciate their stilted action. Undaunted by the display of fashion, they boldly guyed the performance. Four ushers were pretty badly beaten for attempting to restore order, and a relay of scene shifters was finally necessary to bring about quiet. There were a dozen broken heads as the result of the evening, and there has not been a noisy gallery in either the Grand or Olympic since.

One of the marked characteristics of the gallery boy—there are others—is his fondness for particular actors or actresses. The late Lawrence Barrett was a redhot favorite with the gallery boys from one end of the country to the other. This may have been due to the widely circulated story that in early life he was a newsboy, and his name was Larry Brannigan. There was food for hope in this for every stage-struck youngster in the land. A long way off and in another direction is Sadie Hasson, who wears a trapper's outfit and shoots Indians with marvelous indiscrimination. She is the ideal woman to more than half the factory boys in the big cities of the country, and her youthful admirers lie awake at night dreaming of her mimic prowess and wondering why their own mothers and sisters cannot be molded along such heroic lines.

The persistent fad with the gallery boys is the modern melodrama, with its superb scenic accessories and climaxes by mechanical device. He wants action for his admission, and a play like "Rebellious Susan" would not interest him ten minutes. It is the show that can produce the greatest number of happenings to an act that gets his coin the oftenest. Those are the kind of shows they put on at Havlin's, clean, wholesome shows, apt to give a boy exaggerated ideas of life, it is true, but not calculated to warp his moral fiber.

One night during the week a Republic reporter climbed to the gallery of Havlin's. It was packed to the roof, and as bathing is not part of the daily curriculum of the habitues it was a trifle trying. The gods did not seem to mind it. They were packed in sweltering rows from the railing to the seats at the top, in which, when one is seated, he must bend forward lest his head strike the ceiling. Nearly all had removed their coats and loosened their shirt fronts. Some chewed tobacco, others ate fruit or munched peanuts. All were in a happy frame of mind. There was a German knockout comedian holding the stage while the sensational climax was being set. All his jokes were given in a personal turn and hurled back and forth among acquaintances. The raillery was keen and intensely personal, but seemed to arouse no ill feeling. Suddenly the actor began guying an imaginary person in the gallery. Quick as a flash the crowd had picked on a real victim in the shape of a sleepy looking youth in a row far down the front. Seven hundred pairs of eyes turned on the poor fellow, and as many tongues shot pointed remarks at him. It was the cruel wit of thoughtless youth.

Then the scene changed, and every one straightened out and leaned forward, for the climax of the play was about to come. The villain rushed on and climbed up a telegraph pole and tapped a wire only to learn that the police were after him and had been notified by his rival. The mere tapping incident was heartily appreciated. Then the hero comes on. "Why have you pursued and betrayed me?" asks the villain amid impressive solemnity. Slowly comes back the answer, "Because you have come between me and the woman I love." Like a sharp crack of thunder comes a roar of glad appreciation from the gallery. Then the pair clinch. In an instant the whole gallery is in an uproar. Every one is on his feet.

"Kill him!"

"Grab him by the neck!"

"Bite him!"

Thus comes the chorus of yells from the excited spectators. The hero is overpowered amid groans from the gallery and thrust into an outhouse; the girl comes on and meets a similar fate. The villain then sets fire to the barn in which his rival is locked. The flames lap out. Not a sound is heard in the gallery. Then the girl appears. She has climbed out on the roof and is making her way through a network of telegraph wires to the burning shed.

The faintest suspicion of a cheer rolls across the gallery at her appearance, but it quickly dies, so mighty is the suspense. Step by step the girl draws near the end of her journey. Inch by inch the gallery has risen to its feet. Not a word is spoken, hardly a breath is drawn. The girl reaches the opposite pole, climbs down and with an ax chops her way into the burning building and drags her lover out. Not until the heroine has reached the center of the stage does the gallery let go, and then a mighty cheer breaks loose. After the first shock of the collapse it comes again. The yelling is kept up until all the pent up energy accumulated during the progress of the climax is worn off.

A moment later they are all in the street, reveling in a breath of fresh air, and everybody discussing the tremendous advantage of a wire walking sweetheart. —St. Louis Republic.

French Are Stay at Homes.

One reason why the French are not successful in colonizing is found in their intense attachment to their birthplace. Americans will be surprised to learn that 21,000,000 of the 38,000,000 inhabitants of France live in the towns where they were born.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

No Such Word.

The St. Louis girl wrote, "Don't phale to be thar." Her Kansas City beau replied: "I will be thar. There's no such word as phale."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

CHAPTER II.

A Haunted Room.

Ned Fothergill, who had reached the bottom of the stair-case of the old inn by the time little Minnie had begun to call aloud to her sister, made way for the young girl to pass him on her way up the stairs. But she stopped, and now perceiving him for the first time, addressed him eagerly:

"You, sir, you, have you seen my sister, have you seen Mrs. France?"

"Not since I went away this afternoon with the young sergeant," replied Ned.

He was very sympathetic, for the young girl's fears could not but make a strong impression upon him. After the sense of silence and desolation he had experienced since his return to the inn, he was just in the mood to believe that something unusual and mysterious had happened. The voice of Robert France, who was behind them, brought him back to common-sense.

"Why, child, what are you frightening yourself about?" said he good-humoredly. "Don't I tell you she's gone to the farm, about the butter, I think it was? You know there are two or three ways of getting there; and if you came one way and didn't meet her, it's clear enough she went by another way."

Minnie listened without turning round to look at him. Her delicate, oval face still wore the same set expression of bewilderment and alarm.

"I heard her call me!" she whispered again.

"Well, if you heard her call you, it's proof positive she wasn't very far off from where you were!" returned her brother-in-law. "Why didn't you call back?"

The girl hesitated a moment, and then looked from the one to the other of the two men, as if doubtful whether she should utter the words which were in her mind. At last she said, in a low voice, almost stammering:

"I did. I did call her. But she didn't answer."

Then Robert France suddenly drew himself up.

"My God! Surely you don't think—" He paused a moment, then cried in a much louder voice: "Miles! What's become of that rascal Eben Miles? I never did think much of soldiers, but if any harm's come to my wife through him—"

Minnie cut him short with a denial so shrill as to be almost a shriek.

"No, no! Eben wouldn't do her any harm. Eben! Oh, no."

But Robert France had begun to pace up and down the passage, his heavy tread echoing through the house.

"Well, well, bless the girl, I don't want to suspect any harm of the fellow, and what's more, I don't suppose it's anything but your fancy she called you. But you make me nervous with your shrieking and crying out, and your starts and your jumps."

He stopped short.

"I'd go and look for her myself if it wasn't for leaving the place!"

"No, I'll go," cried Minnie, leaping down into the long passage with a bound. "Where's Dinah?"

"Dinah's out. She's gone up the village to the mill."

"And Jim?"

"He's out with the wagonette."

"And Williams?"

"He's over the way somewhere. Why?"

"I want some one to go with me," faltered Minnie.

"Will you let me go with you?" volunteered Ned.

Minnie hesitated. Robert was still pacing up and down, regardless of the fact that two or three people were now waiting in the bar to be served.

"If I thought that soldier chap—" he began.

The voice of Eben Miles interrupted him this time.

"He is here himself to answer for himself, if you have anything to ask him, Mr. France," said the sergeant from the doorway.

France turned quickly.

"Have you seen anything of my wife?" he asked shortly, in a voice which was loud enough to attract the attention of all the people in the bar, and of a stray loiterer or two outside the house.

His tone was sufficiently aggressive to cause the sergeant to enter very quickly and to come right up to him before he answered:

"No, Mr. France, I've not seen anything of her since I took leave of you both this afternoon."

Robert France turned up the lamp which was hanging on a bracket on the wainscotted wall, and looked him full in the face.

"And you can prove it, of course?" said he.

Eben Miles seemed taken aback.

"Yes," he said at last, "yes, I suppose I could. Why?"

Between the two excited men little Minnie pressed forward, and with gentle voice, and earnest, persuasive eyes, brought her calming influence to work upon the passions of them both.

"Eben, it's only that we can't find her, and we don't know where she's gone, and I heard her call me over the fields, on my way from the farm."

"Way—from the farm!" stammered Eben. "Where the old folks are?"

"Why, yes, of course, father's farm."

The sergeant seemed disturbed.

"I don't think she can have been anywhere about there," said he, "because—" He stopped, hesitated.

"Because what?" put in Robert France in his bullying voice.

The sergeant made no answer.

"Do you mean to say you've been about there? Speak out, man, can't you? Nobody's accusing you of anything."

"Accusing me!" retorted the sergeant in a voice which brought up the loiterers, who began to pour in from the bar and from the steps outside the inn. "I should think not. There's no law to prevent a man going over the fields to see his old friends, nor to prevent him turning back again if he changes his mind. I did think I'd like to see the old folks," and he turned to Minne: "Your father and mother, Minnie; and I did go around by the chapel and over Brown's field with that intention. And then I thought it was rather late for a visit, and that I'd stay at Ward's over the way, and go in the morning. So I came back and dropped in here to tell you and Harriet that I was going down there to-morrow."

Robert France himself took his explanation in the same manly way in which it was offered.

"Thank you, Miles," said he. "You'll excuse my being so short with you, as I'd no right to be. It was this little girl here put me on the fidget. Harriet'll turn up right enough, and laugh at us for thinking she couldn't look after herself. Maybe she's gone on to her aunt's, out Eastry way. That's what she did the last time we had a bit of a tiff; and if she has, she won't be home till to-morrow morning, and we shall have to manage as best we can without her. Come and have a drink, sergeant, and you, sir," he continued, turning to Ned, who had been a silent spectator of the scene, "I hope you'll do us the pleasure of joining us."

"Bob's in rare good humor to-night," remarked one of the habitues of the place in an undertone to another, when this invitation had been given and accepted.

But Minnie looked as unhappy as ever, and was in no way reassured by the suppositions which satisfied her brother-in-law and the rest. She was slipping out of the house again with a determined air when Eben came quickly after her.

WHERE ARE YOU GOING, MINNIE?

"Where are you going, Minnie?"

"To find Harriet, of course. Need you ask?"

"Let me go with you."

She hesitated, then shook her head decidedly.

"It would make Bob angry. Better not. I'm not afraid."

"But you are going over the fields. It's not safe, so late."

"Well, I won't go alone, I promise you."

Eben was plainly not satisfied, but he let her go. She was her own mistress; he could neither stop her, nor go with her against her will. He went slowly back to the bar, where the host of the "Griffin" was chatting with Ned Fothergill.

Every one noticed how good-tempered and "affable" Bob France was that evening, and opined that "he was never like that when the miss was about." He seemed to be ashamed of his ill-humor of the morning, and did his best to atone to Eben Miles and to Ned Fothergill by insisting upon their being his guests at supper.

Ned accepted readily; he was interested in this household, and was anxious to see the end of the wife's escapade, about the innocence of which he had begun to have his doubts. Eben, however, consented with manifest unwillingness.

"We'll have it upstairs in the Club room," was the direction he gave to the old servant, as he led the way upstairs. "Not much doing to-night, so we can have a jolly evening."

It was an eccentric proceeding for the landlord of an inn to neglect his bar in the evening, Ned thought. But that, after all, was no affair of his.

The charms of the quaint old house grew upon the Londoner, as he saw more of it. The Club-room was a long, wide apartment, with a very low ceiling, wainscoted walls dark with age, and a floor which sloped down towards the corridor side in a rather alarming manner.

It was simply and sombrely furnished with a number of wooden armchairs, a long table, a few dingy engravings of forgotten local dignitaries, and an early portrait of the Queen, in colors, framed in mahogany.

There was a fireplace at one end, a couple of rickety doors at the other, and a row of three small latticed windows along the outer side.

The supper cloth was laid at the end of the table farthest from the fire-place, by the master's order. The servant looked surprised at this, having begun to lay it at the other end. Bob France took the chair at the end, and invited his guests to seat themselves one on each side of him. He was still in the best of humors; indeed, his manner grew positively jovial when the wine, which he brought himself from the cellar, had circulated pretty freely.

It was some old port from the cellar of an old gentleman of the neighborhood, and was fully worthy of the praises with which the host introduced it. Ned began to think Bob France was a good deal better than his reputation, and thought that Eben Miles was a little churlish not to yield to the pleasure of the moment, and to become less taciturn.

But the young sergeant, instead of growing genial, became more and more quiet, until at last, when the landlord had gone down for another bottle of wine, he had sunk into absolute moroseness.

"What's the matter?" asked Ned, when they were left together. "You look as gloomy as if you were going to be hanged to-morrow morning!"

Eben turned his face quickly and looked at him.

"That's just how I feel," said he. "I've got the shivers to-night. I think I'm going to be ill, catch a fever, or something. I feel for all the world like I did when I had a touch of Yellow Jack in Bermuda. I feel as if I saw things, and heard things—There! I could swear I heard a noise behind that door, a noise that sends a creepy feeling down my back!"

He had pushed back his chair, and was pointing to one of the doors at the end of the room. It was close to where their chairs were grouped; and as Ned listened, he too heard, or thought he heard, a rather weird, uncanny sound, a slow, sliding noise for which it was difficult to account. He jumped up and tried the door. But it was locked. As he shook it, the landlord returned to the room with a bottle of port, dusty and dirty, in his hand.

For a moment he stood still, saying nothing. Then he asked, advancing to the table, and putting the bottle tenderly down:

"What's the matter? Eh?"

"There's a noise, an odd noise, behind this door. As if somebody were listening at the keyhole," said Ned.

"That can't be," said Robert France, as he came up to the cupboard door and tried it in his turn. "That's not a room. It's the cupboard where the linen is kept. I don't think anybody could have got in there. However, we'll see. I'll go and fetch the key."

He left the room, returning almost immediately with a large key, which he put into the lock of the door. Eben held the lamp.

The space disclosed when the door was opened was about four feet deep and five feet wide, and was entirely filled with piles of house-linen, and with blankets, quilts and winter curtains on the top.

Bob shut the door again with a laugh.

"No eavesdropper there," said he. "You're a cup too low this evening, sergeant. Here's something that will put you right."

He drew the cork of the fresh bottle he had brought, and proceeded to fill three glasses, going round from one to the other, and talking all the time. Eben, however, still kept his eyes fixed on the cupboard door, and Ned still watched Eben.

The wine, however, had no effect in raising the spirits of the handsome sergeant. The talk was left entirely to the other two; and before the bottle was empty, the young soldier surprised both his companions by laying his head down on the table and going fast asleep.

Ned stared at him in astonishment.

"He's ill," said he to the landlord. "The poor chap's ill. He said he felt as he felt when he had yellow fever. He's not drunk enough to make him sleep like that."

For the man was lying like a log, and it was impossible to arouse him. Robert France looked at him attentively, and then suggested that they should put him on the sofa and leave him to come to himself.

"I don't suppose there's anything the matter with him, more than having taken a little more to drink than usual, it being a hot day," said he.

And Ned, though the sergeant had struck him as having been perfectly sober [illegible] dropping off to sleep, could say nothing in contradiction. The soldier's slumber was too heavy to be natural.

"I'll give him a look-in before I go to bed," said the landlord, "just to see he's all right. I'll be bound there'll be very little amiss with him in the morning. And now I'll give you a candle, sir, and you'll be getting to bed yourself, I suppose. And I'll go down and shut the place up before turning in myself."

He was passing round the long table on his way to the door, when there were sounds of rapid footsteps in the corridor, light, hurried steps they were, accompanied by deep-drawn breaths. Ned, who was standing by the door, saw the landlord's color change. The light given by the lamp in his hand was not brilliant, but it was enough to show that Robert France had turned very pale.

Ned, who had forgotten the little domestic mystery of the wife's flight in the events of the past hour, remembered it again.

"Your wife!" he exclaimed, as the footsteps approached the door.

The landlord reeled heavily against the table. Had the wine affected him also? Ned stared at him in surprise. His face head was wet and glistening; his eyes rolled; his breath came in labored gasps.

STORIES OF SPIRITS.

STRANGE CASES OF MANIFESTATIONS BY SPOOKS.

Investigated by the Society For Psychical Research, They Are Presented With Strong Backing—Examples Furnished by Widely Separated Countries.

Reverting to the lore of the Psychical Research society, here is a case in which apparitions of the dead and the living were commingled. A lady doctor says that in 1869 she was living in the family of a retired naval officer, Mr. R., and his wife, two miles from a seaport town. Mrs. R., who was the sister of the British consul at Cadiz, married her husband, a widower, in that city. When, after the marriage, they came to England, her husband was unable to find the nurse with whom his youngest child had been left. After a vain search they came to London. One night Mrs. R. saw the sitting room door open. A beautiful lady came in, followed by a common looking woman, carrying a child about a year old, dressed in a yellow pelisse. The lady came up to the bed and said, pointing to the baby: "This is Johnny. You will remember Johnny." She smiled, and Mrs. R. was just going to answer when the vision was gone. Her husband said she had exactly described his first wife, and that the child's name was Johnny. Some days after, returning from Westminster abbey, they lost themselves in a narrow congeries of streets. Suddenly Mrs. R. saw the common looking woman of her vision carrying the baby with a yellow pelisse. She told her husband, who spoke to the woman. After discreet inquiry it turned out that she was the nurse that was wanted, and that the baby was the missing child.

The antithesis of unconscious spiritual manifestation by the living is the conscious severance from the body and a foretaste of death's mystery. Dr. Wiltse of Skiddy, Kan., whose case was first published in the St. Louis Medical Journal in 1889, apparently died of fever. He was declared to be dead by the physician who attended him. To make assurance doubly sure, needles were thrust deeply into the flesh. This was done many times. The doctor who pronounced the patient dead subsequently said, "I observed his symptoms closely, and if there are any symptoms marking a patient in articulo mortis that were not present in his case I am ignorant of them." Meanwhile, the spirit of the man alleged to be dead had, according to his own story, dissevered itself from the body. The disembodied spirit even contemplated the dwelling of clay it had just quitted. The liberated Dr. Wiltse was conscious of two weeping ladies in the room (his wife and his sister) and of two gentlemen at the door. With one of these gentlemen he came into contact and, very much to his surprise, perceived that the other party was unconscious of the collision. "I now attempted to gain the attention of the people with the object of comforting them as well as of assuring them of their own immortality. I bowed to them playfully and saluted with my right hand. I passed about among them also, but found that they gave me no heed. Then the situation struck me as humorous, and I laughed outright." Going out of the house, he noted the redness of the soil and the washes that the rain had made. Presently he found himself in the air, borne along by a pair of hands till he came to where were three prodigious rocks, which, his conductor told him, was the road to the eternal world, whence he could no more return in the flesh. He attempted to pass, but his path was barred by a black cloud, and he knew he was to be stopped. The cloud then touched his face. When he regained consciousness, he found himself at home in his bed very ill. Now there is abundant evidence to prove that Dr. Wiltse's wife and sister did not fall a-weeping until he was pronounced dead; there is evidence that the soil and the rain washes were as he described immediately he found utterance, though they must have been very different the last time he saw them with his bodily eyes; there is evidence that he told all these things as soon as he could speak and as often as he was permitted.

The Rev. L. J. Bertrand, a Huguenot minister of Neuilly, Paris, writing in 1819, gives a strange experience that befell him in the Alps 30 years previously. The sleep of death had come upon him as he crouched in the snow upon a ledge of a precipice. His mind continued active, though his body was benumbed. The approach of death was not painful till the last, when there was a dreadfully acute pain of momentary duration. "Then," he says, "my life went out." His spirit soared above his body, to which, however, it was still attached by a kind of elastic string. With the spiritual eye he saw the remainder of his party and their guide in a position where he could not possibly have seen them from the place where his body lay. He saw that the guide had disobeyed instructions as to the route to be traversed. He saw the offender take a sly pull at the percipient's own Madeira and eat the abstracted leg of a fowl. Still more wonderful, he saw his wife, who was always nervous about him when he was alpine climbing, going to Lucerne till the following day. "Well, wife," he soliloquized, "I am a dead man. Goodby." Suddenly he felt a shock, realized that his party had returned and that the guide was rubbing him with snow to reanimate him. His first attempt at speech was to reproach the guide. "If you had simply cut the string!" he peevishly exclaimed. By and by he taxed the guide with his small misdeeds, and the delinquent ran off in dismay. When he reached the inn, the guide became delirious, being convinced that the esteemed pastor was the D. It afterward appeared that Mme. Bertrand had set off for Lucerne exactly under the circumstances her husband had noted with the spiritual eye.—Illustrated Modern Art and Literature.

Bismarck and the American Girl.

Dr. Stefansson retells the story of a beautiful American girl from Colorado who went to Kissingen to see Bismarck, who was taking the waters there. Having feasted for some days on the sight of the great man, she one day summoned up courage, walked straight up to him and said: "Durchlaucht, I am going to Colorado today. May I shake hands with you before I go?" She took his offered hand and attempted to kiss it, but he promptly said, "In Kissingen we do not kiss hands." And then and there he kissed her on the mouth as tenderly and affectionately as any lover. And yet, remarks Dr. Stefansson, some people will try to make out that Bismarck is blind to a woman's charms.—Westminster Gazette.

A good natured traveler fell asleep in a train and was carried beyond his destination. "Pretty good joke, isn't it?" said a fellow passenger. "Yes, but a little too farfetched," was the rejoinder.

WE KNOW ABOUT THIS

We Have Thoroughly Invetsigated the Matter.

And We Assure Our Readers of Its Absolute Truth.

County Supt. Brown Was Terribly Weak and Nervous.

Took Dr. Greene's Nervura and Is Now a Well Man.

Says He Feels Endowed With New Vigor and Health.

[From the Syracuse, N. Y., Herald.]

"How can I get rest and strength when they are required?" This is a question that is daily asked by thousands of men and women who become so unstrung and nervous that when opportunity is afforded for rest it does not come. With thousands this question seems to have been solved, and that permanently. It is by the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

Among the very large number of business men of Syracuse who have successfully used Dr. Greene's Nervura is Charles D. Brown, Deputy Superintendent of the Couty Poor, with an office in the Court of Appeals Library Building, who at one time believed that he would lose his mental faculties unless he had immediate relief from the nervous trouble with which he was afflicted, and the debility which followed.

MR. CHARLES D. BROWN.

In describing his experience, Mr. Brown said:

"I went home a short time ago thoroughly imbued with the idea that I had made my last visit to my office, and that my nervous system had become so shattered that I never would be fitted for business again. I was in such a condition that I believe an insane asylum was staring me in the face. I found it impossible to sleep or get any rest at any hour of the day. My wife and family became thoroughly alarmed and insisted on sending for the family physician. His calls seemed to be without result, and I believed that I was without help. Not so, however, for the messenger of health came through Dr. Greene's Nervura, which was recommended by a friend who had received great benefit from its use for only a few weeks. Having suffered in a measure from an attack similar to my own I believed that he knew what he was talking about, and so decided to try Nervura.

'The result in my case has been far beyond all of my expectations I can assure you. The benefits began to be apparent before I had been finished taking the first bottle. Before this I had not been able to apply myself to my official duties, but day by day I began to experience a marked change for the better, and today I seem as well as ever. For some time I had to give up business entirely at times. I was wholly unfitted for any kind of mental action, and at one time thought that unless improvement came I would become a burden to myself and friends. Today, all of that nervousness has disappeared, that which the doctors could not relieve. With the improvement in my nervous system came better health generally, and today I feel endowed with new vigor and health, thanks to the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. I would not be without it under any circumstances."

Mr. Brown says that it affords him much pleasure to recommend the remedy prepared by Dr. Greene, who, he considers, is a benefactor to mankind. Brown can be found at his office every day. He honestly and enthusiastically recommends it to others. We would say also, that this remarkable remedy is the prescription and discovery of Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th St., New York City, who can in all cases be consulted free of charge, personally or by letter.

CURIOSITIES OF DREAMS.

Scientific Views of the Queer Things We Do and See While Asleep.

The causes and classification of dreams is a subject that, although it has been discussed from time immemorial, seems to be as little understood, beyond a certain point, as it was ages ago. At the hypnotic congress held in Paris recently much time was spent in considering this question, and though some interesting theories were brought forth the savants were but little wiser when the discussion ended than when it began.

A compatriot of Ibsen, Dr. Mourley Vold, professor in the University of Christiania, gave the result of numerous experiments made upon himself and others who had lent themselves to the cause of science in trying to ascertain the dividing line between the role played in dreams by the cutaneous and muscular senses and between the true images of the day and the phantoms of the night.

You rarely dream, this savant says, that you are lying down, but generally that you are standing or sitting in a way corresponding to the position of the member which makes its impression upon the mind. For example, if one dreams that he is standing on tiptoe, it will be found that his toes are pressing hard against the footboard of the bed. Dreams of walking, running, dancing and the like are always produced by the position of the feet.

Another of this doctor's theories is that when we dream our minds, to a certain extent, become as they were when we were children. In support of this he says that when a dreamer, with half awakened sense, sees his hand before him he instinctively begins to count the fingers. This is because the dormant senses reduce the sleeper's mind to a childish state of feebleness, and it is in infancy that our first lessons in computation begin upon our fingers.

The visual impressions of the day form another class of dreams. Dr. Mourley Vold is of the opinion that happy days are followed by pleasant dreams, and vice versa. Every one knows, however, that this is not always the case.

At the conclusion of the learned Norwegian's address one of the oldest of his listeners—one of the most celebrated physicians in Paris—remarked to a colleague that if one has had bad dreams it is because of indigestion, or too much clothes on the bed, or too little air in the room, or because his wife snores, or because he is lying in an uncomfortable position, and that with proper precautions there should be only pleasant dreams or none at all.—New York World.

He Bought His Own Statue.

There was grief in a South Side household one day when a careless servant allowed a valuable piece of statuary to fall and break in a dozen pieces. The girl had a good cry and offered to pay for the marble, but that was out of the question. The manservant, who was also coachman and landscape gardener, was instructed to take the fragments of the art treasure and dispose of them. It happened that he knew a thing or two. Instead of dumping the pieces into an ash barrel he took them to a repair shop, where they were carefully glued together by an expert workman. When the job was completed, the servant took the marble to a dealer in antiquities and objects of art, explained how he came into possession of it and received an equivalent of two weeks' wages above the cost of repairs.

Some weeks later the original owner came upon the marble in the show window. He could hardly believe his senses, as he had bought his marble as an original, and here was another original. He went into the shop and priced the figure. "That's very cheap," he remarked. "I must explain to you," said the dealer, "that it has been broken and repaired." He pointed out the faint lines showing where the pieces had been joined and then the former owner recognized his property. He couldn't claim it, as he had once ordered it thrown away. Neither could he accuse the servant of theft. He bought the marble and took it home with him, and the manservant nearly fainted when he saw it in its old place on the mantel.

A FILTER INSIDE YOU.

How Your Blood is Kept Pure.

Health Comes From Pure Blood. Pure Blood Depends on Your Filter Inside You.

Your Kidneys Keep Your Blood Pure If You Are Well—A Few Facts About Them, and How to Make Them Well When They Are Sick.

Your blood is what nourishes your body.

New blood is made every minute. It goes to the lungs, gets fresh air, and then passes through the body. In passing, it deposits new flesh, fat, bones, etc., and takes up worn out matter.

This worn out matter goes to the kidneys. The kidneys filter it out of the blood and throw it out of the body.

That is, when they are well, they do.

When your kidneys are well, they act as perfect filters, to keep your blood pure. When they are sick, they act imperfectly. They leave the bad matter in. Sometimes they take out the good.

There is nothing more poisonous than bad blood.

A proof of this is rheumatism. It is simply a blood-poisoning caused by the bad matter left in the blood by sick kidneys.

Bright's disease is the kidneys working the other way—taking the good food out of the blood.

Both kinds of kidney sickness are dangerous.

Both can be cured by Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills.

One of the most wonderful facts of our body is this natural filter inside us. Our kidneys are very important organs. We don't take enough care of them. We are sick oftener than there is any need for. It is simply because we take no heed to our kidneys.

Sick kidneys show their effects in many different diseases.

Rheumatism and Bright's disease are very common. Anæmia, neuralgia, pain in the back, dizziness, bladder troubles, gravel, diabetes, sleeplessness, nervousness.

There are only a few symptoms, or so called "diseases." Back of them all are the sick kidneys.

Once the filters can be made to work all these symptoms will disappear.

Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills are made principally from the roots of the asparagus plant, which has a special curative action on the kidneys. It gives them new life and strength. It helps them to do their work as it ought to be done. It cures their sickness. It cleans and renews the filter.

When the kidneys are well you will feel a great difference at once. Your complexion will clear and your whole body will get renewed life and freshness.

This is the effect of Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills on the sick kidneys of the re-vitalized kidneys on the impure blood.

With a course of Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills you will get new life. They will cure you when other medicines, which do not reach the real seat of disease, cannot help you.

Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills are for sale by all druggists, price 50c, per box, or will be sent prepaid to any address on receipt of price.

An interesting booklet, explaining about the kidneys and their power for good and evil, sent free on request. Address Hobb's Medicine Co., Chicago or San Francisco.

TALK OF THE TOWN!

AND EXPLANATION WHY

Amos H. VanHorn

LIMITED,

73 Market st., Near Plane Street,

are doing all the business. Our stock is the largest, prices are the lowest and terms the easiest in the city. Just give it a passing thought that you can get an antique oak bedroom suit, 8 pieces, for $15, $20, $25 and $30, including a woven wire bed spring and a mixed mattress. No house in the city offers such inducements.

And then to think again that you can get tapestry Brussels carpet for 50, 60, and 70 cents a yard, made and laid with paper, which is a saving of 15c per yard. Where is there a house in the city that will offer such bargains?

And then imagine and wonder how we can afford to give away a moquette rug or parlor table with a parlor suit for $20, $30, $40 or $50.

Some of our competitors say that our ads are too much sameness, and that this ad. is old. Well, we will admit it, but as long as it does the business and saves the people money we will continue to run it.
